

There are two newspapers in this city that I always read, the Washington Post which carried the article "The Eagle" and the Washington Evening Star which followed up the same day with the story about The Hawk. They are both most reliable and well thought of in this town as you know.

There is another newspaper that I get at the end of the week and usually read before I eat my supper because I consider it a good as either of the above, namely The Potomac Times. So I am sending in my subscription check.

The Washington Zoo has probably as complete a collection of domestic and foreign birds "on the hoof" as one can hope to find. The last time I was in the bird house I remember seeing in a case two Allen's humming bird eggs, the smallest of eggs and in contrast to them an African ostrich egg. In the same case was a mud nest about a foot high of some bird from Panama and one of a robin that hatched four eggs just outside the bird house. Also in the same case were four eggs (Murre) about the size of turkey eggs of a blue color of various hues showing variations in a single species. The markings ranged from a wide stripe to elongated streaks. Last to be seen in this small case was the foot of a hawk about six inches in length from the pale brown and white feathers that were showing from under the description card to the end of the claws with which the bird grips its prey.

Some one has told me that they are crossing a parrot, a wood pecker and a homing pigeon for the use of the army so that if the message attached to the leg is shot away, the bird will rap at the door and vocally give the message.

With best wishes to you and my friends in Marlinton, I am, Sincerely yours, Edwin D. Doniphan, 1463 Harvard, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Last Thursday Ernest Jackson was in from Williams River with three big fox pelts—two gray and a red. He has begun his fox hunting season at this time of the year. He got his big red at the Locust Knob on Days Mountain, and his two grays in the Laurel Creek bottoms.

I have not received a fur price list for the current season but I am told the prices on fur will run about with last year. The old rule was when wool brought good prices the fur prices kept step. Ernest said he had not been able to get a wild turkey yet. As near as he got to the turkeys was a lot of fresh scratching. He said there was a plenty of good beech mast in the Black Forest, and so game did not have to congregate in any particular place for food—there was plenty most any place in the beech woods.

This town is infested with skunks, and it is no bad idea to keep out of dark alleys late nights and early mornings. The other night a neighbor put on the spot light as he stopped to open his garage door. The light spotted on a big white house cat, crouched beside the street. The cat went away from that place, and in his stampede he ran smack dab over two pole cats. There was a gas attack. The house cat then continued for parts unknown and his not been seen since.

Talking about skunks I got a new angle on their food habits from M. M. Hensford. These varmints are attacking and eating his house cats. The other night, the family heard a cat fight, and then the old brown Tom hit the screen door with a looseness. Turning on the light and opening the door, it was seen the house cat was running from a couple of skunks. Later the old tabby cat was found dead, with her throat cut. In the nest was one dead kitten, and no sign of the other kittens. It was evident this was the work of skunks, and that they had eaten the little cats.

Bonde Beverage, of Dry Creek, tops them all off with a ground hog which dressed out thirty-two pounds of meat. This is by the scales and no guess may be so. He got it down in Greenbrier County on the Bright place, near Lewisburg, while visiting his son, James. A twenty pound ground hog is anybody's big one. Since then Bonde got a ground hog on his home place which was as black as his hat.

Girls—Yes, the grinnings are a keeper. Neighbor Ralph Kanner says that in a store he went to last night some of the grinnings kept him. They kept him for a few hours after the store.

The Story

Every mountaineer of West Virginia looks with pride upon the third star from the left in the fifth row from the left in the fifth row in our Star Spangled Banner and says—"This is my star." May she always shine just as brightly as all her sister stars in our National Banner.

Truly West Virginia is a child of war as it came into existence during the dark and bloody days of the war between the states.

Our state was originally a part of "Old Dominion" as Virginia is often called. It continued to be a part of the mother state for 137 years after the first settlement was made in the West Virginia territory. But on June 20, 1863 West Virginia became an independent state and the thirty-fifth star was added to the flag of the United States to represent West Virginia. It is the newest state east of the Mississippi river.

The formation of West Virginia from Virginia was the only change made in the map by the four long years of the Civil War. It was organized and admitted to the Union as a result of events of the war, though many years before the people of Virginia had asked for a separation and establishment of a new state. In 1773 a plan was set on foot to establish an English colony to be known as Vandallia.

There are many causes leading up to the separation of West Virginia from Virginia. Trade interests were separated due to difficult transportation over the mountains. The two sections had little in common—socially or politically. The formation of West Virginia was not caused entirely by the Civil War but the war did furnish the opportunity to make the separation effective.

At the outbreak of the Civil War the state of Virginia after holding a series of conventions finally decided to adopt the ordinance of secession, and join the Confederate states. However, delegates from thirty-nine counties west of the mountains in Virginia assembled and decided to remain loyal to the Union and the Federal government. This act known as the Restored Act was recognized by the President and Congress as the only lawful and proper government of the whole state of Virginia. Francis Pickens of Marion county, was the first governor of the Restored government. Other officers were elected and a government was set up in Wheeling. Thus two rival governments were set up in Virginia—one in Richmond as part of the Confederate states under Jefferson Davis and the other one in Wheeling as part of the United States under Abraham Lincoln.

Western Virginia was bordered territory and because of her geographic position and the divided sentiment of the people, there was laid a heavy toll upon the state. In many instances brothers, as well as fathers and sons, were arrayed against each other. One of the main issues involved at the time was the question of Negro slavery. The people of western Virginia, under the Restored Government were in favor of abolishing slavery while the eastern section opposed measures for its immediate abolition.

A convention was held in Wheeling, November 20, 1861 to form a constitution for the new state. This group expressed their views on the "one idea Negro policy that had cursed them all the days of their lives thus far." After changing the name of the proposed new state from Kanawha to West Virginia, the convention took up the question of slavery and boundary.

Finally the bill for the admission of the new state was passed by the Senate on July 14, by the House on July 20, 1863. This bill provided for the admission of West Virginia to the Union. A proclamation was issued by President Lincoln granting independent statehood effective June 20, 1863.

This was a gala day in Wheeling. A great celebration was held and Arthur I. Boreman became the first governor of the state of West Virginia. Governor Pierpont in a very inspiring address reviewed the history of the state and advised his hearers to guard their liberties and to ever keep West Virginia "free from all the shackles that shackle men." One of these shackles of course was the liquor traffic. How significant it was that our own state be admitted to do that from the very start.

That spirit has always played an important part in the lives of West Virginia pioneers and in order to try to keep us free from all the shackles that shackle men, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized and Miss Amanda Taylor served as its first president from 1863 to 1885. Since that time nine spiritually minded women have served as presidents to promote the cause of Temperance in our state. Mrs. Ernest Henson of Bluefield, now carries the torch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union for West Virginia, that will bring the light that will bring the light that will eventually free our future civilization from one of the shackles that bound the lives and heart of those God fearing pioneers of yesterday and is binding many of us today who are represented by the 35th Star on Old Glory's Flag.

A parachute landed on Sinking Creek near the residence of Lester R. Givens in Craig county, causing some consternation due no doubt to the jittery state the people are in the world over. The parachute landed in a tree and was easily retrieved. Attached to it was the information that it was shot into the air some 12,000 feet from Huntington, W. Va., with the request that the parachute be sent by the finder to the weather bureau at Washington and the box and information attached be returned to the address given to Huntington, W. Va. The parachute went up at 11 a. m. and came down at 1:45—2 hours and 45 minutes, an air line distance of 180 miles.—New Castle Record.

The "Recreation News" published by the employees of the Dupont plant at Waynesboro, Va. recently carried pictures of Miss Lucille Hicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Hicks, of Warm Springs, who is a welder in the maintenance shop. She is the first woman welder to be employed there. Miss Hicks is quoted as saying "she likes that type of work better than anything else she's ever done. And she tried several occupations: waitress parlor maid, grocery clerk, and was a typist at The Homestead when the Japanese nationals were interned there. She is a graduate of Valley high school. Although having been at the Waynesboro plant only a few weeks she is already turning out productive work.—Bath County Enterprise.

Fire

The fire in October destroyed the four-story brick building which has been in the hands of the District. The fire was reported by a woman in the county which has not yet been reported. The fire was extinguished promptly and caused no serious damage. The rain which occurred around 8 p. m. on Saturday, October 21, helped suppression forces bring two of these fires under final control.

Investigations made at the time the fire was being fought indicated that it was caused by a railroad locomotive. Further investigations are being made. It is hoped will fix responsibility and cause those guilty to be properly punished.

The fire danger period is evidently just starting and everyone is again urged to exercise every precaution possible in preventing fires. Please remember when in the forest that matches, cigarettes, burning pipe, camp fires, camp fires, all start fires.

Our country is at war and everybody should be doing a worth while job of some sort in helping win it. The individual job they are doing may be producing food or munitions for our armed forces or simply providing for themselves and their own families. Either of which is a necessary job. The individual who by careless act or intent creates other hazards of destruction that impedes the most effective use of materials and man-power, is to the extent of such interference and destruction committing acts that are sabotaging the war effort.

Timber products are needed by our armed forces in the manufacture of various war needs, and by our people in providing homes and home needs. Fires are an utter waste of timber products. In addition they divert men's time from doing their bit toward winning the war, to battling them and preventing their spread and destruction of our resources. They are unnecessary, since all forest fires can be prevented, and with much less outlay of time and money prevention measures than will take in bringing them under control.

During each hunting season reports are made up of fires being set in the woods to drive out game in which they have taken refuge. This is poor sportsmanship and not caused by sportsmen, for sportsmen will not cause forest fires nor will they be guilty of game-bog tactics. People are needed every where this season that are good sportsmen and loyal American citizens. Due to the rationing of tires and gasoline difficulty is being experienced in notifying Forest Protectors of fires in the area they protect. If you discover a fire in the woods, put it in if you can. If you can't then report it promptly to the nearest protector. A list of such protectors will be found in each postoffice, with protectors named for each community.

Dear Mom, I just got your letter and I was so glad to hear from you. I have been thinking about you a lot lately. I hope you are all well and happy. I am doing well here. I have been working hard and trying to do my best. I hope you will be proud of me. I love you all very much. Write soon. Your son, [Name]

I have never answered before but I will get around to it some day. Tell him to take care of everything. Tell Jerry that the dog has not got so fat. I hope he is happy. I love you all. Write soon. Your son, [Name]

We are pretty busy these days. I think I will make a pretty good chef some of these days if I keep at it. I really like to cook. I have something good to cook. I got Virginia's card and letter and answered it about a week ago. I had lost her address was the reason I had not written to her before.

Well Mom, there is not much I can write about. Everything is a secret over here. Tell Dad and Elmer that I am still thinking of them and I sure miss them but hope to be back soon. Tell everyone hello and write soon.

Lots of love, Ernest.

The following letter was received by a guest at The Homestead from a friend, a Marine Captain, who is fighting the Japs in the Solomons. There is a morale therein for everyone who grumbles over the sacrifices of sugar, and coffee rations, and lack of rubber for joy-riding—Editor Norman D. Camper in the Bath County Enterprise.

September 4, 1942.
Yesterday we received mail for the first time since leaving home. It was marvelous to get your letter, and you would have laughed to see me read it while sitting outside my dugout in the midst of a big coconut grove totally demolished by fire and shell-fire. Out mail has gone from here but I want to tell you that I am on the Island of Guadalcanal in the Solomon group. I landed here on the 17th of August and took part in the attack when we captured these islands from the Japs. Well, we are still here after a fierce fight where no quarter was asked or given. The Japs are desperate, treacherous fighters and have all kinds of courage and never surrender. I wish I were allowed to tell you all that has been going on here. The net result is that we have absolutely annihilated them and are awaiting a counter-attack which they are sure to make. The people at home must see to it that we are given the support to carry out what we have successfully started, regardless of their sacrifices. I have already lost several good friends in the first few days of the fighting. Out here the individual means nothing—they are killed, buried and forgotten and we continue with this business of organized killing and trying to keep the other fellow from killing us.

It seems strange to hear about life in Virginia Beach, all that is so far from us and our lives; our SHARPE, Mrs. M. L.—The school of the Bath County Enterprise is being conducted by W. W. Sharp, state superintendent of schools, following receipt of various regulations governing them, from the Office of Public Administration for West Virginia.

Following the bulletin to county school heads, Dr. Trent pointed out that local rationing boards must pass on the eligibility for the teacher applicant and quoted this ruling of the OPM:

"If a rural teacher signs a contract with the local board of education agreeing to carry other teachers and pupils to the from school, said teacher may be eligible for stamps or to purchase new tires if she meets the other eligibility requirements."

"The other requirements" refer to the teacher's inability to obtain lodging near the school where she teaches, and finds no regular (bus or train) transportation available, and would otherwise be forced to stop teaching.

This ruling, said Dr. Trent, "will relieve a great difficulty, for we have found many instances where teachers share one car and that car is their only means of reaching their schools. So if a tire goes bad, the whole group of teachers are unable to reach school, and thus complicated teacher problems, and we now have a severe shortage because of inductions into the armed forces, become more complicated."

Oh, yes, we took a picture group of our company yesterday. It is a nice picture so I am sending one of them home and I hope you will like it.

I only wish I had gotten a furlough before I go across—but it looks hopeless now, so I will just make the best of it. We are going over and clean up on those Japs and then we will be ready to come home again.

I guess by the time I hear from home again Claude and Delbert will be in the Army, but I hope they don't have to go until after Christmas. Hard telling where I will be then; maybe over in Berlin eating dinner with Hitler, only he will be eating off the floor. (ha ha) No I really don't know where we are going. Maybe to help make up that "Second Front." One good thing they say we are the first outfit they have in the Army—just like ours. So I hope we will be good as they say we are, and I think that we will do fine work.

Well I must close now. So tell everyone hello for me.

Lots of love, Winton.

September 5th.
This morning I will try to finish this letter and get it in the mail. However, I have no idea when it will leave the Island. As usual last night our sleep was interrupted by Tojo throwing in some heavy shells. If we ever get this war finished and I get back I intend to be the most settled down old duffer imaginable. I want to have peace and quiet and never hear the word "war" mentioned again. But first of all we must get on with this business of beating the Japs.

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Carpenter, of Millpoint, from their son, Pfc. Clyde W. Carpenter, who has been transferred from Orlando, Florida, to Trenton, New Jersey.

October 31, 1942.
Just a few lines to let you all hear from me. I am O. K. and hope you are too. Well, I don't know much to write so this letter won't be very long. Of course I do know a lot, but you know how it is I just can't tell it. So that's how it goes.

How is everything going there at home? We have not been doing much, only waiting to be called.

Country's Mail Will Be Heaviest in History, Due To Business and War

The Post Office Department now is starting the most gigantic task in its history—the movement of a deluge of Christmas parcels, cards and letters while maintaining the regular flow of millions of pieces of mail daily to and from our armed forces all over the world.

Indications are that the volume of Christmas mail will be the largest on record. Already in September, latest month for which figures are available, retail sales had reached a level second only to the record month of December, 1941, according to the Department of Commerce. And sales are rising. Such heavy purchases always presage heavy mailings.

If thousands of our soldiers, sailors, marines and civilian friends are not to be disappointed at Christmas time, the public must cooperate by mailing earlier than ever before and by addressing letters and parcels properly. The best efforts of the Post Office Department alone cannot be enough, in view of wartime difficulties faced by the postal system. The public must assist.

About 25,000 experienced postal workers already have been taken by the war services. Arrangements are under way to add thousands of temporary personnel to postal staffs, but this manpower is hard to find and is inexperienced. Facilities of railroads and air lines are heavily taxed by huge movements of war materials and personnel. Extra trucks are almost impossible to obtain. Winter weather, hampering transportation, is beginning.

The deadline already is past for mailing gifts to Army and Navy personnel overseas with assurance that the parcels will arrive by Christmas.

The Post Office Department is making strenuous efforts to avoid such a terrific jam as it faced in 1918 under similar conditions, during the first World War. It can succeed in those efforts—if the public will cooperate by mailing early.

Scrap Money for Kit Bags

The American Red Cross kit bag fund took a decided spurt this week when the proceeds of the collection and sale of scrap gathered by the pupils and teachers of Marlinton high school was added to the fund. The sum was $85.00.

Correction—Mrs. Sam Jennings of Frank, 50c.

Marlinton—Mrs. M. E. Acord $1. Mrs. Jack Moore $1, Martha Had-dock, 4 cents.

Twenty million Christmas seals are being made ready by tuberculo-sis associations throughout West Vir-ginia to send to the people of the state when the 36th annual Christ-mas Seal sale commences on Novem-ber 23rd, Dr. Leo L. Mynes, pres-ident of the West Virginia Tubercu-losis and Health Association, an-nounced from state headquarters.

More than 85,000 letters, containing these seals, will be mailed to citizens by the 66 local associations and com-mittees serving the territory of West Virginia, he stated.

"These Christmas Seals," he said, "through their purchase by the peo-ple of the state make possible a year-round program of health con-trol. They finance an make pos-sible a field nursing service, dis-posable clinics, tuberculin testing and X-ray surveys, adult and child edu-cation and a myriad of other activi-ties directed at tuberculosis eradication."

Dr. Mynes stated that tuberculo-sis has always made increases under wartime conditions. "A campaign to control tuberculosis is an essential part of the effort to maintain the vital health of the people and to prevent unnecessary deaths in the disease which might occur," he said, "and further, gains made now against the disease will be projected into the future and bring nearer the day when tuberculosis will cease to be a major problem. Wartime rises in tuberculosis have already been re-ported in other warlike countries and many of our larger industrial cities have also discovered the dis-ease to be on the increase. Every step possible," Dr. Mynes continued, "must be taken to stop this saboteur of man-power and prime killer of youth."

A preliminary study by states made by the National Tuberculosis Association shows that West Virginia had a provisional death rate of 42.8 per 100,000 population for 1941. There were 823 tuberculosis deaths reported for the period. This places West Virginia 26th among states as regards tuberculosis deaths.

Dale Nichols, one of the outstand-ing younger American artists, de-signed the 1942 Christmas Seal. The seal is typical Nichols' work featur-ing a red barn which has been the center of design for many of his paintings. Besides the barn there is a farm house in the background of a snowy country scene. In the fore-ground is a drift-lined road on which is shown an old-fashioned well-front sleigh, drawn by two horses.

"All over the state workers have been busy preparing for the com-ing sale," Dr. Mynes continued, "and they have set themselves a state goal of $70,000 dollars, the amount felt necessary to continue the program under more difficult and exacting circumstances than ever existed before. That the program be continued is to be the best interest of the people in their quest for national health and their struggle for victory against the Axis."

BANKS AND THE WAR

One Supply Line the Axis Can't Cut

All the submarines in the German navy can't cut this supply line, even though they would very much like to. Credit, we're talking about. Direct lines of bank credit extend from America's banks into tens of thousands of business concerns engaged in war production. This credit helps production along. It is vital to our war effort. You will find a plentiful supply of it at this bank, ready for use. What are your needs?

WE ARE FIGHTING FOR THE RIGHT TO BE THANKFUL

For several hours and years we have taken our right to be thankful for granted. Now even that is challenged.
Cavetown nations have their eyes on the blessings of which we have been so proud. Now we must fight, and win, or never again have reason to give thanks. So this Thanksgiving Day, while we are expressing our gratitude for the things we still have—including our freedom—let's pledge our every effort to preserve those things for ourselves and future generations of Americans.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thus publicly express my appreciation to one and all who were so helpful and kind during the illness and after the death of my father, J. H. Burns.
Arnold Burns who spent the week end at Elkins City, West Virginia, with his son and daughter.

We had our darling little son, who is not dead, who is just away on that morning.
Light and fair.
The white thrush of the forest will be there.
When the last great trumpet sounds
And the dead in Christ shall rise,
She will be carried away on angel wings.
To her home up in the skies.
By her aunt, Mrs. Eda Olin-son, Durbin, W. Va.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Elsie S. Fin-gould, who passed away on December 13, 1941:
One year it has been of sorrow
Since you left us all alone
But we know there's a brighter tomorrow
In that beautiful heavenly home
More and more each day we miss you Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.
Missing your kind and smiling hands
Your fond and earnest care
Our home is lonely without you
We miss you everywhere
Deep in our hearts, has a picture
Worth more than silver or gold
It's a picture of you dear Elsie Your memory will never grow old Surrounded by friends we are lonesome
In the midst of joy we are blue
With a smile on our face we've a heartache
Still longing dear Elsie for you
You are gone but not forgotten
Never will your memory fade
As each day my thoughts do wander
To the grave where you were laid

50 CENTS A YEAR IN ADVANCE

LETTERS

For many years E. M. Steele, of Hillsboro, regularly traveled Pocahontas County, making the trip as regional representative of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company. Last year he was put off the road by bad luck in an automobile wreck. While the following letter is somewhat personal, there is many a Times reader who will be keenly interested.

Dear Mr. Price—Reasons for writing you continue to accumulate, and if I don't get at it, it will be too big a job.

First reason is to congratulate you on the Doctor's degree conferred on you by the University many months ago. I have two daughters who join me in saying it was an honor well deserved.

Second reason, the "hottest" thing I have ever seen from your pen, the indirect reply to Neely when he tried to put pressure on you last summer. At that time I was sure you were laying the ground work to lead this large independent vote of your county against Neely in case he got the nomination. It was a keen disappointment to me to see and read before the November election your advice to the Democrats to support Neely.

The same process of reasoning which led you to say "no" on the amendment (in this I think you were quite right) should have led to an emphatic "no" on Neely.

The third reason for writing is to tell you how much I enjoyed your editorial telling the why of the defeat. What was done to Neely abundantly proved your point.

I had not thought it possible to defeat Neely, but Mr. James R. Pence (I think you know him; years ago he was in the legislature from Manro County) agreed we would do our best to let him know that Greenbrier and Monroe Counties had no use for him. To our astonishment we found by far and large the greater number of people in those counties were already in complete accord with us, and they too were earnestly opposing his election. The result of the vote was no surprise to us.

I do hope that Mr. Revercomb will feel keenly the obligation we have placed upon him to go to Washington and be a statesman, and not another Neely.

I very much miss my trips to Pocahontas County, and I long to get up for the deer hunt. My trip to a hospital in Richmond did me lots of good, but I am not sure I have the strength to undertake a deer hunt.

My younger boy was the last to enter the Army and the first to go over seas, Australia. R. M., Jr., is a Staff Sergeant in the Marine Corps. The youngest stepson, Pat Adair, is a fighter pilot in Egypt; his brothers, Captain Tom and R. W., are anxious to follow him. "Lt. Jack Earle, son-in-law, is in an engineering corps. I have much to keep my mind on the war and I am sure no one reads the more favorable news that is coming out now with more Thomas A. Steele, Jr., son of E. M. Steele, a resident of Hillsboro, and a paper hanger and painter by trade, died early Friday morning, Nov. 29, 1943, at his home at 1001 N. 10th St., Hillsboro, Virginia. He had been ill for about six months. He is survived by the widow, who was Elizabeth Belcher of Wataga. His first wife, who died 12 years ago, was Miss Anna L. Vaughan. Also surviving is his son, Thomas C. Steele, of Hillsboro, and a sister, Mrs. Don Talbot of Tallcott. The remains were brought to the Kramer Funeral Home here where services were conducted by Rev. Ken Barnett, pastor of the Christian Church, and burial was in Riverview cemetery Sunday. —West Virginia News.

sagerness than I do.

With kind personal regards, I am, sincerely yours,
R. M. Steele.
Alderson, W. Va.

Dear Mr. Price:

I received a letter from mother the other day and she told me about being honored at Sparrow Point, Maryland, last Sunday, and I am quoting her as follows: "Mother said they had these 'Flag Raising' celebrations read often there in honor of the boys from Sparrow Point who are in the service, and remarked how nice it would be if we could do the same in Pocahontas county."

At a Flag Raising celebration at Sparrow Point, Maryland, on Sunday, November 14, in honor of the boys in service from the city, Mrs. C. B. LaRue, formerly of Hillsboro, was honored by being presented with a gold pin, with "Son in Service" engraved on it and also a flag with the star on it with her son's name below the star. This presentation was in honor of Mrs. LaRue's son, known as "Bud" LaRue, who is an aviator in the Army Air Corps at Victoria Field, Vermont, USA.

Mr. Price:

They never have anything but the names of the patients in the hospital. You never let me off that easy, for you said how the good people of the county would appreciate a word of encouragement about their friends who were being treated in the hospital. It is very gratifying to me to know that one of our nurses is in charge of the hospital—one who is conscientious, loyal and a fine nurse.

I enjoy reading the letters from the boys in the service. It looks just now as if our boys may not have to stay so long, but will be coming home singing "Victory." God grant it may be soon.

I was indeed sorry to read of the death of Mr. Sydnor in your paper. He was a loyal friend of mine.

My personal regards to my friends in Pocahontas county and your family. Sincerely, Mrs. N. S. Woodyard,
708 Central Avenue,
Barboursville, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Arbaugh, of Dunmore, have received the following telegram from the Assistant General in Washington, announcing the slight wounding of their son, Sergeant Pauling Arbaugh, of the Air Corps, in the South West Pacific Area:

"Deeply regret to inform you that your son, Sergeant Pauling A. Arbaugh, Air Corps, was slightly wounded in action in the South West Pacific Area on November 3. Reports will be forwarded as received."

Some months ago this paper published his poem, "Arise America."

November 24, 1943.
Dear Mr. Price:

Receive the paper every week and it sure is welcome, just about brings things up to date from that part of the world. While I am about it might just say: Hello Folks.

When I say "Folks," I take into consideration the ones that made home the finest place I ever knew. The friends—who are the parents of those in the armed forces scattered about the globe.

It is not long until Thanksgiving. Outside there are no falling bills or snow covered peaks of fields, as I have enjoyed in previous years. The familiar voices are not heard as dinner is served. It's nearing Thanksgiving though—perhaps the one that causes us to realize the true significance: a time when man can pause and give due thanks for all the things dear to him—his friends and home; but we are a part of this Thanksgiving. We now see a fuller meaning of the day: Freedom—the right to live and grow up the only purposeful way, as true Americans. It's enough all this—given month necessary. I hope next year we shall be in town again. If not then, surely the next.

You wonder that I feel so certain. That's just us, all of us wearing the blue of the Navy and Marines, full of determination and perseverance to win, the odds be damned. It is a big job but it must be done. Our ancestors weathered the really trying years to pattern this way of life. We shall not fail that heritage; but until we are all together again; letters, papers, thoughts, and good wishes will help us through. In that connection I can say that the Pocahontas Times is doing a part. The boys here get as much enjoyment reading the Field Notes and Letters from our Army and Navy Boys, columns as I do, even though they are from Georgia, Texas, New York and other states aside from West Virginia.

Well a few minutes ago while thumbing laconically back and forth through the Times, I noticed something that looked quite unusual in these times of emergency, especially here. A part page advertisement of civilian clothing and the such. That, in these hectic days of the almost universal uniform, is as sad as is the ad of a tire company. With due respect to all.

The weather here is tops, probably the opposite of what you are having back in the hills there. Speaking of the hills, one of the students here talked himself into a furlough. Living in New Jersey as he did a plane was his fastest means for a long stay at home. Arriving back some 15 days later he told me he flew over West Virginia and in his words, "It was the most beautiful sight I have ever witnessed, Autumn in West Virginia."

Life in Texas is not dull by any means, we have excitement as well as plenty of work. The wild life also carries the "wallop," and to demonstrate while walking the night watch around the building last week, attended, Mrs. McManis, came upon a nocturnal creature, writhing and crawling in his path. Wondering what species of materialized nightmare blocked his way he advanced all his weapons and advanced the being. But still a dim light of the words customary to medieval knights.

In the heat of his flash light he saw that he had killed a 2 1/2 foot snake, the last he had ever seen. He has cut off the end of the tail in a corner of his back compartment with some whetstone.

The killing and skin handling would be a good lesson for ambitious West Virginia sportsman. Thousands of snakes and lizards are here every day to tempt the sportsman's eye and it is said that over scores of the snakes are made to guard the Rio Grande and Mexican border. (It is a little bit of a Navy story, but gossip, the members don't mind either.)

Enjoyed a ball game down the Mexico way; the home was closed to everyone but was in uniform are now permitted to cross upon presenting proper identification cards to the home patrol.

Well it is indeed good. Even in the Navy.

Sincerely yours,
Stanley Fertig,
Somewhere in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Buzard have received a letter from their son, Edward, who is serving in the Navy. This is the first letter they have had from him in three months. He particularly asked about the Mountain High School. His address is T. Edward Buzard, P. O. Box 10, Care of Postmaster, New York City, New York. He would appreciate letters.

Grady Moore, Clerk of the Circuit Court, is home from the Army on furlough. He volunteered five months ago.

Walter Jett, Clerk of the Circuit Court, is under orders to report to December 1, 1943.

He has been granted leave of absence by the Extension Department.

Warren Johnson, of the United States Navy, returned to Washington, D. C., on Saturday, after spending five days furlough here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Odie Johnson.

Pfc. Andy E. Heffner, of the Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, arrived last Wednesday, to spend his furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Heffner, of Marlinton. Mr. and Mrs. Heffner have two other sons in the service.

Corporal Charles E. Landis, has returned to Camp Gordon, Georgia, after a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Landis, of Huntersville. He also visited his brothers at Covington, Virginia.

Loris Duncan, of the U. S. N. T. S. Great Lakes, Illinois, spent the weekend with his father, J. P. Duncan.

Gall B. Diley, Company C, 560th Sig. A. W. Bn. (Sp.), Fighter Command School, Orlando, Florida, is spending his furlough here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Diley and other relatives and friends.

VICTORY BOND DRIVE

This all out war requires men, material and money. The asking for money for support of our armed forces during the month of December is nine billions of dollars. Our West Virginia share in the loan to our government is forty-five millions of dollars. Men high in the financial world assisted by an army of nearly 10,000 West Virginia volunteers will put over this greatest of all money raising efforts. Victory Fund Committee in every county of the United States are united in the drive to make available this sum as a loan to the nation's treasury department. Here in Pocahontas we work under the leadership of Bankers J. A. Sydnor and A. H. McFerrin. Our State leader is John Q. Dickinson of Charleston.

"The war wheels turn swiftly now. Our guns boom over the Mediterranean; in the South seas, in Russia, in the hills of China, across the English channel and on every ocean where our convoys pass. Behind them must stand our billions."

As becomes a patriotic people, our young men are in the armed service by the millions, engaged in preserving the liberties guaranteed us to this time by the spirit of our forefathers back in the days of 1776. While they risk their lives and all under the best of circumstances, we put these our champions in double jeopardy by lacking on the home front through with holding our money from a perfectly safe loan and gilt edge investment. Back our boys with your money.

State Winner

State winner in the 1943 national 4-H clothing achievement contest is Anna Mae Friel, 20, of Greenbank, Pocahontas county, West Virginia. It was announced by State Club Leader C. H. Hartley. As a reward she receives an all-expense trip to the 21st National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

ed by the educational bureau of Spool Cotton Company, which also appropriates $900 college scholarships for national winners. Delegates to the Congress will discuss further 4-H contributions to the war effort. The girl secured 34 garments and other articles and won $15 in cash prizes. This past summer she helped her mother make clothes for the Red Cross, and served as assistant club leader. The contest stressed mending and making over old garments, to conserve clothing materials for war needs.

REVIVAL MEETING

An old fashioned Revival meeting will begin at the Church of the Nazarene, in Marlinton, on Tuesday, December 8th and continue through to December 10th, inclusive.

Rev. H. B. Huffman, from Ebensburg, Pennsylvania, will be the special speaker each evening at 7:30. The public is cordially invited to attend these special services. Come and bring your family and friends and enjoy the special singing and good preaching.

Sin brings heart ache and destruction. Revival brings peace and happiness to the human soul. We will be looking for you at the revival meeting at the Church of the Nazarene.

Up at Morgantown, too, I was shown a copy of the London, England, Times, of the date of October 8. The item in it attracting my special interest was the illustrated piece on scores as proper feed for hogs. One community had gathered 80 tons of the nuts for pig feed. Pictures of fat pigs were printed as proof of good results. Most fatness hogs are no new item in the north.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

ABILITY to do an extra job takes an extra something. Coca-Cola has it. There are many things for thirst but Coca-Cola does far more than just quench thirst. It brings you a unique taste you enjoy... and unique refreshment you feel.

In the making of Coca-Cola, there's a finished art that comes from a lifetime of practice. It takes the skill of 57 years of "know how" in blending certain special flavor-essences with all the other ingredients to produce an original unique taste all its own... a taste you never tire of. It never cloy.

You and your thirst could ask for nothing more than ice-cold Coca-Cola. Because ice-cold Coca-Cola is the real thing in refreshment. It's all refreshment... pure refreshment.

Wartime limits the supply of Coca-Cola. These times when you cannot get it, remember: Coke, being first choice, sells out first. Ask for it each time. No matter how short the supply, the quality of Coca-Cola carries on.

"I'LL STAY," Says Gunner Sergeant, and Gives Life to Save 6 as Zero-Beset Bomber Falls

By GEORGE WELLES

Foreign Correspondent of the Washington Star and Chicago Daily News

(Copyright, 1943, by Chicago Daily News, Inc., and published by special permission)

Somewhere in Australia, December 9.—"I'll stay up here in case the Japs come at us again."

Those are the words which saved six men's lives but cost the life of the one who stayed up. They were the last words of Sergeant Glenn Campbell and his valiant crew members in a big American B-26 Marauder bomber falling into the sea, stricken in a raid over Dilli, in Portuguese Timor.

Sergeant Campbell's last words buzzed in the interphone of his pilot, Captain Charlie Hitchcock, of Winchester, Indiana. The plane was burning. It had been burning since they left Dilli, when it was attacked by four Zeros.

Sergeant Campbell, who came from Franklin, Pennsylvania, was the top or turret gunner. When the four Zeros came on from straight ahead, making a simultaneous attack to scatter the bombers fire, Sergeant Campbell had sent a raking fire from his machine gun which dissolved two Zeros into balls of flame. But before his fire was opened on the Zeros, anti-aircraft had put four hits in his right engine.

The engine turned into a stream of smoke. The flames crept along a wing. The engine was flooded with fire extinguisher liquid, but still the flames ate their way around the nose of the bomber.

In the cockpit, Navigator Lieutenant Albert J. Lillington, of Mobile, Alabama, fought the fire with a hand extinguisher. Still pursued by the Zeros, the plane was now out over Arafura Sea, limping along, its short, high-speed wings barely held aloft by a single engine.

Captain Hitchcock, unable to see the instrument panel in the thick black smoke, twice opened the window and the flames suddenly licked up again. The controls were almost too hot to touch. The Zeros were still behind, watching for their chance. The other members of the crew, Sergeant Pershing A. Arbogast, of Dunmore, West Virginia; Sergeant Joseph G. Schank, of Throop, Pennsylvania, and Sergeant Samuel Miller, of Prout Run, Pennsylvania, got out the rubber rafts and prepared for trouble.

The bomber sank lower and lower. The single remaining engine was whacking, groaning and coughing. Captain Hitchcock gave orders for all to prepare to escape. From where he stood, Turret Gunner Campbell could see two big Zero holes in the left wing and knew that landing would be hard. Sixty seconds is eternity for such a plane to stay afloat after landing, but the Zeros were still behind. Their fire continued.

A cord of Rear-Gunner Schank's interphone was cut by bullets right under his throat. Then came Sergeant Campbell's words which no member of his squadron will ever forget again:

"I'll stay up here in case the Japs come at us again."

When the terrible moment came, when the plane hit the water and cracked open, the others got out but not Glenn Campbell. All were dazed and some were bleeding. Yet before the plane sank, Captain Hitchcock in what was an equal risk of being drowned with the plane, managed to dive underneath the fast sinking fuselage, fight his way through the doors into the turret and pull Sergeant Campbell's unconscious body down through this diving bell filled with water.

When they got him on a raft, they turned him over and saw that the man who had once saved their lives from two Zeros, which he had shot down himself, and then saved them again from the other two, was dead.

And when they looked in the sky, it was clear blue and the other two Zeros, apparently scared of not having sufficient fuel to return to Timor, had departed.

Counting bomber noses and finding them missing, another B-26, commanded by Lieutenant Patterson, of Richmond, Virginia, turned back and dropped them more rafts. For 17 hours they floated—all night long with their Australian co-pilot, not the least courageous among their saddened party. And the next morning when a warship came to pick them up, all were present except Glen Campbell, who had quite simply given his life for them.

Elden E. Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Russell Campbell of Dunmore, who will receive a degree of B. S. in mechanical engineering from Tri-State College in June, is among those students who will be listed in the 1943-44 issue of Who is Who among students in American Colleges and Universities. The book will be released in February. This publication is published through the cooperation of over 600 universities and colleges. It is the only means of national recognition for graduates which is devoid of politics, fees and dues.

Dead Of Trade

The December meeting of the Pocahontas County Board of Trade was Ladies' Night, and the attendance was large. The fine supper was served by the ladies of the Methodist church. The nice little pie was 25 rim pies; my individual taste for heavy duty 12 gauge ones. However, I made out very well with a double portion.

This time speeches were barred and the program was musical. Among the artists who lifted our souls were Mrs. Frank Johnson, Mrs. Aubrey Ferguson, Mrs. Hobart Childs, Miss Edith May, Sammy Brill and the Marlinton Quartet. Mrs. Ferguson put the "Santy's Helper" stunt most uproariously. My little remembrance was the "Four Little Foxes" book. What I really wanted was the "Three Bears." I am no fox man, I am a bear hunter. A prominent visitor Hon. Pack Marshall, of the County of Jefferson.

Under the leadership of Dr. C. S. Kramer as president, the Board has had a good, useful year.

A surprise party was given to Ralph Hannah at his home last Saturday before he left for service in the Army. Those present were Otis Waugh, Morgantown; Saloma Everly, Mount Morris, Pa.; Virginia Whistlerman, Edward Briles, Carl Campbell, Millicent Hannah, Washington, D. C.; Edythe Waugh, Board; Sue, Statt Saline, Jewelle Lee Hannah; Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hannah, Mrs. M. J. Hannah, Myrtle Hannah and Gladys Geiger, Marlinton.

Mrs. Herman Menefee spent a few days last week with her son who is ill at the home of Mrs. Ira Hannah.

Millicent Hannah returned to Washington Saturday, after a week's visit with her parents and brother.

Oris Buchanan

Oris Buchanan, aged 58 years, a blacksmith and a native of Pocahontas county, died on Thursday, November 26, 1941, at the home of a brother, Willard Buchanan, at Clifftop, Fayette county. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Virginia Buchanan and their two daughters, of Minnehaha Springs, two sons, Carl Buchanan, of Stanton, Virginia, and Mason Buchanan, of the United States Army; another brother, Robert Buchanan, of Rainelle, and two sisters, Mrs. Dicie Gaylor, of Millpoint, and Mrs. Betty Davis, of Jacksonville, Florida. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon, at the home of George Wade in Pocahontas county with burial in the Wade cemetery.—West Virginia News.

THE MOST IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT EVER MADE BY THE U. S. TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The 9 Billion Dollar Victory Loan Drive Is On!

This week the United States Government begins the task of borrowing nine billion dollars from accumulated savings and idle funds in the next several weeks as an essential part of winning the war more quickly and more completely.

During these critical weeks you probably will be visited by a representative of one of the securities firms or banks which are contributing their time and effort—without compensation or any kind—to the Victory Fund Committee. He will explain to you, for instance, the benefits that you can obtain from the new Victory 2½'s—available for the first time. Welcome him as a war worker when he calls. If you ask him, ask your banker or securities dealer for full particulars. There is no limit to the amount that you can purchase.

Today many American families are torn apart. Millions have left their homes or their jobs; thousands have given their lives and many more are prepared to do so.

But the government, your government, is not asking you to give anything to this Nine Billion Dollar Drive. It is asking you to lend it all of the money you can possibly invest in what is the safest investment in the world—at a good rate of interest.

When the Victory Fund representative calls, please remember that it is in your own interest, as well as that of your country, to listen to him—and to invest.

BUY THESE VICTORY 2½'S NOW

Dear Brother Price:

Since I talked with you in your office more than two years ago, I have undergone a serious operation in the University Hospital, where I was on the brink of the grave; but by the healing hand of the Heavenly Father and the tender care of my good nurses, the little spark of life which remained in my frail body was fanned back to a live coal, and now I enjoy life again for which I give thanks.

I am not able to do any manual labor, but I spend my time reading God's word and reading the newspapers, listening to the radio, and solving an occasional crossword puzzle; then I recount some of the experiences of my past life, many of the incidents occurred in Pocahontas county. I have traveled over the greater part of the county and some parts of all the adjoining county DeWitt and Anthony's Creek, Burr Valley, Hillsboro, Stamping Creek, three branches of Williams, Turkey and Tea Creek, Big and Little, Baraca Shoals, "Hell for Satan," Gauley, Cranberry, Elk, and Cherry to Richwood and Curran and Camden and Greenbrier from Seebert to Durbin, before the railroad of Cass were built, and from Barlow to the Upper Sink, and Gandy and Lower Sink to Parsons and on to Davis and Bayard to Piedmont. I have stopped with the rich and the poor, and as far as I remember, I was never refused a meal to eat nor a bed to sleep in when we were able to reach a settlement, although it required sacrifice and inconvenience to feed and care for five or six hungry men after a hard day's work at surveying. We depended on one or two men to carry the food in a two wheel bag, to meet us at certain places on the line of survey, and if they failed to make contact, we did as our soldier boys are doing now, we waited until arrival, but on the whole it was a great life.

I met many good and true friends, most of whom have gone on. In Marlinton I used to stop with Grandma Malonghlin, where

BANKS AND THE WAR

INFLATION

INFLATION is a great destroyer of savings, a vendor of values, an enemy to industry and enterprise. America must beat inflation; the price of failure is too grim to contemplate. This bank urges action, not words. Government should enforce rigid wage and price controls everywhere. Citizens should spend less, save heartily, buy War Bonds, pay taxes to cover losses. The price of protecting our liberty will be high, but no price could be too high.

THURSDAY DECEMBER 17, 1942

I see in the papers and hear over the radio that the consumption of hard liquor will show an increase in these United States to about a gallon and a quart a head in the year of grace, 1943. If that be so, somebody has done drunk my five quarts, and no doubt it was hard on him. I feel for the brother, but I cannot reach him to take off his shoulders my part of this added burden of five quarts of sin. After all, it would have kept, and he did not have to drink the extra bits to save it. A reason advanced for the increased consumption of liquor is the increased income, the unsettling of war times and the general coarseness of humanity in general.

I read in the papers and hear over the radio, they are not making hard liquor now. The stills are turning out industrial alcohol, to be used in the manufacture of munitions, rubber and other war supplies. Again, they do not have to make more liquor—they five or six years of supply barrelled away.

I read in the papers and hear over the radio that the Commonwealth of North Carolina has rationed liquor in dispensary, counties to one pint of hard liquor per week. Under local option possibly three fourths of the counties of the old North State do not have state liquor stores.

Over the grapevine I have heard intimation there will be introduced in our legislature, as a war measure, a bill to ration the sale of hard liquor in West Virginia liquor stores. This appeared all right by me as a proper gesture. I try to keep informed on many subjects as possible. I knew in a general way the Canada Province of Ontario has had for years the rationing of the sale of liquor in their provincial dispensaries. They work it with a system of rationing books of permits, somewhat like the rationing of gasoline and gasoline.

I read in the papers and hear over the radio that the Commonwealth of Ontario has had for years the rationing of the sale of liquor in their provincial dispensaries. They work it with a system of rationing books of permits, somewhat like the rationing of gasoline and gasoline.

Any way, I asked the Women's Christian Temperance Union for information as to how liquor rationing worked out in Ontario and our own States which have the system. The gist of the polite reply seems to be there is no good way to handle liquor other than for the individual to leave it strictly alone. I print here with the informative letter:

"The liquor law adopted in Ontario in 1927 provided for the sale of permits to purchase liquor by persons 21 years of age who have resided in the province for at least one month, and, under certain restrictions, to non-residents.

"In actual working out, however, these permits facilitate rather than hinder the getting of liquor. Anyone twenty-one years of age, male or female, rich or poor, black or white, native or foreign, resident or visitor, may obtain a permit upon payment of $3.00. The record shows that for the year ending October 31, 1941, there were issued 320,446 resident and 53,890 temporary permits, approximately two for every five homes in the province.

"Investigation of the working of the law showed that it was a common thing for bootleggers to have permits in the names of a dozen different persons, real or imaginary. A bootlegger arrived on the Niagara border had twelve permits in his possession, upon all of which he had been purchasing liquor. In the case of a bootlegger at a place called Chappan, thirteen convictions were registered against him and seven permit holders had their permits cancelled.

"The whole plan of permits was shown to be farcical in its working as is detailed at length in 'Liquor Control in Canada' by Ben H. Spence, Toronto.

"Permits are no longer required for the purchase of wine or beer. Single purchase permits are being replaced by the original permit system under which a complete record was kept of each person's purchases. The record shows that in 1940, no less than 171 single purchase permits were issued and only 67,446 permits were issued in 1941. In 1940, 171 single purchase permits were issued and only 67,446 permits were issued in 1941.

When I get around to it, chapter two will be on the beer situation, and what a mess it is.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The sixteen-inch coast gun is the most powerful of all American guns and costs about $1,000,000 each. It will throw a shell weighing up to a ton many miles. The Coast Guard also has an eight-inch mobile railway gun which will hurl a heavy projectile about 15 miles.

For defense of our homes, the Coast Guard needs many of these powerful weapons. You can do your part to help pay for them by investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds and Stamps every payday. U. S. Treasury Department

Cost of Eyeglasses
The average annual outlay for eyeglasses is only $2.75 among all families in villages and towns of Central states, according to a survey made by the bureau of home economics of the U. S. department of agriculture. The survey disclosed that only about one in every five families had expenditures for eyeglasses in any one year, and that of the families having such expenditures, the outlay averaged $14.58 per family.

The little girl looked sadly at her mother's letter. "How can I write my letter?" "Why, of course, baby," Mrs. Carson grinned. "Are you going to write it or am I?" "Well," Betty said, "Maybe you'd better kind of say it to me. Only I'd love to write it."

All right, then, Mrs. Carson, take a letter, and show the room. "Betty," "Dear Mr. Montgomery: The way I save money for War Stamps is to plan all the small household jobs toward my daughter, who is eight years old. She is so keen about buying War Stamps that I know all the money I might have paid for someone else's job will go toward Victory when paid to her."

Now make a list, Betty. Window washed, 50 cents. Apples picked from under the tree, 25 cents. Emptying trash cans, 4 cents. Sold string beans from the garden, 15 cents. Sold strips of quilted cloth to children for quilting, at one cent a yard, 20 cents. Total, $1.34. Yours faithfully, I hope, —and then I'll sign it at the bottom."

Betty was putting like a grampus from her letter. The tall, pointed letters looked heavily across the sheet of paper. Gravelly Mrs. Carson took the part to sign. "Mother, would it be the proper etiquette if I signed it too?" "Perfectly proper, I think," Mrs. Carson said, without a pause, and handed the pen back to Betty.

Unique Coffee Flavors
A case in point is the unique flavor of Puerto Rican coffee as compared with that grown in other West Indian islands. All the coffee trees in the Caribbean area are descendants of a single plant brought to Martinique in 1703 by M. Bagriel Mathieu de Cles, a French naval officer, yet the coffee raised in the mountains of Puerto Rico has a richness and distinctive flavor found nowhere else in the world.

Mrs. Lawrence Kelley and daughter Dorothy and Norma, Andy Taylor and his daughter Eula, and son Hubert, of Wesley Chapel, were visiting Sunday with Mrs. Eugene Kelley of Clover Lick, who had the misfortune to break both of her arms on December 1. Mrs. Lawrence Kelley's daughter, Eula, is staying with Mrs. Kelley at her home. Also it is reported that her son, Andy Taylor, who is station at Tucson, Ariz., will arrive home soon for a furlough.

A weekly newspaper in West Virginia is the headquarter of the Victory Loan Campaign. It is a daily reminder of the need for more money to carry on the war and your family and our nation is depending on it.

West Virginia a drive to raise 45 million dollars during December. Your money and will pay attention to it—to carry on the war is the most important thing confronting every man and child in America today. All of us can't carry a gun or carry a gun, but we can send our dollars into the war.

West Virginia's quota of the Victory Loan campaign is approximately $1,000,000. It can be raised only by men and women with the ability to invest participations.

West Virginia's quota of the Victory Loan campaign is approximately $1,000,000. It can be raised only by men and women with the ability to invest participations.

The Victory Loan campaign in West Virginia has as its objective that of assisting the treasury in the distribution of new issues of government securities other than war savings bonds. It is important to the public that the various issues of the Victory Loan are designed to meet the requirements of almost every class.

There are six tax saving notes which are ideal for those who do not have interest on their funds waiting to pay them. There are United States savings bonds, government certificates of indebtedness and bonds with longer maturities which may be bought in small amounts by individuals, corporations, and banks. There are also the new Victory Bonds with 2 1/2 percent interest.

Let's know that dollars alone can't win a war, but it's our job here at home to see that our fighting men are equipped to win this war promptly and decisively, and that costs money.

Full information on the Victory Loan issues may be obtained at any bank in West Virginia. Let's THINK about this thing. MY government—YOUR government—is IN NEED. Can any individual or organization with idle dollars available—sit back smugly and say, "Oh, everything will be all right."

Franklin D. Roosevelt and look at France today. We are not pointing fingers, but if Uncle Sam does not get this money the enemy may be pointing bayonets at YOU. Are your idle dollars working for our side—or are they just bidding for the day Hitler's borders invade? Think it over!

With approximately 135 farmers in this county and more than 4000 farmers throughout West Virginia who have marketing cooperatives, the general trend toward group marketing is one of the most important agricultural developments in the state, according to Earl E. French, marketing director of A & P's produce-buying affiliate, the Atlantic Commission Company.

Our experience shows that growers can boost their income 10 to 15 percent by working together to provide adequate volume and standard pack, and by working with distributors, to cut out unnecessary hauling operations and costs. This 10 to 15 percent would bring approximately $8,000 to $12,000 annually on fruits, vegetables and other products.

As an indication of the effectiveness of cooperation between growers and distributors, French said economics worked out through group marketing programs were one important factor helping West Virginia growers realize $396,347 last year for fresh fruits and vegetables sold through the Atlantic Commission Company.

With wartime food supply conditions emphasizing the need for marketing commercial distances between growers and consumers group marketing programs can not only aid the Food-for-Freedom program but also provide a vitally important key to post-war prosperity, French declared.

Deer

I am guessing the number of legal deer in Pocahontas will finally check up to around 200 heads. The game protectors have listed more than the 166 published last week. I know of nine Pocahontas deer checked in Randolph; some in Webster county. The following have checked their kills at this office:

Benton Smith, Millpoint, 4 pts
James Workman, Hillsboro, 3
Roy Workman, Hillsboro, 8
Elmer Sharp, Marlinton, 3
Tyler Symes, Huntersville, 8

The fourth grade won the prize of fifty cents for having the most parents present.

Our Army and Navy Boys

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Long received the following letter from their son, Ernest O. Long, who is with the American Army and who has been stationed at Pearl Harbor for better than a year: Dear Mom, Dad and all:

How are you all by now? This is my first letter home. We had a real nice Thanksgiving. We sure had a nice meal but it took a lot of work. My buddy and I roasted turkey all the night before. That guy I cook with sure is a nut. We have been together for a long time, ever since we left California. He sure is a lot of fun.

I told you I had received my box. I just could not wait until Christmas to open it. When you get the money I sent you use it in any way you like. If you want any money any time for anything just write and ask me. I got $64.00 a month. Say Mom, have you ever got that insurance policy? I took it out a long time ago and forgot to ever ask you about it.

Tell Dad I don't think he will go on the radio if he lays off a week. Wish I could be back we would all take a week off.

Well it won't be long. A year of this war is almost gone. I hope I never will have to experience another day like that one. Maybe some day I can tell you about it. I hate to think of it. A lot of good men lost their lives that day, and those dirty little yellow rats will pay for it.

Well, I had better close. Tell Mrs. Fortune hello and tell Margaret and Sid I will answer their letter in a few days. Write real soon. Lots of love,

Bears

William Perry, Charles O. Shorne, Joe Sharp, and Clifford L. Sharp, made a bear killing on Cherry River last week. They were in town Thursday with the pelts of four bears—a big old one, two years and a big cub. Two weeks ago they brought in two others—a monstrous big one and a medium sized bear.

They tracked the old bear and two yearlings into a hole in the rocks. The dogs went in, and through better luck than management all came out again. The hunters tied all dogs up—about nine of them—and then proceeded to punch the bears out and shoot them as they came. The big one had a perfect "V" in white hairs right at the sticking place on her bricket. I want no better sign for victory over the Hun and Japs than that.

The next day the dogs put an old she and a cub in a laurel patch. The cub was treed and shot. The old one put up fight, crippling a good dog. She then put up a long race and the dogs were called off. This bear had been chased so much this fall by hunters from the Richwood side of Black Forest, that she puts up a mean fight and then a long race.

The hunters found the track of a really big bear coming out of Dogway. They followed the track for three days, clear into Big Blizard, on the south side of the South Fork of Cherry. The snow gave out and the hunt was called off. This old bear evidently was looking for his den to take his winter's nap.

The following letter was found among the personal effects of Mitchell A. Sharp, of Odessa, Missouri:

Near Shepherdstown, Virginia July 31st, 1964.

My dear wife:

With pleasure I avail myself of the present opportunity of letting you know how I am and where I am.

My health has been remarkably good since I left Pocahontas, although we have had remarkably hard times, yet I have been able to keep up with the command. We have been marching almost constantly since we left Pocahontas. We have had several considerable fights with the Yankees. Our rations have been sometimes plentiful, sometimes scarce, and sometimes none at all. We are all in good spirits as we hope this war will end with this campaign.

Dear wife how I long for the time to come when I may return home and its comforts in peace and quiet. Captain McNeil is in command of the Regiment at this time. Colonel Thompson has gone home on sick furlough. We are falling back toward Winchester. I do not know how far we will go.

I would like very much to see you all but it is impossible at this time as no furloughs are granted to any one now.

Write to me whenever you have an opportunity and give me the news. You must try and do the best you can with the affairs at home as it is impossible for me to direct you. You dispose of whatever property you thing you cannot winter.

Give my respects to all inquiring friends and believe me,

Yours as ever, James L. Sharpe.

Weather

Saturday afternoon old timers kept telling me the portent of the cutting, penetrating air was snow air and there was a foot of snow in it. Sure enough, Sunday morning saw ten inches of the beautiful covering the landscape over. When the reports came in, the fall was state wide, ranging from 46 inches in Prescott county to four inches in Kanawha.

Sunday noon the temperature began to drop, on Monday morning the thermometer registered 13 degrees below zero at Marlinton; 16 below at Hillsboro, 18 at Minnehaha and Danmore; 17 at Greenbank and Durbin. This cold was deceiving as the air was dry and still. Tuesday morning the thermometer was around zero at Marlinton.

This is the best spell of winter since 1917, according to local collectors and the report published from the weather bureau.

Last Thursday night the big wind blew 3,400 square feet of roof off of the Greenbank high school building. Roof, sheeting and stringers were lifted bodily off, over the chimney, and blown across the lawn, through an iron fence, over the road and into a field. To repair the damage required the purchase of $6000 feet of lumber and 42 rolls of roofing. Everything was again pretty well under cover by Saturday night.

Engaged

Of interest here is the engagement of Miss Gertrude Morton Shaffer to Mr. Elward Hardy Stringer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grey Stringer, of Overbrook, Pa., which is being announced by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Emory Peale Shaffer of Bryn Mawr, Pa., formerly of Cass. Miss Shaffer is a sister of Mrs. Frank Abney Hardy of Abney Circle and has visited her here on several occasions. Her father was formerly head of the lumber department of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper company. The prospective bride and her family were related to the late Judge George W. McClintic.

She is a graduate of St. Catharine's school in Richmond, Va. Her fiancé was graduated from Massachusetts Military academy, Woodstock, Va., and is now on active duty with the U. S. coast guard. —Charleston Gazette.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY DECEMBER 24, 1942

I have a letter from an intelligent young high school reader of Clarkburg. He wrote to inquire if does of the Virginia white tail deer ever grow horns. I could put his mind at rest; occasionally this does happen.

The young man had once read an outdoor story built around a horned doe. The matter of antlered deer came up in the biology class. The young man raised a laugh among the less well informed members of the class, when he replied that on rare occasions a Virginia white tail deer did have antlers. Then he wrote to this old reliable writer, and I could reply he was exactly right.

Years ago when deer and deer hunting was a fertile source of material for the unwritten literature of our people, every community had its tradition of antlered does. I never saw one. The last one I remember reported was one killed just across the Pocahontas county line in Highland county. As near as I can place the time it was perhaps twenty years ago. Being as the deer was knocked down against the law during a closed period, no great notoriety was made over it. I was trusted with the secret, and I will have to admit, I was never duly appreciative of the confidence thus imposed. Of course I had no way of telling, but if the antlers I saw actually were grown on a doe, the horns were of good size and well developed.

The biologists tell me the phenomena of an antlered doe is caused by some disarrangement of some body organs. They say the counterpart in the human race is the bearded lady in the freak show.

In this connection, they say the same sort of affliction which causes the does to grow horns, causes bucks to be ruleys. Some years ago, it was my chore to place standers in a deer hunt. I saw immense fresh buck tracks leading into a part of the forest the drivers would come through. I had strung the standers out until I had only a couple left, so I chided on them by putting them on good places around the end of the ridge, while I hustled back to squat down beside the trail of the big buck. In a little while the old deer did come skipping along on his back track. He was actually the biggest deer I ever saw—three hundred pounds on the hoof—but he was a doe, with no more horns than a rabbit. Incidentally I got over feeling bad about my double dealing when a fine buck came out to one of the standers I had placed farther down on the end of the ridge.

Sometime later that year, or maybe the next season, on the same ridge, a hunter saw the bulk of this big deer; too big by far for a doe. He gave himself the benefit of the doubt, and knocked it down. He was a buck all right, but hornless.

While on the subject let me say that the does of the rein deer family do grow horns each year. Speaking about deer horns the game farm in Upshur county has an interesting story in antlers. Covering a period of ten years or so, the shed horns of the big pet deer, Benny, have been preserved. At two and three years, this deer grew antlers about as big as he ever did. The past three years the horns have not been so large.

This deer was picked up in Preston county as a fawn. He had a broken leg. He was taken to the State Game Farm at French Creek, milk fed and reared by hand. He made remarkably big deer. His pictures are scattered the country over. The study of this deer shows that food and physical condition has more to do with antler development than age.

We all used to count the points on deer horns by the beam; now they count the points on both branches. For instance the eight point buck formerly was a four snag buck. In this season list of bucks killed there were deer of fourteen, fifteen and sixteen points. Many years ago, the late Brown Galford, of the Back Alleghany, killed a twenty-one point buck at the Deadwater on Williams River.

S. N. Hench gave me a clipping from the Pittsburgh Post, telling of the killing of Ole Bill, the well known deer, up in the Pulpit Mountains around Henrietta, Pennsylvania. This deer carried twenty-four points on his rack.

Ole Bill reminds me that big deer sometimes get so familiarly known that they are given names. I have the last antlers shed by Ole Abe of the Butts of Gauley and Red Lick and Spruce Knob. They do say that my friend Abraham Lee McClure spent so many seasons trying to track down this buck, that the rest of the hunters of the community called the deer for him. His last years, Ole Abe started in the winter on a north ridge at the head of Crooked Fork of Elk. Fred and Elmer Sharp put a pack of fox hounds in those woods Christmas week. The dogs just about ran Ole Abe in his bed. He hopped out, and one antler fell off beside the bed. The hunters brought it to me. It is no great shakes of a horn as Ole Abe was on the decline, but the proven fact that it was shed by Christ mas week makes it unusual for these parts. Next spring, the body of Ole Abe was found in a clearing. He was so old his teeth were about worn out.

Then there was old Crooked Foot. For ten years or more he was a big deer known by his size and his track during the moving season from Sitlington's Creek on the north to Spies Run on the south—say forty miles along Greenbrier River. There came a season, and his sign was not reported. The rumor finally got around that the deer was killed in the Buckley out of season on a Sunday by a preacher.

Then there was Old Sol, the big buck down the Pond Ridge, Nigh gap, Mareface and Oldham range. Sol was shot for Solomon, the wisest I never did hear of any hunter ever killing him, though he was hunted for by many then for a good many years. Only by accident do you kill these smart old bucks, unless you take a short cut on them and bring them to the river some frosty morning by putting a hound on their tracks. And the law has seen to it such gentlemanly practice was put aside through these many years.

There used to be a favorite story about the hunter killing the Chestnut Ridge buck every year for four years in succession, and once he killed him twice the same year. The explanation is easy; no phantasy about it at all. This minute there is a big buck on the Chestnut Ridge. This is choice range for deer, and it is preempted by a big buck, who will fight off all comers until he is killed off or licked by another deer. In case the champion is killed, number two deer of the mountain comes in to take his place.

Years ago, a leading citizen of this community took pride in his big collection of deer horns. He had them by the hundred. The big, fine ones were kept in the dry, and the others covered the roof of the smoke house. One day when the family was gone, the well meaning, simple minded hired man thought he was doing a good stroke of business for his employer by selling fifty of the finest heads for ten cents a piece, $5. in all, to a traveling man. Maybe it was a hundred, for $10. Anyway when the lord of the manor returned times were only tolerable like when he found his fine trophies of many hunting years had been sold for a trifle.

I have finally come to the conclusion that there is not much to be told by the shape and size of deer horns other than in a most general way. A whole of a buck may have a small rack while a runt of a deer may grow big antlers like the horns of a scrubby Tuckshoe steer. You know the old local tale about a Tuckshoe steer which was butchered and a hindquarter was crammed down each of his horns. Of course, the quarters were not large at all, but the story was merely to illustrate the disproportionate size of the horns.

Along about fifteen years ago the game commission began sending a few of the big gray Michigan deer, to be turned loose in our Valley. Ever since we have been putting down big fat antlers and those with snags forked as northern deer. I have a set of big flat antlers from a deer knock ed down on the Beaver Lick over thirty years ago, and a head of horns with forked points from a deer shot on Alleghany Mountain over thirty years ago.

Twenty years ago, a deer with white antlers found east of the Greenbrier River was put down as a traveler from the Black Forest. In those days the Greenbrier Mountains were burned regularly for sheep range. Bucks which lived there had dark horns from rubbing them on charred wood. Now that fire is kept out of public owned deer woods deer on the east side usually have white antlers now. While some of the biggest horns I have ever seen came from the white oak country east of the river, I hold the rule is for the bucks from the rich woods west of the river to have more massive antlers.

A rack of horns came from Buckley Mountain; this year which had "knot" holes in each beam. I happen to have a beam in which there is, such a hole. I have no way for accounting for such blemish, unless it is a case of a snag which failed to develop. The only authority I can quote is James Whitcomb Riley; he said a wart was only a dimple throed over, you know.

"NOT A CREATURE WAS STIRRING"

HAPPY are the children of America and her allies in the approaching Christmas season. With all the faith in Santa Claus that is a part of childhood, our children and our children's children may confidently expect to be blessed with gifts on the happy morning now so near. Stockings will be hung as usual and they will not be empty on the morrow. It is for such incidental things that American men and women this year are waging the fight of their lives against tyranny, brutality, and the un-Christian creed of the Axis. And that fight will be continued until there will be happy Yule seasons again all over the world where freedom-loving people live. In that fight, definitely is playing a dominant role. In the peace to come, it will be equally important.

Our Army and Navy Boys

Second Class Seaman Donald Mason Haptonstall, son of Mrs. Eva Haptonstall, of Anjean, wrote his mother on November 30 that he will celebrate Christmas with plenty of fireworks, but no snow, while Private Raymond W. Haptonstall, another son, will spend Christmas "somewhere in Ireland."

Both boys attended school at Cass in Pocahontas county.

Donald reports that he has been fortunate in receiving mail from his mother in a period of twelve days and that all goes well with his health and activities. —Beckley Post-Herald.

Mrs. E. C. Wooddell, of Hillsboro, received the following letter from her brother, Ralph Taylor, stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington:

Dear Sister:

Here I sit on my bunk and trying to answer all your letters and packages, also Opal's cards. Sure do appreciate all the mail, even if I don't act like it sometimes. "ha."

Boy, it sure has been raining here lately. They say it keeps it up nearly all winter and hardly ever any snow.

I am well and fat as ever. Sure hope you are all well. Well, is my chest stuck out! We have been firing the machine guns all week and we shot this morning for final record. I made 73 out of a possible 75, which is considered perfect, but seldom made. I still had one shell in my gun when we quit and if I had shot it, I would have made 74 out of the 75. Anyway it made me "cham" machine gunner in the troop. The captain said when they scored my target, he had a notion to give me a week's K. P. for wasting that one shell, ha ha. That gave me a 3-day pass with no where to go, but I guess I will look the country over with it. We also have a rifle match coming up for three days pass. Am hoping to grab that off but I have a lot of good shots to beat. Not bragging "much" but here are the medals I have won: Expert Rifleman, Expert Machine gunner, Expert Pistol Shot, both mounted and dismounted.

I had a letter from Aunt Sue today. They are well and are awful nice about writing.

The war news sounds much better, doesn't it. Some of these days "Johnnie" is going to come marching home again and you will see him coming in after coffee too often again, ha ha.

Thanks a bushel for the "makin'" as I can't get it out here but you need not keep sending them. I can smoke anything if I want to smoke had enough.

Yes, the boys said the package was fine. They are good pals and we divide everything we get.

Tell all-hello and answer soon.

Ralph.

The following letter was received by Mrs. J. J. Griffin, of Campbelltown, from her son, Ralph Griffin, who was inducted into the Army on July 29, 1942:

San Francisco, California.

December 6, 1942.

Dear Mom:

Am getting along fine. It is warm here and the sun shining bright. Am on my way east but haven't the least idea where.

Will give you a little sketch of the trip. Am now traveling out of Sunny California where you can sleep out every night.

1st day—Traveled all night through California. Next morning—see lots of sage now but far away on the mountains can see snow on the high peaks. Still sage brush and sand.

2nd day—Just passed Battle Mountain and still sand dunes and tumble weeds. Still pretty hot and you should see my sun tan.

3rd day—Saw lots of snow in Nevada on the mountains we came over. We are on the plains now and still pretty hot. Still sage brush and lots of high rocks and canyons of all colors; really is beautiful. Passed Salt Lake City some time in the night. Would have liked to stopped off and saw Jake but could not. Tell Sonny I saw lots of cow pokes and sheep herders but no Indians. Am in Utah.

4th day—Still lots of snow on the mountains but none on the plains. The ranches are not so good. Just passed a small town, but don't see many cow girls. 4th night—In Colorado now. Passed Denver sometime during the night. Quite a bit of snow now and pretty cold. The snow really does tickle me but give me good old sunny California.

5th night—In Nebraska now. The farms are a lot better and houses are closer together; but still nothing much different only a lot more snow and colder. Just passed a big town. The houses are becoming more scattered. Am still coming east somewhere. Just came through with chow. Will write more in an hour or two.

9 hours later—Just passing a big lake that is frozen over. Can't write very good for the train is sure traveling fast. Still coming east and still plenty of snow; wish I was out in it. Will write more after while. Tell everybody hello and maybe I will get to come home after all to see them all.

Just woke up from taking a nap and am looking at a big corn field and plenty of snow around it. They seldom ever cut corn here. We are now somewhere in Iowa.

6th night—Am in Nebraska now. Stopped the train and got off at a little town. Lots of snow I guess we will lay off here for awhile. Still about the same kind of country. In Indiana the country looks a lot better so far then any other but it is still colder than the devil. We are in Chicago now. It looks like a big town to me. Was there 7 hours and was up in the town awhile. Taking off again now.

In Ohio now. Just came from Illinois. Am awful tired and black and dirty. Still headed east. About the same kind of country. It's bed time so good-night till in the morning.

7th day—In good old West Virginia now. Passed Charleston just now. Headed up the New River now. Boy, do the West Virginia hills look good to me. Breakfast is ready so will write more after chow.

Just came through Hinton and got off the train for some exercise. Lots of good looking girls. Are pulling out now. Not so cold. Was expecting lots of snow but have not seen a bit in West Virginia so far. Just went over the Alleghany Mountains.

In Virginia somewhere. Could not tell where. At camp. Don't worry.

December 14, 1942.

Hello Mom:

I guess you had begun to think

I was not home, but I times didn't know what to do with myself but feel fine now and am walking around. Will close for now.

Your Son, Chesley.

THE SOLDIER

Now listen my people and listen well.
To you a story I'm going to tell,
A story about the deeds of man
To help his Country all he can.
The Soldier is our symbol of pride
He's there to fight for the 'American side,
He finds hardships that cannot be told

But this is the life of the soldier bold.
While on the front he works so bold
Through rain and sleet and snow so cold

And why does he work? I ask you this,
Because he loves America, and she won't miss.

We all love America and her ideals of life
And we won't allow her to be stabbed by an Axis knife
She is our America and we love her too

And she'll stay free under the Red, White and Blue.

From three Soldiers in Oregon,
Sunday night.

Dear Cal:

Just a few lines tonight to you and the home folks of Pocahontas County. We are well and getting along fine with "Uncle Sam." He sure is a fine fellow to behave yourself. Well, when we
September 9th, there were six of us together until the last two weeks, and now they transferred three of the boys to a trucking company. They are: George Mc-Neill, Jr., Elmo Turner and Arthur Thompson. So that just leaves three of us together and we are in the Quartermaster Corp and it is a fine branch of the Service to be in.

Well now we guess you would like to know something about the State of Oregon. Here where we are the elevation is high but at the present time we don't know how many feet. But we do know there are a lot of mountains here higher than the ones in Pocahontas because we hiked about thirty miles of them one day. But they are bare and the valleys are green.
But in some parts of Oregon there is some fine timber. Wheat and alfalfa are the principal crops and irrigation is practiced quite a lot.

One more thing there is a lot of wild game. Some of the boys have been going hunting. The other day a couple of the boys went out and came back with a wide variety of game. They had one ring necked pheasant, four ducks, a few quail, a couple of jack rabbits and a goose which they thought was wild. The next day some farmer was short one in his flock of geese. Well we know we have a few crack shots in our company because they shot everything that jumped up that day.

Buy Victory Bonds NOW

The mother of a West Virginia boy who lost his life in a naval engagement off the Solomon Islands in November has enlisted to help sell West Virginia's share of the government's nine billion dollar Victory Loan.

She is Mrs. J. P. Erwin, of Charleston, whose son Larry, petty officer second class USN, was killed in action last month.

"We're all called upon to make sacrifices in this war, sacrifices of different kinds," Mrs. Erwin told State Victory Loan Chairman John L. Dickinson. "It's one of those things you can't escape."

"But in this Victory Loan drive there's no sacrifice involved." Our government asks us to loan our money, and we'll get it back with interest. It's a thing that every American should be proud to do. It's one way we here at home can back up our boys who are fighting for us all over the world."

Need for a tremendous stockpile of dollars to back up the fighting forces, and wartime industry and agriculture, is emphasized by Chairman Dickinson. "We know that dollars alone will not win the war, but it is our job back home to see that our fighting men are the best fed, the best equipped and the most powerfully armed in the world. And that costs money and more money."

Examples of the immense costs of armament include $40,000 for a 90 mm anti-aircraft gun; $100,000 for a fighter plane; $350,000 for a heavy bomber; $120,000 for one heavy tank; $20,000,000 for a cruiser.

Industry is building planes, tanks, guns and ships on production schedules that are being expanded daily.

Important to the public is the fact that the various issues of the Victory Loan are tailored to suit almost every requirement of the buyer. Full information from your banker for the asking.

Excise Taxes
Federal manufacturers' excise taxes for the last eight years on gasoline, lubricants, motor vehicles, accessories and tires have totaled $2,422,000,000, an average of $302,600,000 a year.

The deer season to this point was not successful. I did not hear of a deer being killed here. I suppose this is one season I will not get my usual amount of venison. They tried hard enough though. The bow and arrow hunters on Watoga Park drew a blank, too. They were out in the rain, trying like the rest. No doubt they had a good time despite bad weather. I understand the Park Superintendent has quite a collection of shirt tails; mute testimony of the many misses scored by the modern Robin Hoods.

I was pleased to know there was less drinking among the hunters than usual. There was some, to be sure, but nothing to be compared with past years, when the roads were full of drunks, racing up and down and none of them going any where. I am for a special law against the use of liquor in hunting camps and among hunters. A most distasteful thing is to see a man marching off to the woods with his mind in a fog of booze and a high-power rifle on his shoulder. To my mind, the woods are too beautiful and the sport too clean to be defiled by such stuff; not to mention endangering the lives of other hunters.

In my last article, I spoke of Mr. Ray Lambert, member Conservation Commission, outdoor sports writer for the Huntington Herald-Advertiser. He read the piece and he was kind enough to write me a letter. He said some nice things about the Times, Mr. Price and yours truly. "When the letter came, you could have knocked me over with a feather," if I had not been lying down. On top of it all he quoted from the piece in his column for December 6th. This is the second time I have seen my name in a paper of that size, and it is no small honor for it to appear in Mr. Lambert's column. The other time it was in an obituary; fortunately it was used at that time by another fellow. Thanks, Mr. Lambert.

My young friends, Summers and Winters Dean, have a line of traps. They are laying plans to put the blitz on these foxes when they get them going good. The boys are twins and they were named for Dr. Winters McNeel and his twin brother, Summers. The Doctor was present when the boys were born.

In his last letter, my very good friend, Ward Reed, enclosed nice and welcome contribution to my stamp fund. Thanks, friend. With this and the big pile of stationery the Editor sent me some weeks ago, I am pretty well fixed for writing for quite some time. I think I am pretty lucky even if I was born on the 13th of November. Mr. Reed is now the manager of the Berry Hotel at Athens, Ohio. He was formerly with the Gore Hotel in Clarksburg. He is a true sportsman, a hound dog lover, and the owner of champion hounds.

Paul and Summers Burr killed an old wildcat and one of her kittens. They caught another kitten, but it later got away. Any wildcat should know better than to try to settle in their neighborhood, for they keep several good hounds and like nothing better than good chases after wildcats and foxes. My friend, their brother Ernest, is also a lover of the chase. He is in the Armed Forces new in training to chase Hitler and the rest of his international bandits.

Who Wrote This?

Cousin Bert Hunter Trayham, over at the Sweet Springs, sends in this literary gem. I have not the least idea who wrote it; tell me if you know. It was copied from a picture of a group of the Confederate Flags. It has been said the original copy was written on the back of a Confederate note.

Representing nothing on God's green earth now
And naught in the watery beneath it—
As a pledge of a nation that's dead and gone,
Keep it, dear friend, and show it.

Show it to those who will lead us on
To the tale this trifle will tell,
Of liberty born of a patriot's dream,
Of a storm-ordained nation that fell.

Too poor to possess the precious ores,
And too much of a stranger to borrow,
She issued today her promise to pay
And hopes to redeem on the morrow.

We know it hardly had a value in gold,
Yet as gold our soldiers received it,
It gazed in our eyes with a promise to pay
And each patriot soldier believed it.

Keep it—it tells our history over,
From the birth of the dream to the last—
Modest, and born of the Angel Hope,
Like our hope of success, it passed.

Our Army and Navy Boys

The following letter is from Gerald McNeill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnot McNeill, of the Army and stationed at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, to his mother and sister:

Dear Mom:
Arrived here all right about 4:30, got about 30 minutes sleep. Had to rest last night and didn't hardly stay awake.

They say we are going to Nebraska the 30th of December for 30 days so I don't know if I will get home during the holidays or not, but I am still going to get another furlough some time soon.

I am writing this on Tuesday morning. I laid down right after supper last night and never woke up till 4 o'clock this morning; slept with my clothes on.

Well I will have to close as it is time to go out and drill.

Lots of love, Jerry.

December 7, 1942.

Hi Dot!

I will answer both you and Mom with the same letter. I just got off guard out at the sewerage disposal plant. It is misting rain and cold. When we came into camp this morning at 4:30 there were airplanes diving at the barracks and high explosives were going off and almost breaking the windows. All the camp was having a blackout. We thought the Japs were attacking us but it turned out to be a program about Pearl Harbor and December 7. All the men and guns were up in the parade field listening to a speech from the General.

It sure was a surprise to everybody for they did not expect anything like that especially us who were coming in off guard from an out post guard.

I am sending you a negative of a taken on a jeep. I want you to send it to that company we were in that made them double size and have about 7 or 8 points made of it. I would send it myself if I hadn't lost the address. Send it right away as I want the pictures as soon as possible.

We are starting our airborne training this week: loading and unloading gliders and planes. I guess we will be here at Fort Bragg for 5 weeks and maybe not even go away.

I tried to get a weekend pass last weekend but could not get it. I want to get one sometime before New Years if I can get enough money to get home. They tell me that I am going to be transferred to the Signal Corp for some more radio school shortly and if I am I may not get to come home for the six weeks that I am there.

They are going to start giving second furloughs about the tenth again. Well answer soon.

Lots of love, Jerry.

The following letter is from Pfc. Wesley L. Simmons, of the American Postal Directory and now serving in North Africa. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Simmons, of Marlinton:

December 10, 1942.

Dear Mother:

I thought I would write and let you all know I am still living and feeling fine with the exception of a little cold.

I am now in North Africa and it is some sight to see the actions of the people and the way they live. How are you all? Well I hope and how are Roland and Mamie and all the rest of the people? I would love to see you all.

I work day and night but I like to work that way. I have been sick for two days but I am better now.

Well tell all the people I said hello and I will close with love to you all.

The following letter is from Sergeant Tony Colson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Colson, who is stationed at Miami Beach, Florida:

Dear Mom:

I am sorry it has been such a long time since I have written to you but I have been busy. I just wrote Frank a nice letter. He sent me the nicest Christmas package you ever saw: candy, nuts and everything that I needed.

I sent you a Christmas present. I hope you like it. I don't know if it is what you want or not. My girl picked it out, she said that it would keep you warm.

Speaking of the weather it is hot as hell down here. We are burning up but it is nice down here. But it doesn't seem like Christmas with no pine trees or snow. I saw Fred Young and Bobby Sharp the other night and they are getting along fine.

Tell daddy and everyone hello and take care of yourself. Have a Merry Christmas and may God take care of you.

Yours loving son, Tony.

Corporal Denny Galford was home from San Angelo, Texas, last week to spend his furlough with his wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Galford, of Woodrow.

Miss Gladys Mullins received the following letter from her friend, Raymond Sutton, of the United States Army:

December 10, 1942.

Hello Gladys:

Received your letter today and sure was surprised to hear from you and sure glad you wrote. I really enjoy getting mail. I am working pretty hard these days but have a good job and like it fine. The army life is O. K. I don't think I'll even have to go across the frog pond. I am in the aviation corp. I got a promotion day before yesterday; it made me corporal and I am sure proud of it. Then before long I will be a sergeant.

I sure get enough riding in airplanes. I go up with planes all the time. I am taking check on them; have so many to take care of all the time. I have been several places since I have been in the army; have been in 28 states already and expect to see some more of them before long. I am going to stay here for a while then go to A. M. school in Chicago. Then I will probably go to England. There sure is a lot of things to do in the Army. I have been in Hollywood and it sure is a swell place but I would rather be back home.

How is everything in Marlinton? Dead as ever I suppose. The Army sure despised every town everywhere. Well so long and answer soon. Lots of love to you.

An old friend,
Pvt. Raymond Sutton,
741 School Squadron Sp.

TO ALL DRAFT DODGERS

We're writing this short letter, And every word is true, Don't look away draft dodgers For it is addressed to you.

You feel at ease, o. k. No danger in the old home town You cook up a pitiful story So the draft board will turn you down.

You sit at home and read your papers, You jump up and yell "we'll win" Just what do you get that "we" stuff, This war will be won by men. Just what do you think, draft dodgers, What the free nation would do?

RED

My friend L. H. ... of Slaty Fork, reports a ... hole during the ... hunting season, on ... mountain. A houndman tracking a deer in the snow, and the hunter left off at a sink hole. The hole was about 3 feet across and 12 to 16 feet deep. The hunters gathered around, and one young man went down into the cave. There he found a big ten-point buck, cutting a shine trying to get out. He had broken off one antler on the rocks. Other hunters gathered, the buck was killed and they managed to swing him up out of the cave. All witnesses agreed the deer never could have gotten out. Evidently it was a case of a running buck jumping where it was not there. The hole was never before known in Pocahontas County.

My friend Sherman C. Kincaid aged 85 years, got his chance for a deer muffed this season. He saw a big deer, and he took three shots; all plumb, dead aimed ones too. However, he had to shoot through a wire fence. Each bullet clipped a strand of wire, split up and the pieces whined away in thin air with mournful sounds.

Senator Lee J. Seabridge, of Philippi, writes that his party of deer hunters in 1940 killed a doe with a fine set of antlers, weight, 188 pounds.

The ice went out of the Greenbrier last Wednesday, the ice passing Marlinton early in the afternoon. You know the old settlers' sign, an ice break up in the river before Christmas means two after. In other words a broken winter.

Considerable of a thunder and lightning storm on Christmas day with hail at Mincham. The old sign for winter thunder was the weather would be warm if the rumble rolled from south to north. On the other hand, a cold wave will follow thunder rolling from the north. As high as I could make it, the thunder on Christmas day was in the south-west. Anyway, the weather has been warm and rainy since.

If all men were slackers And scared to fight like you. We guess that is all, Mr. Slacker, And we guess your face is red America is no place for you, And we mean every word we have said.

So we are closing this short letter draft dodgers, Just remember what we say, Keep away from our girl friends, For we are coming back some day.

BUY Your War Stamps and Bonds Here

NOW, when all America looks hopefully to a new and better year, we pause to take stock of our assets, and find that chief among them is the good will of our many customers.

So we renew our pledge to do everything in our power to merit a continuance of your good will. There are clouds on the horizon, and clouds in the zenith, too, but we face the future with the firm conviction that now, on the threshold of 1943, we may truly say, as in the past, we wish you a Very Happy New Year.

Women AT WAR

When Irene got home from the airplane factory she was good and tired. This was the hour, after work and before dinner, that she always looked forward to. Her private name for it was "My sissy hour." Into it, these days, she packed all the lazy, luxurious little things she loved—things that used to take up a lot more than a sliver of her peace-time days. She sat down at the little desk in her room. You could tell quite a lot about Irene from that desk. The water-glass filled with the small bouquet of flowers she sometimes bought on the way home. The paper-weight of pink marble. The thin, crackly blue air-mail stationery. And the big, framed photograph of a young man in a corporal's uniform—as good-looking a man as Irene was pretty. On the blotter pad lay the telegram that had come that morning just as she was leaving for work. With those long, well-shaped fingers she reached for a sheet of paper. She nibbled the end of her pen for a bit, and then she wrinkled up her nose at the picture of the soldier and began to write, "Dear Mr. Morgenstau," but the corporal's name was Jackson and she called him Pete. Her round hand writing spread across the page. "My boy friend is with the A.E.F. in Ireland. He has cabled me fifty dollars with which to buy a diamond ring. I've been thinking it over and decided to buy a War Bond to help Uncle Sam instead. This may help to bring my boy friend home sooner, and then he can help me select my ring."

Slowly she began to sign her name, "Irene."

(Letter from an actual communication in the files of the Treasury Department.)

Let's all sacrifice as Irene has done. Bring final victory closer with the money you put into War Bonds. Make certain your family budget tops 10 percent by New Year's.

South Lies East—A good look at the map will reveal the startling fact that almost the entire continent of South America lies east of North America. If you went straight south from New York, you would land in the Pacific ocean just off the west coast of Chile. The westernmost part of South America is almost straight south of the tip of Florida. South America is southeast, not south, of North America.

BILL KEMP, the head of the exchange department, looked up wearily from his desk. It had been a day of odd jobs—refunds, exchanges, exchanges. Everything had been relatively unimportant and yet everything demanded instant attention. Bill Kemp had been ten years older than he was he would not have known it so seriously, and consequently would have been nearly as fresh at the end of the day as he was early in the morning.

"I want," said a pair of violet eyes, at least Bill Kemp would have sworn that it was the eyes that spoke, so timidly and questionably did they regard him. "I want to know if I could do something about my lace hat."

Bill Kemp sighed. They were such marvelous eyes. And then to be so suddenly interested in a hat—

a silly lace hat.

"Well," he said stiffly, "what did you contemplate doing about this lace hat? If it's been worn it cannot possibly be accepted for exchange or refund."

The latter words issued mechanically from his mouth, and he wondered subconsciously how many hundreds of times he had uttered that same sentence—sometimes about gloves, sometimes about hair goods, sometimes about shoes.

"Oh, it hasn't been worn!" came the soft voice again. The voice sounded as though it were full of tears and he looked at the violet eyes again. Sure enough, there were large tears there.

Bill Kemp steeled himself. All women used tears as a means to an end and he determined that he would not be taken in. "Well, go on, go on," he said as testily as he could.

"You see I decided last Saturday that I could take it—it's a beau-

Our Army and Navy Boys

DO NOT TELL OF U. S. UNITS

On battle fronts every day men risk their lives to discover the location and strength of military units of the enemy. Yet at home, too many of us are presenting the enemy with information of the same military value, the effect of which is a statement.

This is the information which newspapers and individuals are asked not to tell the enemy: Do not tell the names of ships upon which sailors serve.

Do not tell the troop units in which soldiers serve overseas.

There is no objection to revealing that Private John Jones is in Australia or that Seaman Tom Brown saw action in the Atlantic, but there is military information which endangers the lives of American fighting men in stating that Pvt. John Jones, "Company C, 600th Infantry," is in Australia, or Seaman Tom Brown, "aboard the U. S. S. Wisconsin," is in the Atlantic.

The office of censorship says: "We ask editors not to publish these troop identifications, and we ask parents and relatives not to reveal them. Don't give the enemy anything that may lengthen the war."

EDITORS NOTE: In accordance with the above request, The Pocahontas Times will no longer carry in its "Our Army and Navy Boys" column the addresses of men who are in foreign countries and men aboard ships. Any friend who would like to write to them should contact men here of the family or friends to secure the correct address.

It is with regret The Times must stop this service to men in service and to their families, but we feel that we must comply with this request by our government. We will continue to print their letters but must omit their addresses when they are in foreign service.

The following letter was received from Lanty Landis, of Buckeye, from his friend, Raymond Turner, of Millpoint, now in the Service and stationed at Camp Grant, Illinois:

December 27, 1942.

Hello Lanty:

How are the West Virginia hills carrying on by now, and you on the top of them all? Fine I hope. Well this leaves me out here in State of Illinois trying to drop you a line to say hello. How is every body around there?

Well we had goose for dinner today and it was so tough you could hardly cut it with a knife. I finally got it cut and then could not chew it so I just swallowed it whole.

How is the weather back there? Yesterday it started lightning and along in the evening it really started to rain and it just poured the rain all night and all this morning. The whole camp looks like it is going to swim. The wind blows all the time here and it is a damp cool air and when it does get cold the cold damp air just cuts right in to the bone. The air is much different from the air in West Virginia. I always thought the wind was cold in West Virginia, but I changed my mind when I came out here in Illinois. If the world was a mile, Illinois would be the end the tail is in.

Well, I am serving as a soldier in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. I hope how soon they ship us out of here and I hope they send us to a warmer place than this is. The most of the boys in the barracks upstairs are the good old rough and ready West Virginia boys.

Some of the boys think the Army is hell. Well, it is if you want to make it that way. In the Army you want to play just as dumb as possible and the good Lord knows that I don't have to play off dumb for He knows that I am.

Yesterday evening the Captain of our Company called us all over to the 2nd Platoon and was talking. When he got through talking it was lightning and raining and he looked out of the window and said, "Did you ever see a lightning storm in the middle of Christmas?" and he turned and went out the door. He is the joy of our company. Yesterday morning he was giving us a speech in the theatre and at the end of his speech he said, "We could, we must, and by God, we will win the war."

Well, there is lots more I could write about but I will close hoping to hear from you soon.

Your friend,
Pvt. Raymond H. Turner,
Co. C, 1st Platoon, 81st M. T. B., Camp Grant, Illinois.

Brooks Field, Texas, December 30th. Now in the final stages of flight training at Brooks Field are the following men from West Virginia: Samuel R. Hannah, III, of Arboreale, and Daniel N. Nordick, of Terra Alta.

Officially known as "43-B", the class voted last night to adopt the name of "Birthday Boys" because they reported here for duty on the twenty-fifth anniversary of Brooks Field which has given the country such well known flyers as Lindbergh, Maitland, Chennault, Doolittle and a score of others whose exploits are well known over the face of the globe today.

The "Birthday Boys" will graduate with the dual rating of "observer-pilot" on February 16, will remain at Brooks for approximately a month to aid in the training of aerial observers and then be assigned to school squadrons or tactical units.

The following letter was received by Mrs. A. B. Brooks, Dunmore, West Virginia, from Private Joseph Cernak, Ward 4, Ashford General Hospital, White Sulphur Springs.

Bears

George Gay, Elmer, Joe and Clifford Sharp took themselves a little outing Christmas week to Frosty Gap, in the Black Forest, for to hunt bear in the Hills Creek, Dogway, Cranberry and Cherry country.

On Saturday they upped a bear on the divide between Hills Creek and the North Fork of Cherry. It took a running start and a bee line for Bear Run, miles away, with six dogs hotly pursuing. The chase was soon out of hearing. Several hours later and a good many miles down the line, the hunters met all the dogs coming back. They appeared fully satisfied.

The men read the sign that this was a two year old, in good running shape; that he had treed without a fight after a long run over on the Big Rocky; that hunters from the Richwood side had come from the Richwood side to the baying dogs and shot the bear out of the tree. The dogs then called it a day, and started back to camp. These are good, bear fighting dogs which stay at tree or hole until hunters come.

The men took time out for lunch. Just as they were getting in a good way of eating, Elmer's prize dog, Sing, wined a bear and she took off up the side of the mountain. When she opened the other dogs joined, Elmer was on his way, too, eating his lunch as he ran to cut off the chase. "He calculated right. Before he had time to finish eating, the chase headed his way, and a big old she bear like to have run over him. He piled her up with a well placed bullet; striking a strouder and ranging back. That bear was carrying the mail away from that place with six dogs in close pursuit.

They figured this was the old she bear which has been chased so much this fall; that she has a reputation as a dog killing character. Any way, she was just too much for a running and fighting trick. They think this is the same bear which was after a couple of weeks ago when they killed her cub. She crippled several dogs that time. The pet was in fine fur. While fat enough to be good eating, this bear was not thinking of baling up for the winter, as her paunch was full of meat. They lumped her weight off at 300 pounds.

Editorial

The asking of our Government for a popular loan of the stupendous sum of nine billion dollars from a still free America, during the month of December, was over subscribed. The next loan will probably be in April. Our West Virginia share was forty-five million dollars. The last report in my hands, the state was still short in meeting its quota. As near as I could figure out, the share which would naturally fall to Pocahontas county, based on banking resources, was about one hundred thousand dollars. As this line is being written, the subscriptions were about $160,000 and our people were still buying.

First and foremost this money is required to arm and feed, back and pay the men we have sent and are sending into the armed forces. Also in support of our Allies in our mutual efforts to maintain and spread freedom over the world.

A second and minor consideration is that loans to our government is the one safe and sure investment at this stage of the world's affairs. In ordinary times real estate is considered as good a place as any to put surplus money. The Victory Loans is guaranteed to the right to hold property. The German and Japs would confiscate land first off and when they are able to do what the Victory Loan will keep them from doing—invade and subjugate America.

In the final analysis land is basic wealth; but its monetary value is subject to fluctuation. The inflated land values of the middle twenties was a prime cause in bringing on a decade of depression.

If such basic investment as land is affected by inflation, the investment in government loans right now is considered one of the best safeguards against inflation.

While no one really knows all about money, they do know that when a great flood of the medium of exchange gets to running wild, the result is disastrous to business. The story is going the rounds about a man in Germany who put his savings year after year into an insurance policy. He expected to live on the interest when his earning days were over. When the policy came due, its thousands of dollars would not buy a parcel of flour.

I am wondering what the legislature will be able to do about the ever growing beer joint nuisance.

Where beer is sold in municipalities, the town council grants license and so can recall it as a police measure if the place gets tough and becomes a nuisance. In other words, each town has the kind of places its people approve or disapprove.

The plan in the neck is the roadside joints. Such are beyond the police power of the municipality. These have the shortcomings which reacted to forever ban the saloon from West Virginia. The degree of badness of such a joint depends in most part upon the man who runs it. Of course I know about the high sounding promise of the beer makers' association to spread over the land in intensive advertising campaigns to make beer retailing respectable. They were going to keep beer joints in line by seeing that the tax commissioner's office revoked licenses. I happen to know of instances where no more attention was paid to the recommendation of the beer people's representative than to the prosecuting Attorney, State Police, local law enforcement officers and good citizens generally.

The change I now advocate is for our County Courts to be given the responsibility of granting or refusing to grant license to sell beer. This certainly would have restraining influence to keep the wayside joints from being the unbearable nuisances that many of them are, and to abate any which did so become. This is local option. If the beer people really mean what they advertise, a desire to make the retailing of their sloppy product respectable, we can expect them to exert their influence to get the legislature to enact such a change in our license law.

Talking about taxes, the Victory Tax was welcomed with the coming of the New Year. This is a tax on payrolls, and it is a war measure. Every person working for wages of more than twelve dollars a week is taxed five percent on all wages over that amount. The employer is required to collect this tax, remit once a quarter year, and render a statement annually to each employee. A copy of this statement must also be sent to the collector of Internal Revenue.

This payroll tax will bring in an immense amount of money. While comparatively painless it will bring the war home to many who for one reason or another escapes the payment of the income tax.

Good News From the Home Front

GOVERNMENT, business and the press all unite in approving the job banks are doing in financing war production. Quietly and efficiently, the process of financing goes on every day, in every community. The 15,000 American banks are seeing to it that the billions of dollars needed by business firms and individuals keep flowing smoothly in an endless procession of loans. All who need money are invited to apply for a loan at this bank.

Let Us Have Peace

By O. H. Adkinson

Surmounting the tomb of General Ulysses S. Grant in New York appears the first phrase of Ambrose Bierce's famous quatrain in tribute to Grant's passing: "Let us have peace!"

That phrase would be appropriate for expression of what we could feel as newly elected officials in the Nation are about to assume their duties of office.

In that election we selected men who will represent us in the State Legislature.

We selected men who are to occupy a series of important State Administrative offices at Charleston.

We chose among candidates for a number of important County offices. And we selected men who during the next two years will serve as our spokesmen and Representatives in Congress.

In every case we were fortunate that we have in our collective hands a free citizenry to register our preferences without compulsion or coercion.

We are fortunate that there still exists a two-party system under which alone such freedom can survive.

Victors and vanquished alike might well offer up the prayer: "Let us have peace; Our clouded eyes fill, Father, with another light."

Since the November balloting it was inevitable, as it was desirable, that there should be examination of the vote totals, with examination and interpretation of the result.

And it is good to think that there was little bitterness or boasts tings on either side of the contests settled at the ballot box in accordance with the American tradition.

Those who are now counted among the losers will have another day, in which to seek vindication of their positions and support of their official acts.

Those who march under the banners of victory assumed immediately the solemn responsibility of administering the trust imposed in them and of proving themselves worthy of that trust.

The very decisiveness of the voters' verdict was such that it should intensify the minority's sober recognition of their new obligations as public servants.

And it should have a sobering effect upon the majority as well.

In this spirit, and in particular consideration accorded the seriousness of the times and the weightiness of the problem, which these things have brought, there is one, and only one sort of "appeasement" which currently commands itself to our people.

In the name of the Almighty there should be an end to warring spitefully with one another; let us newly recognize that we are neighbors; that our common foe is not without; but is so formidable as to counsel that we compose our several domestic differences to the point where we can submerge incidents to our united devotion to fundamentals. Let us newly perceive that there are still great first principles on which we can stand together in militant resistance to whatever perils may arise to menace our common heritage of ordered liberty.

And it should be the prayer of all that under the constitutional processes of this liberty, the Almighty may vouchsafe us sufficient humility to appreciate our duty; suppress all false prophets as sovereign truth and to hold in check that heartless greed which always girds itself in a nation's darkest hours.

In this spirit, may we have the wisdom to understand, and the judgment to so conduct such analysis of contemporary trends as will best fortify us with enough knowledge and grace to persist in the pathways which lead to the common good of all beneath our flag.

Absolutely essential to the realization of such a purpose must be our earnest efforts to rise above bitterness, to end all hatred; and to address ourselves humbly, but vigorously to the great immediate future which claims our common energy as a people.

Let us have peace!

December 27, 1942.

Dear Mr. Price:

With you please change my mailing address for the Times from Wendell Kershner, Street, Maryland, to:

Private Henry W. Kershner, 579th T. T. C. (Sp.), Ft. B. A. A. F. T. T. C. B. T. C. No. 4 Miami Beach, Florida.

I have received greetings from my Draft Board and am in the Air Corps here.

If you don't believe we boys here aren't having a heck of a time look at the December 28 issue of Life Magazine. The section "Miami Beach Goes to War" is typical of the routine we follow here. We live in one of the nicest hotels here and although its picture is in the Life Magazine I can't tell you which one it is because it is a military secret.

I guess you are wondering who I am and why I am writing you this letter aren't you? Well, I hail from Droop Mountain and you were the speaker at my graduation exercises at Hillsboro High School in 1940.

Well it is time for the lights to go out, and I must close but I am expecting my copy of the Times soon.

Respectfully yours, Henry W. Kershner.

Clyde Beverage received the following letter from his brother, Wilbur, who is serving with the American Army in New Guinea:

December 2, 1942.

Hello Sis and Clyde:

Will now try to write you a few lines to let you hear from me. I am O. K. except I am so hot I can hardly stand it. I am up in New Guinea and I don't like it a bit. You can't sleep for the mosquitoes at night and in the day time you burn up. So this is the next place to go.

I guess by the time you get this that Christmas and New Years will be about over so celebrate a little for me.

This little money order cash it and get Gatha, Buck, Clint, Sis and yourself a delayed present.

Say, Clyde, did you ever get those pictures that I sent to you by letters? If so keep them for me. If you look through them you will find a pretty good looking blonde. I want you to have Sis buy a pretty good compact and something and send to her. Tell her it is from me and that I still love her. Her address is—

Kannapolis, North Carolina.

Well, I have to go and eat, will be right back.

Here I am again. I did not eat much. Well, I guess I had better sign off for I have to have a rifle inspection so answer soon and don't forget my blonde.

Tell everybody I said hello. Write and let me know as soon as you get this.

Goodbye for now, Wilbur. Pvt. Wilbur Beverage, 4469, Co. D, 127 Inf. Reg. U. S. Army, A. P. O. 32, Care of Postmaster San Francisco, California.

Private and Mrs. Hughes M. Cook visited his mother, Mrs. mother, Mrs. Willie White, and her mother, Mrs. Lucy B. Hoover and her daughter, Mary Hoover. They returned Thursday to Washington, D. C. where Private Cook is stationed.

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Carpenter, of Millpoint, from their son, Clyde W. Carpenter, who is in the Service:

November 8, 1942.

Hello to all:

Thought I would try and write a few lines this evening since I haven't written for over a week week now. How is everything going by now? Fine now I hope. I am feeling just fine, never any better, not even sea sick. Can you imagine that? I always thought I would probably get sea sick, but I didn't I am glad to say.

Well, this time last week I was leaving camp and now I am out in the ocean. While we were back at camp I could not write and tell you all where I was so I will tell you something about it now. I was through Richmond, Virginia, about 2:30 o'clock and I got to see some of it and then we came through Washington.

Let us have peace!

passed pretty close by the Capital and it is nice too. So from there it was dark but we got in camp about 1:30 a. m., so that is about all I can tell. I hope they don't care for me writing that. You know now from now on they will censor our mail. We have to write only on one side of the paper. As far as I know we will get our mail about once a month so when you write send real long letters and tell me all the news for that is one thing I can't do. Our officers told us they thought that we could tell what place in Europe we were in so here it goes. We are going to be in Africa somewhere but I can't tell just what part of Africa we are going for they won't allow us but I hope this will help you some. Say, have you all ever heard from Lloyd yet? Let me know if you have and also Uncle Dan has to go to the army! We sure do have it nice here on the boat. There are six of us boys staying in a state room. Of course all the ship is not that way. Some of us boys were just lucky to get it I guess. We get two meals a day and they are pretty good meals. I usually go up on deck every morning and evening and stay an hour or two, but lately I took some guard duty, just to get out on the deck some. Since I am on the ship I wish I had joined the Navy instead of the Army for I like it just fine. The sea has been very calm except a day or two and then it was pretty rough. It has rained two or three times since we have been at sea but outside of that everything is nice.

Well this is Monday and everything is O. K. I did not get to finish this last night so I thought maybe I could write more if I would wait so here I go again. It is now after 7 o'clock and it is dark for I just came in off deck. I took a shave so now I feel very good. As I was starting to say we have changed time about 5 times now and we have to change once again before long so it is about 6 hours difference in time. I have been washing my face and hands in salt water and the soap it just won't lather at all so it is pretty hard to get the dirt off.

Well, I guess by the time you get this letter you will have gotten a card from the army telling we have arrived at our destination safely. I hope the card will have the postoffice address on it for we don't have our new address as yet. Probably the next letter I write we will have some kind of address to put on it. "I hope."

Well, we just got paid $5.00 again so I have about 18 bucks now.

This is Wednesday morning so I think I had better stop or I will have an over size letter written. I am O. K. and I hope you are too. I think we will reach our destination soon and I hope so.

When you write tell me all the news for I won't get mail very often and I will write every time I get a chance. Don't worry about me for I will take good care of myself and you all do the same so I am going to close for this time. Tell everyone my new address that you get on the card. So long till next time.

With lots of love, Winton.

This letter was received by Mrs. Gladys Moore from her brother, Corporal James H. Thomas, who is in the Army Air Corp and stationed in Alaska:

December 5, 1942.

Dear Gladys and all:

Will try and write a few lines before I go to bed. I don't know whether I told you or not but I know where Robert is up here some place. I was with meat Florence. I saw a couple of boys from Boston and they are real fellows.

I don't know whether this will pass censors or not but you know I was cold up here all the time. Yes it is. I think there is a couple of months during the summer that it warms up a bit.

I guess the money you sent me when I was in Florence. Thanks a million. You asked about sending me money here. You can send it and I will get it but do put yourself in a jam by sending me money. You can probably make good use of it and as far as I am concerned I can get by. If you do send any I would advise you to send a money order and send it this address that I give you. Notice that my A. P. O. number has been changed. It is now 544.

If I was in Florence now I would probably have a chance to see Jay B. He is only about a hundred miles from there. Well, write soon. That is about all I can think of to write now.

I hope Juniors sinus trouble is better. I feel for him for I used to have a touch of it once in a while. Tell Mutt, Eleanor and all of them to drop me a line once in a while. I had a card from Marie but have never gotten a letter.

I hear that they are calling a lot of the 3-A men now. Several of them around home have taken their examinations. Don't worry about me for I am getting along swell. Good night.

Lots of love, "Ratty."

The following letter is from our young friend, Earl W. Slavin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Slavin, of Marlinton, who is now serving with the United States Army in Africa:

Africa, November 26, 1942.

Dear Mr. Price:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am in Africa and getting along all right. The trouble with me is that I cannot understand anything they are talking about.

The closest town is (censored) and it sure is some place. Lots of nice houses and pretty girls, and plenty of wine.

We have had plenty of ships with us when we came across. I can't tell you anything about the landing we made but I will tell you all about it.

Nothing over here to write about so I will close, hoping to hear from you some time. Tell everybody hello for me.

Your Friend, "Barney."

We cannot wish him back today. Our father old and grey; He closed his eyes to earthly care And breathed a silent evening prayer And entered into Paradise.

It seemed so hard to see him go. But why to keep him here below? He'd labored long and earned a rest, He's now with those he loved the best, In Paradise.

So we must live here, you and I, With his life our beacon high, So when we're called to the land above, We'll be with him and ones we love In Paradise.

Vol. 42, No. 25

MARLINTON POCAHONTAS COUNTY, VIRGINIA, JANUARY 14, 1945

61.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

"Help Me Win MY Victory"

October 26—Received your letter and saw the picture of the money. They simply rob you when you have to have your clothes altered or cleaned here. I sure had a case yesterday when the Major and three more officers came around for inspection and there I stood with a shirt on that had more wrinkles than a prune—but they did not say a word. I sure do have a swell bunch of officers, all but one and he's plenty tough. I have begun to feel like a soldier already because they sure have been showering it down on us. One more week and I will have my basic training.

October 28—Who said I would not have to worry about the cold weather here! It has been cold as the dickens for the last two days. The wind blows so hard that it blew a 5 gallon jug wrong side out yesterday and never even cracked it.

November 10—I sure have been busy the past week. We have been having rifle drill for almost a week and we got some practice on how to use hand grenades. The Army sure has some funny ways to do things—I do not know whether I told you or not what was in. When I first came here I was in the H area and they moved us to M area about a half mile away and last Saturday they moved us back to H area. Moving in the Army is a big job too if you have to carry all your stuff.

I am still the same and feeling fine and liking it alright. The weather here is about the same—pretty cool at night and warm in day. I do not see how the married men escaped the draft as long as they did in Marlinton. There are lots of married men in my company. Tell Shannon I will see him in Tokyo. The reports from Over There sure do sound good but that does not mean that the war will soon be over. I sure have not been hurting myself this week since they put me in with the firefighters. I have to report to the fire station at 8 o'clock in the morning. It has been raining here all week so all we had to do was sit around and play poker and listen to the radio until 11 o'clock. From 1:00 until 3:00 we have to have a lecture on fire fighting and then we are off until 4:30 when we have a treat.

I have not been to Sunday School the last two Sundays. I was on guard on Saturday night and had to sleep on Sunday and I just did not go the other time. We have Sunday School in the building next to our barracks. There is a radio right near my bunk and it is going all the time.

December 23—I guess you will have a white Christmas in Marlinton. We won't have a white one here but we will have a wet one. It has been raining all this week and the wind is blowing outside now like a cyclone. It is pretty cold here but nothing like it is there.

I am back on the rifle range again and my knees and elbows are plenty sore too. The Captain told us today that we might not have to work Christmas day. I sure hope we don't. There is a stage show here Christmas Day and the camp band is going to be on the air for 15 minutes at 5:15. They sure have some good songs here.

If you got my other letter you know I got the package alright.

I believe I would rather be a buck private than a captain because they don't expect as much of you. Oh well, I am not going to worry about it. I read Elmer Taylor's letter in the Times and it was good too.

January 1, 1945—Well Christmas has come and gone but it did not seem like Christmas at all. It just seemed like another Sunday here in camp.

You cannot tell it is winter time by the weather here. One day it will be warm and the next day pretty cool. Just like early fall in West Virginia.

They never gave us any heavy underwear until yesterday and we got our helmets too and gosh! they are heavy. Everytime I put mine on my neck sinks down between my shoulders about two inches believe it or not.

Well I am on the move again. They took me out of the fire-fighters and put me in Headquarters Company and that is where you get K-P every other day and something just as bad in between. The whole 10th Port is going to move from H area to F area tomorrow and that will be a job. A person does not realize he has so much stuff until he tries to put it all in two barracks bags and carry it for a mile. I am expecting to get shipped out of here any day. They already have sent about 100 out of the 10th Port and all of them were in Headquarters Company, the same part of the 10th Port I am in now. THE LEGISLATURE

The 1945 session of the Legislature meets today, Wednesday. On Tuesday night the Democratic majority, in caucus, selected Delegate John E. Amos, of Kanawha County, Speaker of the House; Senator James Paul, Jr., of the Wheeling District, President of the Senate. Clerks Aliff, of the House, and Watkins, of the Senate, were re-elected. The Republican minority named Delegate Everett Moore, of Moundsville, for Speaker, and Senator G. O. Young, of Buckhannon, for President. These thus become minority leaders in their respective Houses.

In thus organizing, I say, the Legislature got off to good start for honest, effective work and so redeem the good name of our State and our party. The scandal of the last Legislature came within a grazer of putting the opposition in power in the House of Delegates. Our West Virginia just will not forever stand for shenanigans on the part of public servants.

United States Army, is spending a fourteen day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Kelley, of Knappa Creek. He is stationed at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana and this is his first furlough home since he enlisted in the Army on March 26, 1942.

Pifer had as their dinner guests: Esco Johnson, of the Marines, stationed at New River, North Carolina; Marvin Duming, of the Army, stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia, and Frank Dickson, of the Navy, stationed at Norfolk, Virginia. Marine Johnson returned to his duties Saturday after spending a short furlough with his mother, Mrs. Jacob Sharp.

All male workers not employed in essential industries and who would be willing to accept employment as track laborers for railroad companies should get in touch with the United States Employment Service, Louisville, immediately. A representative from this office will be in Cass, Friday at 1 p.m. and in Marlinton on Saturday at the Court House from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. It is vitally necessary that these workers be secured as soon as possible.

J. S. Parsons, of Williamson, has accepted a position as pharmacist with the Royal Drug Store. He is a native of Clarksburg; was trained in pharmacy as a service man in the United States Navy. He has worked in Keyser and in Williamson. He comes highly recommended as a pharmacist and a man. As soon as a residence can be secured Dr. Parsons will move his family here. We all welcome him to the business and social life of Pocahontas county.

Thursday morning the building owned by E. H. Williams, across the street from the post office caught on fire from some cause unknown. The volunteer fire department soon put the flames out, with some damage from fire and water. The building was occupied as a residence by John Phillips.

Senator Fred C. Allen and Delegate June McElwee went to Charleston on Monday, to be present at the opening of the Legislature on Wednesday.

WILLIUM'S LETTER

Charleburg, W. Va.
January 6, 1943.

Dr. Calvin Price,
Editor, Etc.,
Marlinton, W. Va.

Dear Dr:

The kinds of weather we've been having the last month had me baffled until the old reliable family journal from Marlinton arrived and now I am a lot wiser. One guy told me when there was a lot of rain during December it would also rain through January, while another said rain in December meant a dry summer. From your prognostications I find not these are to be expected. At the break-up before Christmas says you, two more after, so it will be a broken winter—I also learn you did not hear any thunder on Christmas day which means the snakes are still sleeping. However I am glad to learn the wild geese were right on time and three flocks flying in V formation passed over Pocahontas on that day. I didn't hear of anybody around Harrison County seeing these formations so they must have detoured this section or the people were celebrating Christmas in some other fashion than looking for geese. If this means an early spring, as you indicate it'll be ok for the weather we've been having has been too uncertain to do anybody any good. If it'd get cold and stay cold, that'd be all right, but these spasms are too much. One morning recently I came down street thinking it was a little chilly and then I looked at a thermometer and it said 10 below and I durd near froze right in my tracks. Those are the things I don't like about sudden changes in the weather and if you can do anything about them now's the time to prove they didn't make a mistake when they deposited that Doctor's degree on your benign brow.

WILLIUM.

Dear William:

That letter of yours received and contents duly noted. As for me and winter weather, I hold to and take stock in the Rule Days. I don't (doctor's language and being interpreted, means that in the last three days of January. These days rule, according to the ancients, the turbulent months of January, February, March. Last Friday started out to be what one old timer used to call a nebulous day—a blue misty—changing a little for the better, with snow and a little sunshine. Put it down, January weather will be changeable, with streaks of lean cold, some thaws with a few days of plying. February will show improvement over January in the way of weather, with Ground Hog Day properly cloudy to insure the early spring, guaranteed by the warm, sunshiny Sunday, January 3, which controls the weather for the month of March. Incidentally, Sunday proved a weather breeder of the worst sort. Historically, I hold it was on January 3 BC44, a squally day that Julius Caesar got his notice to beware of the Ides of March.

There are so many signs and portents to be taken into consideration in the matter of checking up on winter weather. These are war times and every body knows that battles being falling weather. One school of weather makers assure us the area in which our storms breed is the Berling sea, where the Aleutian Islands top up. Knocking out the Japs on Kiska might have had effect in giving us a winter in which there will be thirty snow storms before it is done with us.

However, I put no stock in the theory that the completion of the great Military Road through the Canada wilderness to Alaska will make our weather worse. I hold the drift will be the other way to warm the Yukon weather.

Stirring up the Great American Desert to raise wheat for the last war gave us fourteen years dust storms. I heard over radio that North Africa had already experienced 52 sand storms instead of the usual seasonal average of five. They said the armies and their tanks stirred up the dust, and the winds did the rest.

In the immortal words of the late Horace Greely we shall see what we shall see. So, dear William, do not hold it against the near sighted people of the metropolis of West York on the Fork at the mouth of Elk Creek if they were so intently watching their steps this icy time on Christmas Day they did not have their heads up on the look out for enemy airplanes and the banking harbinger of spring will grow. It has been a long time since they ran the Indians out of the country. May be they have the number and were looking out for them.

the land and the water. There has been a great deal of fighting of the wild fowl, themselves all mixed up by the thundering. Hand it to the geese to not take things for granted and get enough napping.

Several springs ago a belated flight of geese had to side track on Knapps Creek, while a matron laid an egg. The egg proved to be a dud; it failed to hatch.

Bears are still awake in the Black Forest, and rakings in the snow for mast. I tracked ground hogs in the snow on Christmas Day, thinking at first I was after coons. I saw and heard my first robin on January 6, yet a farmer told me blue birds and robins had wintered in his woods on dogwood berries. The other morning I woke with the spring call of the bob white in my ears. It was a startling out in the apple tree, a taunting me.

So, you see, with natures own children all so mixed in their minds; if it had not been for the good old rule days of January one, two, and three, I would be down and out for a general idea of what in the way of weather we will have handed to us in the way of weather in the next three months. So, with all assurance in the world, I put my neck out to say this will be what the Russians term an orphans winter.

Regards and yours truly,
Calvin

P. S.—Since the above was faltering written, have been strengthened by two more signs. A big snake was found crawling in the snow on Thorny Creek, and a hop toad jumping on Gauley.

One of the pieces of fine arms collected a couple years ago in America and sent to Britain was a Colt's revolver contributed by a Mr. Gray, of Washington. He attached to it the following paraphrased lines:

"Kind friend, for Heaven's sake forbear,
To let me a German come to wear
Blest be the man whose aim is straight,
And woe to him who draws too late."

The revolver reached London. A lady of Liverpool wrote it all up for a paper. That spread the news. A small English boy wrote Mr. Gray, expressing thanks and requesting an American flag to hang in a bomb shelter beside the British flag.

Finally the revolver came into possession of a Captain in the Home Guard up in North Ireland. He wrote Mr Gray an appreciative letter and asked for a photograph.

Finally three Washington papers got wind of the matter.

Mr Gray is an invalid. The appreciation of his effort in the war for the preservation and spread of freedom for free people has been the source of great pleasure to him. He spent a month one summer in the home of Dr Traynham, at Sweet Springs, Monroe County.

This week the legislature meets in regular session at Charleston. One of the matters to be considered is that of the State income tax. It will be cut down or done away with entirely. There are a lot of good men who favor doing away with this tax. It came about the depression, when every possible means of raising tax money dried foods.

seemed to be in order to keep the State running and pay up the State income tax. I cannot say that I am in favor of abolishing the State income tax. My reason is that while we can now well do without the money it is raising there is another tax which was enacted some twenty years ago as an emergency measure. I refer to the gross sales tax. This is not nearly so just and equal as an income tax. There is no call to pay unless you have made the money. Under the gross sales tax, you pay whether your business has shown a profit or a loss during the year. In a way, the gross sales tax is a license paid to do business, and in a way it is a depletion tax on such things as coal, oil gas. My idea is to cut down the income tax, but leave enough so as to cut down the gross sales tax too. This will mean a division of the tax load.

77 COUNTY FAMILIES GET FARM SECURITY MERIT CERTIFICATES

Seventy-seven farm families in Pocahontas county, who are cooperating with the Farm Security Administration, have earned Merit Award Certificates from the Federal Government for the patriotic production of foods needed in the war effort, according to Ople C. Lowe, RR Supervisor and Cletice S. McLaughlin, HM Supervisor of the County FSA office.

"The Merit Award," said Mr. Lowe, "is the small farmer's 'E' for Excellence." It means that he has met and surpassed production goals set for him. It means also that he has met them by careful and ambitious planning and by working as he has never worked before. Original goals set in the fall of 1941 were difficult. They looked almost impossible at the time, but Merit Award winners reached them.

"The nation," Mr. Lowe continued, "may well be grateful to these small farmers for the effort they have put forth and with their accomplishments. With food shortages threatening, with railroads too burdened by men and munitions to carry normal food supplies, with every phase of the war effort depending essentially upon increases in food for industrial workers, service men and civilian populations—our small farmers have helped deliver the goods."

FSA borrowers in this county increased their production of foods on an average of:

Milk	15%
Chickens	10%
Eggs	18%
Haisers	10%
Pigs	20%
Feed	25%
Yardage	20%
Fruit	60%

Mrs. McLaughlin observed that with some familiar foods fast disappearing from our grocery shelves, the importance of these increases is dramatic.

"Production by small farmers is gratifying to the Government. It reflects the years the Farm Security Administration personnel have spent in encouraging land improvement, giving supervision to farm and home management, helping improve rural health and lending operating funds," she said.

"Not only have our small farmers rallied to the aid of the war effort with great increases in food production, but they are rapidly repaying their loans from the Government."

Both Mr. Lowe and Mrs. McLaughlin cited the fact that Farm Security families not only produced more food for national consumption but relieved a severe strain on processing facilities by home canning and storage of food.

My Navy Days

My friend Decline McLaughlin, of the United States Army, stationed at Camp White, Oregon, has just sent me a short furlough at the time of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin.

Sergeant Paul J. Callahan spent a day furlough with his mother, Mrs. Edith Callahan and family, of Grand. Sergeant Callahan enlisted in the Military Intelligence Department in July. His location and duties are not revealed.

Staff Sergeant William D. Wanless, Jr., son of W. D. Wanless, of Shady Fork, was home on furlough for a few days. Sergeant Wanless spent most of his furlough time traveling as he is stationed at Camp White, Oregon.

Sergeant MacArthur L. Busard, of the United States Army, is spending a thirty-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Busard, of Stony Bottom. It is the first time Sergeant Busard has been home for four years. He has been stationed in foreign service.

Pfc. James Robert Sharp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Sharp, of Marlinton, has received his promotion to Corporal. Corporal Sharp is with the United States Army Air Corps, and is stationed at Miami Beach, Florida.

The following letter was received by Earl Sutton from his brother, Raymond Sutton, of the United States Army Air Force:

December 20, 1942.
Gardner Field.

Hello Earl:

Will drop you a line or two to let you know I am O. K. and hope you are the same. We sure are having a time tonight. There are some guys here who can really play the guitar and there are some who can play the accordion too.

I expect to get my Corporal stripes this month. Then I will get $66.00 a month and boy, will I be tickled. Earl, I sent some Christmas presents. (I mean one around the week, but for all the money I had right now. It is in with some things I want to buy. I sent it with their parents in order to save postage. I will try and send the rest something later or bring them something when I come home on a furlough. I am expecting to come home Easter. I think when I come home I can get all the gas for my car I want up to 300 gallons. That is plenty for one or two nights, he-he.

Earl, I have a notion to sell my watch and guitar. I can get $20.00 for the watch and $7.50 for my guitar but I don't know whether to sell them or not. I am going to Los Angeles this weekend and stay for two days. Hope to have a grand time. Roy is going with me.

I am going to send some money home next month to come home on a furlough. It takes about 4 days and 5 nights to come so I will not get to stay very long. They have quit giving 30 day furloughs so I'll have to take 14 days I guess.

We had some pictures taken the other day. I am sending you some of them and am sending Mom some of them too. They are not good at all but they are the best I have so I will just send them on.

I worked last night so I do not have to work today. All I have to do is write letters so I am doing my part of that. I wish I could tell you some news but there is nothing to tell around here, only California is the worst state in the Union. Earl, about all you see, wherever you go, are drunkards, old, middle-aged and young. Old men with canes, get drunk and just fall around like a young punk would. The married women go with the soldiers like single ones do, no respect for anybody at all.

Well the sun is shining today and it is pretty warm but it sure gets cold here at night. We can see snow on the mountains 60 miles away but none falls in the valleys. I rode over the mountain the other day in a plane and it sure looked pretty. We saw where they made the western movies and it sure is a wilderness.

Well, Earl, it is about time I get and get something to do. I will then hope you have a Very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. I know I won't be in the first time I was ever away from home for Christmas. Be good and answer soon. Tell Mom and the kids I said hello.

So Long, Your brother,
Private Raymond Sutton,
761 School Squadron, Sp.,
Gardner Field,
Taft, California.

Mrs. Delbert Gillispie received the following letter from her brother Lowell Snyder, of the United States Navy:

December 29, 1942.

Dear Max:

Now that I have a little time I will answer your letter that I got a good while ago. I want to write to you again before New Years. Then I think I shall resolve to write you real often, if the letters are short. Letters from home folks are the most welcome prizes one gets when away from home. Of course to get letters one has to write letters to get letters.

Thanks very much for the package of "Pocahontas Times" you sent me. I am just about up on all that is happening in the country. Please send me the later issues. I would send in a subscription and have the paper come directly to me, but I never know whether I will be here from one week until the next. Every day I see at our mail office piles of papers and magazines from back home to boys who have been shipped out.

Christmas was about as usual here. We had a grand feast of roast turkey, cranberry sauce and all the things that go with them. Starboard watch got two days of special liberty, but I did not stay out all the time. I had seen the most of the sights of this town before, and buses were loaded beyond standing room. So I came in and stood a night watch on the front gate for the regular mate who wanted to go home and make his formal wedding announcement. (It is amazing how many sailors are getting married.) He said he had a swell time. So did I. It was Christmas night. So by morning we had the big full and several AWOLs. Many thanks for your pretty card. I received several nice cards, some from home folks, some from sailors and friends and patients who had gone home on medical discharge. It is very nice to be remembered by old friends and new ones, too. I suppose you and Delbert and the children had a happy time.

I met some swell guys in the hospital corps. Most of them are a higher class of men, I believe, than the general run of the Navy. When a fellow has a man for a patient for weeks or months he really gets to know him. He even gets to know the patient's wife or mother and father and family. Sometimes it gets tiresome listening to their stories, but it does them good to unload themselves and it does us no harm.

You ask me what kind of duties I have. Well, just about everything imaginable. Of course about some of our duties we tell no one. But I have been a painter, carpenter, nurse, druggist, waiter, firefighter, bookkeeper, dishwasher, commissary man, master at arms, and many other things. Here no one knows just what he will be doing next.

Right now I am in charge of the security department of our hospital, which includes gas, fire, and air raid defense. The Captain put me at this about two weeks ago and I enjoy it. I work under and with a young lieutenant doctor and get along very smoothly. He is from New York but I get a lot of kick out of his Harvard and Bostonian lingo. Much of the time I have little to do in my office and so I get in with the lab boys and help make tests in serology, haematology, pathology, or some of the other examinations. The autopsies are the most interesting of all, but sometimes I think my sense of smell is too strong for that sort of work. But I am getting used to it. Maybe I will be a doctor some day yet. Only one more step to go to Chief Pharmacist Mate.

A few more days and I will have six months of service in the Navy. Some call me a sailor, but I don't feel very salty or seafaring. But I am trying to catch

Every day I see at our mail office piles of papers and magazines from back home to boys who have been shipped out.

Glad you are all well. So am I. Have not been sick a day yet. Got a letter from Mother a few days ago. Don't wait as long to write as I did, and don't forget the Times.

Your milor brother,
Lowell Snyder, Ph M 2-C,
Naval Hospital,
Newport, Rhode Island.

Dear Editor:

I used to be a reader of the Times. You can print this in the Soldiers column.

We wait in line to go to mess,
We wait in line to shave,
We wait in line for cigarettes,
No matter how we rave.
We wait in line to comb our hair,
We wait in line for beer,
We wait in line to pay our fare
To get away from here.
We wait in line to get a pass,
We wait in line for pay,
We even wait in line at night,
When time to hit the hay.
Oh, if I die in battle and God claims this soul of mine,
I wonder if to get above,
I'll have to wait in line!

Charles Wilson, a Marlinton boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Wilson, of Richwood, is now seeing active service with the armed forces in the South Pacific.

Private Steel Cloonan writes from Camp Shelby, Mississippi, that his address is now 502 Ordnance Company. He says he is not especially sold on army life, but he has a job to do and he is doing it. About all he has seen in the South is sand and pine trees. He says that a body does not appreciate home until he is away and cannot get back.

Lawrence C. Galford, A. S. United States Naval Training Station, Platoon 610, Norfolk, Virginia, was home from January 6 to January 11 visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Galford, at Cass.

Corporal Paul Skaggs was home on a weeks furlough with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Skaggs. The Corporal is stationed at Lincoln, Nebraska.

Robert Hefner, of the United States Navy, is home on a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hefner. He is stationed at Camp Perry.

Mrs. Nellie Scott, of Hillsboro, received the following letter from her brother, who is serving with the United States Army in North Africa:

December 21, 1942.

Dear Sister:

Just a line to let you know I am well and hope this will find you and Jewel fine. Well I guess you are having a good Christmas by this time. I bet it is plenty cold there now. We are having nice weather here all but a little rain and mud. Is Harold still in Virginia and is Mason Vaughn still at home?

Well I am in North Africa now and am getting along very well. Nothing at all to kick about. I have not received any mail for a long time; only a box of candy from the church.

I would still like to get the Times. Another boy from Marlinton and I used to fight to see who would read the Times first but we don't fight any more.

Well answer soon and tell me all the news and the addresses of the boys from around there. I would like to know where they are. Will close.

With love, Hubert Rose.

How to "PREPARE" Tin Cans for War Duty

Clean can well and soak off label

Tuck cut-off ends in can

Cut off both ends and flatten firmly

Save in separate containers and give to an authorized collector

UNCLE SAM NEEDS YOUR TIN!

Follow these Official Instructions by the War Production Board!

Nearly ninety percent of America's tin formerly came from Malaya. And tin is vital to the war effort—for airplane parts, machine gun mounts, gas masks, countless other military uses! That's why Uncle Sam needs your old tin cans. Read the simple instructions below and cooperate with your Salvage Committee, Defense Council, and Municipal Authorities to help make the salvage of tin cans a big success in your community.

Important Facts to Help You.

All paint, oil, varnish, floor polish, or cone-shaped cans are not wanted for salvage. Evaporated or condensed-milk cans are not worth saving. Put these with your trash.

Coffee cans and others with painted-on-can labels are wanted.

It is not necessary to wash off the small amount of glue which holds labels.

Be Patriotic.—Keep this leaflet in your kitchen for handy reference.

Why "Prepared Cans" Are Needed

1. Washing prevents deterioration of tin coating—assures sanitary conditions—and prevents contamination of detinning fluid.
2. Removing top and bottom permits the free flow of detinning fluid over all surfaces of the can.
3. Firmly flattened cans occupy less space in collection, shipment, and detinning operations—thereby decreasing handling costs and increasing plant capacity for detinning.

Start Saving Cans Now.—Properly "prepared cans" are clean and fit solidly into a basket or other container. They can be stored in the home conveniently for an indefinite period until collection methods are arranged.

Collection Day.—The designated collection day for your neighborhood will be announced and publicized intensively through your local salvage committee. Watch for newspaper and radio announcements.

NOT A SINGLE CAN SHOULD BE WASTED

VICTORY

IS OUR BUSINESS IN 1943

There is one, big, important thing to be done—and that is to win this war. We will do anything we can to contribute to victory.

We serve our country directly in many ways, and indirectly in many others—mainly by helping our customers and our community.

Whether you are engaged in actual war work or in one of the many important civilian services, we are ready and anxious to help you. That is our pledge for 1943.

VOL. 42 NO. 2

MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, JANUARY 21, 1943

50 CENTS A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE LEGISLATURE

The 1943 session got off to a good standing start last week by majority in both Houses taking the hit in their months' closing their presiding offices without let, hindrance or undue pressure by parties known and unknown from out the bounds actual membership.

Not that the Honorable gentlemen elected would have accepted their high positions with strings tied to them, the first result of both houses thus carrying out their duty and right and responsibility of choosing their own presiding officers is to leave free the hands of Speaker Amos, of the House, and President Paul, of the Senate, to exercise the duties of their stations without fear or favor; answerable only to conscience and the good of the people as a whole.

The first act of the legislature was the passing up to the governor of a law giving heads of State departments of government the power to name assistants to run the office in case said regularly elected heads went into military service. The vote was unanimous in both Houses. The act grew out of the refusal of W. B. Wagon, who has occupied the office of Attorney General by appointment, to surrender the office to Captain Kay Thomas, who was regularly elected to fill the vacancy. The high point was raised by the occupier of the office that Captain Thomas, in spite of his popular election, was ineligible for the office by reason of his position in the Army. The Supreme Court by unanimous vote cleared the office by preemptory order, and said they would write their decision later. It would be one whole of a law which would paralyze service in the army.

As this is written, it appears to be the consensus of opinion by newspaper correspondents in Charleston that our Senator Fred Allen can have the chairmanship of either judiciary committee, which carries the position of majority floor leader, or the chairmanship of the committee on finance and taxation—the most important one of the present session. The Senator was chairman of this committee once and a member of it during two sessions of the legislature.

Our delegate June McElwee got the chairmanship he requested, that of the committee on agriculture.

Charleston—In the announcement on Tuesday of the standing committee of the House of Delegates, the Delegate from Pocahontas, Hon. June McElwee places high. He is chairman of the committee on Agriculture and vice-chairman of the all important committee on Taxation and Finance. His other committee placements are Banks and Corporations, Forestry and Conservation, Humane Institutions and Public Buildings, Temperance, Game and Fish.

The War Department has announced new restrictions on the mailing of all packages to soldiers overseas.

Some Reflections

This world goes round and round and round like a dog chasing his tail. If there ever was a time in the history of humanity when men had need to pray it is now. This world is in a mess. I am not pessimistic, for I believe the lights will be turned on again all over the world. This belief, this firm faith, prompts this writer to pen these thoughts and reflections.

As to prayer—either God does hear and answer our humble petitions which we ask in faith, or He makes His will known to us; then inspires and encourages us to pray for preparation to receive the blessings He would send. In a meeting where we were holding some years ago, a young man was asked to dedicate his life to service of Christ. He told me that he considered himself about as good as our church members. When I asked him if he prayed frequently, he replied that he did not. I asked him if he prayed at all, he said that he prayed when he got into a pinch.

Over a year ago our President requested the people of the nation to go into their respective places of worship and pray for national guidance. I was then living in Parsons, Tucker County. Some of the local Odd Fellows had asked me to visit their lodge the evening of January 1. When the "good of the Order" came, the Noble Grand asked me to speak. In speaking, reference was made to the President's request. We all stood and I led the group in earnest prayer. All at once, in the midst of the prayer, I was suddenly impelled to pray for General Douglas MacArthur, on the Bataan battlefield, in the Philippines. For days and nights this writer found himself pouring out earnest prayer for the General and his men. Then the last week in January I was just as strangely led to pray that General MacArthur might be able to get out of the Islands safely, to see this struggle to a finish. It was not till the first days of February that the news was flashed over the world that MacArthur had escaped to Australia. Was all this a strange experience? Not so strange to a man who believes in a God of righteousness. There must have been tens of thousands of praying people lifting up prayer for the Philippines General.

Just a few weeks ago Eddie Rickenbacker gave to the world a story of prayer out on the deep blue sea when it looked like all was lost. You either heard him tell it, or you have read about it. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." Some of us could not give over to the thought that Rickenbacker was lost. And he tells us he did not lose heart, but believed that rescue would come. And it did come. On the morning of Dec. 26 this preacher was in his study putting some finishing touches on a sermon built round the words "The foundation of God Standeth," and "The Eternal God is Thy Refuge, and Underneath are the Everlasting Arms." The strangely effectual power of prayer was being emphasized, some illustrations from:

Food for Victory

Last week fifteen meetings were held in Pocahontas County for to present the food production goal to our farmers. The aggregate attendance on these meetings was 305, and I think this was pretty good. Last year the farm production goal was presented at one big meeting held at the County Seat. Many more farmers were reached directly by the community meetings held over the county.

This year goal for corn is 4,900 acres; an increase of 197 acres over last year. Oats 2,335 acres, and this is 191 acres less than last year. Barley 594 acres; an increase of 175 acres. All tame hay 17,784 acres, 863 acres less than last year. Potatoes 531 acres, an increase of 38 acres.

January, 1942, there were 14,325 head of cattle on Pocahontas farms; that date, 1943, there were 14,436 head; the goal for January, 14,614.

The 1942-1943 dates for sheep were 24,808 and 24,977 head. The goal for next January is 24,830, a small decrease.

The goal for pig hogs is 1,400 for this year, an increase of 146.

Milk cows remain the same, 3341 head, but these cows are requested to produce 127,000 lbs. more milk than in 1942.

In 1942, there were 42,000 hens on Pocahontas farms. This year the number is 44,000. Chickens raised last year numbered 64,000; the goal this year is 72,000.

The egg production last year was 385,000 dozens; the goal this year is 428,000 dozens.

The number of turkeys raised last year on our farms was 6600; 1300 more are wanted this year.

The farmers of Pocahontas county are thus asked to do their bit by increased production of milk, eggs, poultry and pork and crops as corn, potatoes and barley. Their food production for last year exceeded that of 1941, and the market price was much better. The labor and other conditions were not so good either. This year, with more men in the army and in war plants, with scarcity of machinery, repairs, fertilizer and insecticides, it is an effort to equal and go beyond last year's record. However, with a favorable season it can be done.

These community meetings will be immediately followed up by personal visits to each and every farm in Pocahontas county by AAA committeemen. They will check up on intended production and what assistance the War Board can give to do the job in the way of help in solving problems such as labor, machinery, repairs, transportation and other problems.

Old Testament history were being prepared, the last of which was God sending ravens to feed Elijah at the brook Cherith. Just then a breath of inspiration came, and the following poem was written within a few minutes:

A sea-gull saw a rubber raft adrift upon the sea;
And it was some starving men.
As hungry as could be.
These men, they made a plea to God,
O Lord, our need we do declare;
And in His mercy Jehovah heard.
And freely answered prayer.
Just then the gull heard from above,
A word to it was given;
Go down to these poor dying men,
Your Maker speaks from heaven.
The bird obeyed, And down it flew;
And on one's head it lit;
It seemed to say in accents clear,
"I've come to do my bit."
"Your life is dear, Your cause is great;
And mine so very small;
I'll make a sacrifice to help,
I'll gladly give you all."
They used the bird, Good food it made.
They lived to tell the story;
A plea in faith. The light broke thru.
They gave to God the glory.

I wish to commend you in giving space to our boys in the service, who can write home to loved ones and acquaintances, who like to hear from them. It is indeed commendable. We all hope and pray for a better world when all this inferno of death and devastation is done with.

December 25, 1942.

Hallo Joe:
I received your letter that you wrote November 27 and sure was glad to hear from you and that you all were getting along good. I am getting along just fine and having a very nice Christmas. Last night we went around through the camp and sang Christmas songs and lit a big bonfire and had a good time. This morning Santa brought us some candy and oranges. Today we had a fine turkey dinner and this afternoon I did my washing. If I get this letter finished before chow I will call it a good day.

Did you get your deer this year or did you do like we did last year, miss it? Did you use my pump gun any this year? Keep it in good shape for me for next year I expect to use it. There are several West Virginia boys with me here and they are coming in to hunt with me next year (or we hope so.)

Have you got those pictures of mine from Tennessee yet? If you have you keep them for me for I don't think that you can send them here. I forget what they are but they were taken in South Carolina and I hope they are good.

I bet you are having a lot of fun hunting rabbits. How are your dogs getting along? Is Tony a good hunter?

I bet Bert is tickled to death to get back on the tannery! Is he still staying with Cecil?

Well that is about all for this time. Write soon.

Your brother, James.

This letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Dales, of Huntersville, from his brother, Earl, January 7, 1943.

Dear Brother and Sister:

I got back to camp O. K. and was glad to hear from you. I did not have long to stay but was glad to get home. It was the day after Christmas. I was thinking Army life is getting with Cecil as far as he is concerned. I was a little home sick when I got back here but I guess that is nature.

I feel fine and ready now and hope you all got home O. K. and had a swell New Year. How did Sue's finger get? Hope it all right by this time.

Christmas a year ago we were all at home together and this one Fred was Over Sea and Robert in the Service and could not be

There, it don't seem to me like Christmas has come yet. I had a letter yesterday from Mother and her leg is some better. I am sure glad of that for it sure was bad during the holidays. Cecil came back to Maryland and stopped to see his girl friend.

I thank you both for the present. I think it was real nice.

Write often for a letter from home folks sure does look good.

Your brother, Earl.

Private Earl Dolan, Co. A, 351st Inf., 88th Div., A. P. O. No. 33, Camp Gruber, Oklahoma.

Africa, writes his sister, Mrs. Jewell Scott, at Hillsboro, as follows:

December 31, 1942.

Dear Sister: Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope this will find you and Jewell well. I got three letters from you today and one of them was mailed three months ago. Was glad to hear that Harold had a furlough and was getting along good. I had a letter from him today. You said that you write to me every week. Well I sure do not get your letters and I never got any of the packages either. I guess the dirty Germans got them.

It sure does rain here and there is plenty of mud. You said you were going to send me one of Harold's pictures. I will be glad to get it. Is Mother getting the money I am sending home?

I am still in Africa. There is only one boy here that I knew before I came here. Has any of the boys I know from around there been sent Over Sea yet? You asked if I wanted anything. Yes, I want the Pocahontas Times.

I was sorry to hear about Mr. Hendrick's accident but still he is a lucky man to still be there.

Well there is nothing that one can write about here so good luck to all. Answer soon.

Lots of love.

Hubert Rose.

Flyer Found

On Monday evening about 10 o'clock the dead body and wreckage of plane of James B. Pierce, Jr., of Charleston, were found on Straight Creek Mountain in West Virginia. Mr. Pierce had been missing since last Thursday night about four o'clock. He left Washington to fly to his home in Charleston. He got caught in a heavy snow storm and high wind. His plane was heard over Jerryville between seven and eight o'clock that night. Parties in planes and on foot searched these big woods on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Finally Lonnie Hinkle, of Richwood, a deaf mute, came upon the wrecked plane and the dead body on the north side of Straight Creek Mountain, opposite the mouth of Big Run, which flows into Gaudy River, a few miles below Three Forks. A part of the plane was still hanging in a tree.

There was a large attendance at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bank of Marlinton held on Monday afternoon. The cashier's report for the year showed the institution to be in excellent condition. A substantial amount was placed in the surplus fund and a dividend declared. The following were elected directors: R. S. Hickman, Charles A. Sharp, S. J. Pyles, J. G. Woodell, Dr. N. R. Pries, E. C. Smith, Richard McNeel, Dr. J. W. Pries, S. P. Curry, J. G. Harper, W. L. At the meeting of the Board of Directors, Dr. J. W. Pries was re-elected president; Charles A. Sharp and J. L. McNeel, vice-presidents; A. H. McFerrin, cashier and June McElwee, assistant cashier.

Squire T. S. McNeel is making such good recovery at the University Hospital at Charlottesville that it is expected he will be brought home this week. He suffered the amputation of a leg above the knee last week.

Have You Figured YOUR Tax?

LAST year a married man with $2400 income paid a Federal income tax of $71. This year he'll pay $185 income tax plus $33 Victory Tax—total Federal tax, $223. His tax has risen in four times in 1941 alone. The new taxes pose this major problem to American wage earners: How can people stand a tax equal, in many cases, to five, eight, ten or more times what it was in 1941?

ACROSS THE STATE (In 1893)

(Dr. Paul H. Price, the State Geologist, came across a clipping from the Wheeling Intelligence of December 10, 1893, and he considerably passed it on to me by reason of local interest. It is an article written by the late Col. Henry B. Hubbard, of Wheeling. He was a Union soldier, and a dealer in lumber. Among his other scientific interests was that of geology. The Hubbards are of New England stock, and the family is an outstanding one. I recall with pleasure acquaintance with two members of this family, the late Hon. W. P. Hubbard, who served in the House of Representatives from his Congressional District; also his likewise distinguished son, the late Nelson Hubbard, outstanding lawyer and member of the Legislature.

The trip starts at Wheeling, leads by way of Columbus, Ohio, Portsmouth, Ashland and Huntington to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. The name of Colonel Hubbard's traveling companion if not given.)

"At Ashland, 'Taking our seats in the smoker we both indulged in the weed, few of Miller's best, and with the occasional cry of the name of a station, we managed to pass the time until Ronceverte was reached at 4:30 a. m. Our destination being Huntersville, we bought our tickets to White Sulphur, under the impression that it was the best plan, to leave the railroad there, but information obtained on the car decided us to leave it at Ronceverte, as there was a tri-weekly communication by backs between Lewisburg and Huntersville. While congratulating ourselves on being in luck, it being Wednesday and Lewisburg only four miles away, to which a hack stood ready to take us, it was something of a damper to be told the hack for Huntersville had been gone for an hour, having started at the same time the one did that had come to the railroad; but the assurance that a private conveyance could be had at Lewisburg decreased our dampened ardor a little. An hour's ride brought us to Lewisburg, to find no servants up and no fire. This was a privation, and as the morning cold and damp we were disposed to grumble, but finding both wood and coal handy it was but a few moments until we had a rousing fire, which dispelled the disposition and created a willingness to bide the future. While waiting for breakfast, we were agreeably surprised to learn that the proprietor of the back line had decided to send an extra as far as Falling Springs, a distance of sixteen miles, and to hold the hack which had preceded us at that point until we came up. This was done by the aid of the telephone. Blessed be the man that invented the telephone!

"Over two hours had passed before we were again all aboard. The crack of the driver's whip as we started from the hotel meant business, and business it was to the end of the route. If we had to go slow up a mountain, time was made up going down, the horses often breaking into a lope. Here was where the fun came in, for at every breaker across the road or stone in the rut a firm grip on the seat was the best hold to prevent a collision of your head with that of your vis-a-vis. A stretch of good road had beguiled me into momentary forgetfulness of the necessity of holding on with a death grip, which was paid for by a rap on the head by the coach that made my neck sore for a week. It may be supposed from this that the road was unusually rough. Not a bit of it, as we found on our return. It was simply the pace we were hurried down the mountain that produced the unpleasantness.

"The three hour delay to which the driver of the hack preceded us had been subjected had put him in the worst possible humor, and this he vented on his horses for which none of felt inclined to plead for mercy as we were suffering from the cold. Huntersville was reached a little after dark where a hot supper was ready for us, which consisted of veritable buckwheat cakes and honey and old fashioned Virginia corn bread. These with a couple of cigars, which we discussed afterward, put us in excellent humor for bed, but not as it proved to unbroken slumber so far as I was concerned, as the cold and violent shaking up we had experienced produced cramps in my limbs at intervals all through the night. A few minutes after breakfast sufficed to complete our business here, and a look over the village satisfied us that the thing for us to do was to get away as soon as possible, and we could not help thinking it would be the last thing everybody in the town could do, for a more hopeless outlook I never saw. Still it is the county seat and a railroad or two would work wonders. A survey from Parkersburg to the Chesapeake & Ohio at White Sulphur by way of Huntersville, shows the route to be eminently practicable, as no grade over sixty feet to the mile would have to be overcome, while it would lead through a section of country abundant in timber, coal and iron ore. About fifteen miles to the west of Huntersville, on the line of the surveyed route, there is reported an abundance of the finest coking coal in the country, and twelve miles to the eastward in Beaver Creek Mountain hematite and fossiliferous ore in large quantities, with mountains of limestone between the two points to be thrown in for good measure. With these advantages it would be natural to suppose that every man, woman and child in the county would be in favor of a railroad, but such is not the fact, as most of the solid men are reported as unfavorable to it, and to be using their influence to prevent it being built.

"To us who appreciate the advantage of railroads such a state of things was almost incredible. A better understanding of the habits of this class of people, however, did much toward removing our incredulity, and to start the query whether, after all, they were not wise in their opposition so far as they are individually concerned, being as they are a preeminently pastoral people with no desire for the rush, strife and turmoil of trade, but perfectly satisfied with their thousand acres covered with flocks and herds, and the comforts and influences which are derived from them. A tripling or quadrupling of the value of their lands would not add to their happiness nor change their occupation, but would add to the amount of their taxes without producing an extra blade of grass.

"After so long a digression the question is how to get back to Huntersville and then get away from there, as the hack had started back at 4 o'clock in the morning, and two days must elapse before it could be made available, and the chance for a private conveyance to say the least, doubtful. After numerous inquiries we heard of a colored man who lived two miles away in the country who was the possessor of a team and spring wagon. A quarter judiciously invested caused our colored friend to show up, when we learned from him that wagon was in the blacksmiths for repairs. A visit to the blacksmith was next in order to see how soon the repairs could be made. Satisfied that all would be right we made a bargain with the owner of the wagon to take charge of our baggage, and gave him orders to start as soon as the wagon was ready and to take what was known as the old road to Hillsborough, sixteen miles on the back track. The next morning, though cold, was clear, and as the sun got higher it warmed up enough to make walking a pleasure, and as such we enjoyed it. Our journey from Lewisburg had been made in a back seat and with closed curtains. Here we were out in the open air with such views as we had never dreamed of, of a single hundred yards of which would have afforded a study for a day, and here were miles and miles for the eye to wander over at will, of hill, valley and mountain draped in colors which neither words nor pencil can reproduce. Two days later we crossed Droop Mountain on foot. We had crossed it in the hack going out and had been told it afforded fine views, one of which took in seventy-five miles in one twenty-five miles in an opposite direction. How true this may be I do not know, but I know we could see the mountains as they stretched away far down to a faint blue line at the horizon, looking much more like a thread of haze than solid rocks.

"A noticeable fact in regard to these mountains is their difference in structure, some being entirely of sandstone and others of limestone. The difference was the result of the position of the strata before the great upheaval which gave birth to the Alleghenies. Of the strata, the limestone lay on top and as the major axis of upheaval was to the east, the limestone was thrown farthest to the west. In the section traveled over the Greenbrier River was the dividing line between the two formations, and while strictly marked those of sandstone character to such a degree that you would consider 1,000 acres of limestone though 3,000 feet above sea level are held at from $30 to $50 an acre. A feature of these mountains which struck us as peculiar was the absence of water washes or gullies. A mineralogist might skirt one of these for a day without finding an escarpment laid bare by rains such as our hillside afford.

"A very peculiar feature of those of limestone formation is the many funnel shaped depressions which everywhere indent their tops, and when not too steep their sides. These depressions or 'sink holes,' as they are termed, are the only means of surface drainage to these mountains, and carry the water into the many caves with which they are filled. Many of these funnels have a disclosed opening at the bottom, into which if stones are thrown the sound of their striking as they bound from side to side in their descent goes rumbling away until lost in the depths. In the absence of surface water for stock these sink holes are converted into reservoirs by closing the orifice and puddling the bottoms with clay. Sometimes they are natural reservoirs, and two were pointed out to us as phenomenal from being so situated that no drainage could possibly reach them and yet maintained an undeviating depth of water the year round; a condition of things that could only be accounted for by their being fed with water from a distance at the same level.

The ordinary machine gun is too cumbersome for our Marines, especially for parachute troops. So the Marines have adopted new models of the Mailing sub-machine gun, a 45-caliber weapon.

When men are in the saddle for hours, their saddles, saddle rolls and other equipment must be made to stand the wear. Let's Start New Year Right with each other

My part of it is to get out as good a paper each week as the limits of my ability as an editor will allow, and the selling price of two cents a week will permit.

Your part is to mail in your subscription right on the dot without waiting for a bill.

Remember, it is expensive and no little trouble to mail out statements to a list of nearly three thousand subscribers.

These are war times and our business is severely affected. For instance, what is termed national advertising has been cut away down. Naturally, with no ads to sell, it is not expected that automobile makers will buy advertising.

So, I have to contrive ways and means to offset such cuts in volume. You can help in the no inconsiderable item of postage and bookkeeping expenses.

After all, this country newspaper endeavor is a mutual undertaking between the editor and the subscriber. Come up with your part and at two cents worth a week, and I will be happy, and beg to thank your editor, Calvin W. Price.

For 1,195 Machine Guns

Housewives are urged to buy fresh foods to conserve can metal for war.

Pocahontas County housewives can save enough metal for 1,195 machine guns simply by replacing one can of fruits or vegetables a week during the coming year with fresh or home-packed produce, a leading food distributor has estimated.

This substitution urged by the War Production Board, will not only save steel but also conserve food by using extra supplies of fresh produce made available by increased production, canning restrictions and reduced storage facilities, according to Earl R. French, marketing director of A & P's produce buying affiliate, the Atlantic Commission Co.

A number two "tin" can averages 235 pounds of steel plus a small amount of tin, and a single family can save 13.2 pounds of steel in a year by the can-a-week reduction, French said. Thus Pocahontas County's 8,233 families can save 39,442 pounds of steel, enough to make 1,195 thirty calibre machine guns, each requiring 35 pounds of steel manufacture.

Reduced buying of canned produce doesn't mean reducing food consumption. Housewives can balance their family diets by serving more fresh produce and our records show that many families are already doing this. In 1941 American farmers moved 142,372 carlots of fresh fruits and vegetables to consumers through the Atlantic Commission Commission, 40 per cent more than in 1940 and an all-time record.

The program would save 5,396,201 pounds of steel if carried out by all of West Virginia's 442,319 families, it was brought out. On a national basis, America's 81,000,000 families could save enough steel to make 5,000 medium tanks or 38 Liberty freight ships, and enough tin for 360,000 75mm. howitzers.

Housewives can balance their family diets by serving more fresh produce and our records show that many families are already doing this. In 1941 American farmers moved 142,372 carlots of fresh fruits and vegetables to consumers through the Atlantic Commission Commission, 40 per cent more than in 1940 and an all-time record.

The program would save 5,396,201 pounds of steel if carried out by all of West Virginia's 442,319 families, it was brought out. On a national basis, America's 81,000,000 families could save enough steel to make 5,000 medium tanks or 38 Liberty freight ships, and enough tin for 360,000 75mm. howitzers.

Housewives are urged to buy fresh foods to conserve can metal for war.

Pocahontas County housewives can save enough metal for 1,195 machine guns simply by replacing one can of fruits or vegetables a week during the coming year with fresh or home-packed produce, a leading food distributor has estimated.

This substitution urged by the War Production Board, will not only save steel but also conserve food by using extra supplies of fresh produce made available by increased production, canning restrictions and reduced storage facilities, according to Earl R. French, marketing director of A & P's produce buying affiliate, the Atlantic Commission Co.

A number two "tin" can averages 235 pounds of steel plus a small amount of tin, and a single family can save 13.2 pounds of steel in a year by the can-a-week reduction, French said. Thus Pocahontas County's 8,233 families can save 39,442 pounds of steel, enough to make 1,195 thirty calibre machine guns, each requiring 35 pounds of steel manufacture.

Dear Mom and Dad

The following letter was received from Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hill, of Lodi, California, and is dated January 2, 1943.

Dear Mom and Dad: Will now try and write to you all. This leaves me O.K. and hope you all are well. I suppose you all are wondering why I have not written but I have not had a chance for the last week. We left Virginia last Monday and just got here this morning about 9 o'clock and have been busy all day. Boy, this is the biggest ride I ever took. It was about four thousand miles the way we came and we were not off the train over an hour altogether. We came through thirteen states. I guess there about 600 of us that came here. I do not know if I will like here or not; have not had time to look at anything yet. Was out on a big parade this afternoon.

What is everyone doing there? I guess it is cold now for it was not very warm when we left Virginia, but it sure is hot here. I do not know what to do for they are putting a lot of the boys on detail already. I hope I don't get any.

It is only about 65 miles from here to Los Angeles and about 75 miles to Hollywood. I am going there some of these days if I can get a pass. I sure did get to see a lot of the west coming out here and some of it was not much. They sure do have good houses out this way, the most of them look like pig pens, and the barracks we stay in looks like a chicken house. I will send you some pictures one of these days.

I guess I got rid of the search light and am on the 90 m. guns now. When did you hear from Ward and Joel last? I have not heard from Ward for a long time. Paul was figuring on having to go into the service the last time I heard from him but I hope he does not have to go. Tell everybody hello and to write to me. I had quit for tonight and get some sleep.

Love, Earl

Mr. and Mrs. Crate Peterson received these letters from their sons who are in the Service:

January 8, 1943.
Dear Mom:
How will you ever forgive me for not writing? I can say one thing I am really sorry. I should have written days ago but it just seemed that I could not. I was expecting to leave most any minute was the reason and I did not want to have you worried about me. It now seems that we will be here for a short time anyway and you may have time to get a letter back to me.

I am sorry that I did not send some kind of a present for Christmas but I sure hope you enjoyed yourself anyway. Did the boys come home?

Mom, I am thinking of you every day and am being a good boy so answer soon.

Your son, Cleatus Peterson, 582nd E. A. C., B. M. Co., Fort Ord, California.

January 1, 1943.
Hello Everybody.

I will drop you a few lines tonight to let you know that I am well and feeling fine. Boy Mom the weather is awful hot here and we are doing lots of walking. We are going on a twenty mile hike Sunday night. I guess you think we walk a lot. Well we do for I am in the darn Infantry now. They are the men who fight on foot; do not get to ride a bit and there are nothing but real men in here. When it seems that you cannot make another step why, you just keep on walking. The Captain was telling us the other day that "the first four miles you walk on your feet and the next twenty miles is on your guts." See we walk 50 minutes and rest 10. You have to walk four miles in 50 minutes with the full field pack and rifle and bayonet and that makes you a good load.

How is Dad getting along? Fine I hope. Tell him I would like to see him and give him a good brushing off. Ask him if he remembers the time we were putting up fence on the hill above the house and he got down and put his arm in the fence and gave a big pull and his arm pulled off, ha ha!

Mom, have Calvin Price send my paper here. You can get my address off the envelope and give it to him. Tell old Babe to keep the ball rolling for old Webb will be back some day to give it a kick. Please send me the boys' address for I lost them when I came from the other camp. Well I will close with lots of love to all.
Your son, Webb.

Mrs. Maggie Waugh received the following letter from Sergeant Lewis A. Waugh, of the American Army now in foreign service:
New Guinea, December 8, 1942.
Dear Mom and all:
Will drop you a few lines as I just finished writing to Jimmie. I wrote to Elsie a few lines some time ago but have not heard from him yet. So far I have not heard from any one over there for quite some time. Probably the mail has been delayed. I have not heard from Thomas in a long time. I have only heard from her once since I have been in New Guinea. How is Dad? Fine I hope.

Well as news is very scarce I must close for this time. Hope to hear from you real soon.

Lots of love to all, Lewis.

The following letter is from Elsie Waugh, of the United States Army, stationed at Pocatello, Idaho to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Waugh:

Sunday, December 27, 1942.
Dear Mom, Dad and Renick:
Will drop you a few lines today. I received your nice Christmas card, thanks a lot. I sure would like to see you all but guess it will be a good while yet; maybe next summer if I get a long enough furlough I can come to see you. I think I will get a short furlough in January but I won't have time enough to come all the way there for it is so far and I will only have a few days off.

We sure are having some winter out here; anywhere from 20 to 30 degrees below zero, and lots of snow. I never saw a winter like it is here, but we do not seem to mind it so much. Where we sleep has three stoves and still it is like an ice box. You sure hate to get up in the mornings but after you get up you really have the pep.

Mom, you all take good care of yourselves and I will write you when I can. Virginia is well and she is working now. She is a bookkeeper at the bank and is making pretty good money and she gets off with pay when I go home on a furlough and that makes it pretty nice.

Well can't think of much to write so will close. You all be good and drop me a line once in while. I will close with love and best wishes. As ever, Elsie.

The following poem was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Deady by P.F.C. Raymond Waugh, of the Army, stationed at Los Angeles, California:

Eggs are so tire some for breakfast, we wish That we could change over to some other dish.

We go to work and we really feel fine, Smiling for that dinner we get first in line.

There comes a ciff we have chicken for chow, But all that we get are the ribs of a cow.

We eat it all up and we feel That is better food than hog in the next meal.
We work until five, and then we form a row.
And wonder if they are waiting for our food to grow.

We rosh in like bulls, and he is to find Some chicken waiting but not the same old grip.

There is spinach and beans, potatoes and bread.
We care little for it, but we know we are well fed.

This is the food that makes us so rough, To meet with the Axis and really be tough.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer B. Wooten, Jr., of Fayetteville, North Carolina, have returned to their home after spending fifteen days furlough with Mr. Wooten's mother, Mrs. Nannie Laura Wooten, of Seebert, West Virginia. Mrs. Homer B. Wooten, Jr., is the former Miss Lois Jean Wooten, of Dallas, Texas. Mr. Wooten is a college graduate of Dallas, Texas. Mr. Wooten is now stationed with the 35th Infantry, 2nd Airborne Division, at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. Mr. Wooten was recently transferred from Camp Claiborne, Louisiana to Fort Bragg, North Carolina. Mrs. Wooten is now employed at the Lake Charles Hotel in Fayetteville, North Carolina.

Dear Cal:
I don't know whether you remember me or not. I am the one who plowed your spuds last summer up on the hill above town.

I am now a soldier of the Right Way of Life and Freedom and Ready is my middle name. Am anxious to line a Jap or a German up through one of these new M I S or the Guard. Boys this rifle sure is a honey. It is possible to score 59 hits in 60 seconds and more too. I wish to take the high score matches over when I get back to those good old hills of West Virginia. The only things that I miss here are my wife and good old friends back at home. I would like to hear from any or all of them.

This is the previous Ohio Division, The Fighting 83rd. We are proud of the old division and are not going to let it down in this war either. The Stars and Stripes will fly over Tokyo when the 83rd gets there.

Buy Bonds and Stamps To keep us on the ball And we will roll it over Berlin and Tokyo.

I want to thank Mr. E. M. Richardson for the Times. I sure hope this don't rate the wastebasket.

Your friend,
Private Charles Collins, Service Co., 331 Infantry, Camp Atterbury, Indiana, A. P. O. 83.

P. S. This is our morale song: THE 83rd DIVISION MARCHING SONG

We are the men of the 83rd, We are the men who will keep our word.

We were born in Ohio and raised all over the land. Now we have got together and we make a dam good band.

Oh! We like to march with a song and a gun.

We like to fight, we do it for fun We will get the Japs and the Germans yet.

We will stick them all with a bayonet.

For we are the men of the 83rd.

The following letter is from Private Ellis McLaughlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell McLaughlin, of Dunmore, written to his sister, Mrs. Wallace Dill, of Cass:

December 1, 1942

Dear Sister:
Just a line or so to let you know I received your nice package which contained just the things I needed, and I wish to thank you very much.

I hope you all had a good Christmas and I would like to have seen the children. It was warm here Christmas day, and I sure did think of home, for this was my first Christmas away from home. I hope next year I can be with you all again.

Well Sis, I received so many nice cards for Christmas and I surely did appreciate them. I sent a lot too, but never would have been able to answer all of them, so I wish you would thank my friends through the time and of them know I enjoyed hearing from all of them. It does feel like a lot of good to get mail when he is so far away from home.

I have to work tomorrow (New Year's Day). That is a sign I will be cooking all year. It is a lot of fun though. With you could see me.

Do not know when I will get another furlough for they are rather hard to get and I am so far away. Let me hear from you and tell everyone hello.

Lot of love, Ellis.
Pvt. Ellis W. McLaughlin, A. S. N. 35429077, 407th T. S. B. T. C., Shepard Field, Texas.

Dear Cal:

One of the nicest things about the Army is that you never know what to expect next. My first surprise was when I was sent to Texas. After serving thirteen weeks there in basic training I was assigned to an anti-tank battery. I served in this battery for approximately five months. Then I was transferred to a 150 m. mortar battery. I served in this organization until July 12, 1942 when I was sent to Fort Ord, California, to go to Officers' Candidate School. I graduated from this school as a 2nd Lieutenant on October 29, 1942. After spending a few days at home I went to Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

My principal duty while at Fort Bragg was to teach new recruits their basic training. Last week I got orders along with six other officers to report to the 24th Field Artillery Battalion, Camp Shelby, Mississippi. Today I arrived here to be assigned to Headquarters Battery as Supply Officer. Don't ask me what comes next, because I would not attempt to guess.

Send me the Times to the address given below. The paper is not worth a darn but I still like to read it.

2nd-Lieut. J. W. Shinnberry, 24th F. A. Bn., Camp Shelby, Mississippi.

FIELD NOTES

Allan Gafford, was down from Back Alley last Thursday and brings the interesting news that dogs caught and killed a fat ground hog at the farm of Winters Sutton on Sunday, January 3.

Harmon Dille and Brown Miller produced the proof that the thunder on Christmas day actually woke the snakes. On Saturday morning, January 3, they found a snake track in the snow on Thorny Creek. They followed up and found a big water snake pretty well frozen up. The snake had come from under an overhanging bank, had crawled in the mud and ways and then out in the snow.

There are rabbits and skunks all over this town of Marlinton, and the dogs leave them strictly alone. This is all right by me when it comes to skunks, for a mix up with one of them leaves lasting complications. As for rabbits, they eat too much. Far denser to be welcome. Every snow morning, their tracks are to be seen all around the place.

The good old rabbit dog has never bothered his head about them at all, and you might as well try to put him on a hen's track the next morning for all the mind he pays. Charles Richardson has a famous rabbit dog, Pluto. He made four trips to the store the other day to point out what a good hunting day it was. A rabbit was picked out in the garden and Pluto would not let it go. Take him out of town in the rabbit range and he is a good and enthusiastic hunter. Our town dogs put down the town.

On Monday, December 28, 1942, Morris Friel and Leonard Sharp saw a lively hop toad jumping along a drag road over on Gandy, just across the mountain from Jerryville.

W. O. Ruekman has recently received a silver black fox from the oldest and best established fox fur ranch in the United States. He expects this fine fox to head his barem of breeding foxes. He has now six females and three males. Mr. Ruekman pelts thirteen head this season. He sells through the fur pool of the American National Silver Fox Breeders' Association.

On Saturday, Thomas Priest, of the supervising force of the Cranberry Federal Prison Camp, picked up a fine canvas back duck on the road at the big turn on Cranberry Mountain. Its wing had been broken, and a varment had bitten into its throat. The way I read the sign the fowl was flying too low in the storm of the night before to clear the mountain and slammed into a telephone wire, as weasel had found the windfall and put the poor fowl out of his misery to eat his fill.

Pocahontas Times subscriber, Gleaves Turk, of Bridgewater, Virginia, is reported to have recently caught a possum which weighed twenty-six pounds, eight ounces. The matter of such a monster is referred to me as a native of old Rockingham. I have been out of the possum belt for so long, I can only say that a possum weighing over fifteen pounds surely beats my time.

A & P Head Pays Tribute to Farmers For Record-Breaking Food Job in '42

NEW YORK—Major credit for accomplishing the biggest food job in history during 1942 should go to the nation's 7,000,000 farm families. John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, said today.

America's farmers and their distributors supplied record quantities of food to our armed forces, our allies and our civilian workers despite serious shortages of manpower, machinery and facilities. Hartford, 61, said in a year-end statement on the wartime operations of the food industry.

"The American public fully appreciates the difficulties under which the farm-laborer," Hartford said, "risks his production costs, gas and the rationing and other transportation restrictions, made it difficult for him to get his produce to market."

Shortages of boxes and storage space and fertilizer were big problems that had to be overcome. Requisitions on canning deprived him of part of his normal market.

"And most serious of all, the departure of 2,500,000 farm workers to the armed forces and industrial plants since 1940 raised a drastic reduction of the normal labor supply. In spite of all these obstacles, which might well have been considered insurmountable in normal times, America's farmers and their distributors have done a job that is particularly gratifying because they promise even greater accomplishment in 1943."

Hartford asserted that a year ago the food industry had no proven pattern to follow in doing its wartime job, but that today conditions are improved considerably.

Problems of Retailers
American retailers, too, had serious problems to overcome, Hartford pointed out, because while 13 per cent of the food produced in 1942 went to our armed forces and our allies, the other 87 per cent had to be distributed through normal trade channels to the civilian workers on the home front. The 560,000 food retailers had to do this intensive wartime job with less than peacetime facilities," he said. "The government, lacking adequate facilities for rationing price ceilings and rationing relied upon food merchants to make these twin guards against inflation work."

"Grocers had to cope with buying rushes that created artificial shortages, with price ceilings that sought them in a squeeze between high wholesale and low retail prices, and with a shortage of labor as serious as that confronting the farmer. Almost 15,000 of our own employees, for example, are now in the nation's armed services."

"Despite all these problems, the grocers of America moved food at an average cost that ever before. For example, our own company today is providing food for our customers at the lowest gross profit rate in the history of the retail grocery business. This means that more of the consumer's food dollar goes for food and less for overhead than ever before."

Teamwork in War Effort

"I know that none of these record-smashing accomplishments would have been possible if it were not for the American capacity for teamwork. Nowhere has public recognition of the fact that only war effort is a cooperative enterprise been more evident than in the food field. In state after state, producers and distributors have been working out together more efficient, less costly means of moving food from farm to dinner table. Their task would have been much more difficult had it not been for the cooperation of the buying public. Consumers bewildered at first by sudden food shortages, have now accepted rationing in good spirit as their contribution to victory."

The accomplishments of 1942 are particularly gratifying because they promise even greater accomplishment in 1943."

Hartford asserted that a year ago the food industry had no proven pattern to follow in doing its wartime job, but that today conditions are improved considerably. "Today farmers and distributors have behind them a year's hard-won experience," said Hartford. "There is better public understanding of the factors necessitating changes in buying and eating habits. Machinery has been established for the equitable rationing of food when shortages threaten. Government control of the food picture has been entralized under Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

"Of course, many problems remain and new hazards will undoubtedly be encountered. The solution of these problems calls for the utmost ingenuity, efficiency, economy and good will. Neither food, nor time, nor manpower, nor transportation facilities are wasted. Every unnecessary handling operation and cost between farm and dinner table must be eliminated."

Huge Job Ahead

Above all else, the farmer must be given the tools with which to do the great job confronting him. Farmers have been called on to maintain the same high acreage of crops in 1943 and to increase livestock production 10 per cent. Of all the food produced during the coming year, it is estimated 25 per cent will go to our armed forces and our allies. Additional government requirements may be expected as need arises to feed the people of conquered nations freed from the Axis yoke.

Cooperation is Key

"But none of America's food problems are incapable of solution as long as our 122,000,000 people recognize that food is a vital weapon of modern war—that it must be used, like planes and guns and tanks, to speed final victory. Cooperation is the keynote to success in the food phase of our war effort. Cooperation among growers to increase production; cooperation between growers and distributors to make these foods available to fighting men and civilian workers as quickly and economically as possible; and cooperation between government, retailers and consumers to use that available food as distributed equitably at fair prices. Through such cooperation the food resources of America can be developed and utilized to the fullest extent in the fight for freedom."

Dearest Mother:

Well, days work is done now so will write you a few lines to let you know I am still here and doing fine. All the mates are either reading, writing, talking or "washing." Washing is really what I should be doing but I find this a very dull unpleasant job which I only like to do when it is altogether necessary.

We lost twenty-seven of the mates from Company "68" today and it seems odd with part of the Company gone. I suppose we soon get used to this though for they keep calling them out just as they can use the particular man for duty or for training school.

When they graduate from the company they are granted a nine or six days leave to go home. Upon coming back they are sent to school or on to active duty.

This has been a real nice day; reasonably warm and the sun shining all day. We have not had much bad weather but it was rainy and muddy here for awhile.

Even though confining, this is a real life and we all have our fun as well as work. I think that you would find this about the most carefree life there is anywhere.

All of us are more than anxious to get into active service so as to get a crack at the Axis, but I suppose this training we get here will sure come in good when we do leave here.

We have done quite a bit of drilling since we have been here. This includes marching and exercising. All the fellows take pride in this part of the training.

We also learn lots of things from books and lectures, such as saluting, signal systems and navy terms such as starboard (right side), port (left), bow (front), stern (rear), fore (front), aft (rear), ladder (stairs), bulkhead (wall), deck (floor), etc. Also such phrases as "pipe down" or "knock-it-off" for quiet and "hit-the-deck" for getting up at five-thirty in the morning.

We have a good chief for our commanding officer and he tells us a lot of things all for our own good. The rules and regulations are pretty stiff but if they were not the Navy would not be such a nice and clean place to be. We keep everything "shipshape" and this means sweeping and swabbing the deck often, washing win dows, polishing the brass and keeping everything in good shape at all times.

When I first came in the barracks Clyde was the only one I knew or had ever seen, only at Charleston, but now I know all fellows personally. I have been here six weeks and three days now and do not know how much longer I will be in "boot training." It will be anywhere up to five more weeks.

I am getting tired and sleepy now so will close and turn in soon. I will be waiting for the next welcome letter for I love to hear from the folks back home.

With love,
Your son, Roy.

Before his enlistment he was employed as a guard at the Ordnance Plant, Radford, Virginia.

My Dear Mr Price:
For some time I have been trying to write to you; but some thing always turned up, so I did not get it done.

I have been pretty busy during the past few weeks, and have not had much time for anything outside regular army life. I am still working in the School Assignments Department with the Army Personnel. I would like to tell you more about my work, but I cannot, and I know you will understand why.

It sure is hard to believe that it is January, and the folks back home are having cold weather. I sure would love to go ice skating again, but I guess those days are gone for now. Still it is hard to forget all the good times I used to have with all the old gang that would always be found together after school. When you get to thinking about it, it just seems like yesterday when I was in your Sunday School class. What I would give to live those years over.

The weather sure has been nice here this winter. What time I have off I usually spend it on the beach. It looks funny to have a sun tan in January, but here in Florida it seems the custom.

Our living conditions here on the beach are swell. We get fine food and plenty of it. I am getting along fine, and never felt better in my life. We have time off to go places and see things, and there sure is plenty to see in South Florida. Two of the nicest days I have had was when West Virginia University played Miami University here. I saw Dick McElwee, and met all the boys from W. Va. on the team. It sure was good to see some one from home again. Tony Collson and I went to the game together. Afterwards we met Dick and took in some of the sights of Miami. On New Year's Day I attended the Orange Bowl game. It sure was a good game, and the show they had was wonderful.

Speaking of West Virginia boys I have met a lot of them since I have been in the service. They are tops; really a fine group of fellows to work with, and in good condition too. They are plenty tough, and we are going to raise a lot of trouble before this thing is over.

I received a letter from my friend Bill deKraft today. He is coming down here to attend officers' training school. So I expect to see him any day now. It sure will be good to see Bill, and talk about old times again.

I guess I had better close now. Hoping this letter finds you well, and getting along fine. Tell all my friends I said hello. I sure would like to see them. Give my best regards to Dad, and Mother. I sure would like to hear from you at your convenient time. I

June McElwee

(By James W. Weir)

Sending June McElwee to the Legislature is getting to be a habit on the part of the people of Pocahontas. They started back in 1936 and so satisfactory has been the service of the Gentleman from Pocahontas that they have been keeping at it ever since, so that the 1943 session finds Mr. McElwee entering upon his fourth term. There are a few others who are older in point of service as to number of terms but only three others in the House who have served as many continuous terms. They are Mrs. Nell Walker, of Fayette, Glenn Taylor, of Mingo and J. C. Powell, of Pleasant.

Not alone because of seniority, but also because he is a glutton for work, has the confidence of many people, knows how to get along with them and has a splendid grasp of affairs, presiding officers keep piling additional committee assignments on the Pocahontas County representative.

At this session, he has no less than eight committee assignments—all important committees, such as chairman of the committee on Agriculture, vice-chairman of the committee on Taxation and Finance, with membership on the following committees: Banks and Corporations; Counties, Districts and Municipal Corporations; Forestry and Conservation; Humane Institutions and Public Buildings and Temperance. Service on the committee on Taxation and Finance is enough to keep any member busy. Add seven others and it is going to take a human dynamo to keep up the pace in the 60-day session. If past sessions be any criterion, the delegate from Pocahontas will be equal to the task.

He has always been a hard worker, at home or abroad, as a legislator or as a banker in his home town of Marlinton, doing meticulously and carefully everything entrusted to him, in a spirit of real service, at least that is what they say about him back home, where his word is as good as his bond and where he is constantly performing acts of kindness and helping others. He does what he does without any fanfare in that quiet unassuming way of his.

In the course of his long service in the House, because of his many admirable attributes of mind and heart, his sterling worth is recognized and has won for him a place of leadership in the body in which he serves. They think as much of June McElwee down here at Charleston as they do at home. Consequently he wields a great deal of influence. He would be the last one to admit it, however.

Charleston—As chairman of the all important committee on Finance, no member of the State Senate has more important committee placements than Senator Fred Allen, of Pocahontas County. His Committees are finance chairman, Rules, Education Banks and Corporations; Railroads, Agriculture, Forestry, Delinquent and Unappropriated Lands, Forestry and Conservation, Interstate Cooperation. Usually the judiciary Committee ranks first in importance, but this session the Finance Committee takes precedence. As big three are the Committees on Finance, Rules and Judiciary. Senator Allen is chairman of the Finance committee and a member of the rules committee.

Arbovale—The Childrens Society of Christian Service met at the home of Miss Laura Weatherholt on January 16. The following officers were elected: Mrs. De Haven, president; Louise Shears, vice; Carol Conrad, secretary; Laura Weatherholt, treasurer. There were 18 members and one visitor present. The next meeting will be held at the home of Naomi and Alice Sutton. There will be a special program and a cherry tea for George Washington's birthday.

Our new county agricultural agent is Ben Morgan. He succeeds Walter Jett, who is now fighting for our country in the Navy. Mr. Morgan comes from Ritchie County. He is originally from Marion. He was assistant agent in Greenbrier County. He can be expected here the middle of February.

Ed C. Moore is back on the job as mail carrier after a month on sick leave.

ACROSS THE STATE

(In 1888)

(Written by the late Colonel Henry B. Hubbard, of Wheeling, and published in the "Wheeling Intelligencer," December 10, 1885)

(Second paper)

"On our way from Huntersville, when within two or three miles of a place called Millpoint, we saluted a gentleman who was standing by the roadside and inquired if we were on the right road to Hillsborough. He informed us that we were, and volunteered to show us a path over the mountain which would shorten the distance at least a mile. Thanking him, we accepted his offer, as the path he proposed to show us was a distance ahead."

"As we walked along he inquired where we were from. On telling him I from Wheeling he inquired if I was acquainted with Col. Arnett, and remarked, 'I was in his regiment at the battle of Droop Mountain.' As I was not acquainted with the Colonel, I did not know which side of the cause he had espoused, so by way of a feeler, I inquired which came out ahead; meaning which side won the battle. 'We did, and we did not start a minute too soon either,' was the reply. Subsequently in talking with our driver about the same battle he informed us he was there as a cook to one of the officers, and said he was never so badly scared in his life. 'I tell you, boss, it took me a whole day to find out who I was, and three days to find the road, and I tell you more, some of dem men what got lost in de brush come mighty near starvin'."

"It is questionable whether the distance saved by taking the path compensated for the toil, but the view from the top was such ample remuneration that had we known what it would have been taken had it not shortened the distance one foot. The view commands the valley known as the Little Level, a bit of man's heritage that would be hard to beat in the world. When within a mile and a half of Hillsborough we were overtaken by our wagon, and as our tramp of a dozen miles or more had sufficed us for one day, we took our places in it and jogged into town, where we remained over night to secure the services of a gentleman who was well acquainted with the country to act as guide and show us some lands we were on the hunt of. Leaving our baggage to be forwarded to Falling Springs by the hack on its next trip we were off early next morning in the wagon, but had hardly left the village when we entered the first really white oak timber we saw on the route. We had heard 'quite a little,' a new phrase to us, talk of this class of oak, but what we had seen previous to this was low and bushy. We stuck to the wagon until we crossed the Green River, a distance of seven miles though much of the way was through forests over blind roads, that none but a skillful guide could have followed. Then we had to dismiss our wagon, as there were no longer any passable roads leading in the direction we wished to travel."

"The change that takes place here in the character of the forests on one side of the river from that on the other is almost wonderful. The sides of the hills on the west covered with oak chestnut and hickory, while here on the east side is spruce, hemlock and white pine, with an undergrowth of laurel. Our route now led up a narrow valley which we followed to a divide. Before reaching this, however, our guide informed us we were traveling over the land we were in search of. After crossing the divide, four miles carried us to our stopping place for the day with the end and object of our journey attained. Here we parted with our guide and companion of a day with great regret, as he had given us valuable information and rendered invaluable service with much inconvenience to himself. May it be our fortune to return the favor. With an early start the next morning the fifteen or sixteen miles to Falling Springs was easily accomplished in time for dinner and for the back from Huntersville. For dinner we had venison, which was so badly cooked that I was reminded of the old saying that God sends provisions, but the devil sends the cooks."

This miserable dinner got through with we were soon enroute to Lewisburg. Arriving there about 4 p. m., when, as the next day was the Sabbath, we decided to remain for the night at least, leaving to inclination to select whether we should make it more or not."

(This paragraph is so badly written that little can be made of it. It seems to be a short walk to the next morning when Colonel Hubbard was found where stands the colored church. He was delighted with the view of Lewisburg, the stretch of country and mountains surrounding.)

"While trying to gather into mental storehouse what would be priceless treasures to any hand that could reproduce them on canvas, our attention was attracted to a colored funeral winding its way through the streets, which finally rested in an enclosure with not a stone to be seen from where we were to mark it as a burial ground, while across the way were grounds subtitled with monuments plainly indicating God's acre. The apparent division of white and black drew from my friend the query whether there would be any dividing fence between the parties in the day of judgment. We lingered here until the bells warned us if we would be in time we must at once move on our way to church, and as neither of us had any special preference, it was a question which of the half dozen in sight we would attend."

"While watching the funeral we had noticed a church standing on the side of the cemetery, in which were the monuments, and as it was the first to attract attention we decided on it. In this we were fortunate, as we found it, probably, to be the oldest in the State, having been built in 1798, as we noticed from a quaint inscription of a stone built into the wall over the entrance. The inscription informed us that the house was built by a few believers, and admonished us if we saw anything worthy of commendation in the act to give God the glory to which I inclined to take exception, preferring to give to man the praise for whatever good he might do in the world. Unfortunately for me in one respect we had chosen a seat too remote from the speaker to hear what he said. This in part gave me absolute freedom for turning my attention to the congregation which numbered fully 300. A goodly number for a population of 1,250, with five other churches to be taken into consideration. A very noticeable fact was the size of the men. I think I could have selected twenty in that congregation who would have measured over six feet and one inch upward in their stocking feet and turned the scale at 200 pounds, and that without an ounce of surplus flesh."

"Here I would like to notice an incident if I only knew how to introduce it as graceful, as I feel grateful to the young lady who occupied the pew with us and sat by our side, for holding her hymn book so I could see the lines and for finding the lesson and text in her Bible for me when she discovered I was unable to find. Such acts speak for themselves and need no eulogy. After dinner we went up the hill on the opposite side of the town, the view from which is good, but not commanding as from the one back of the colored church."

"The hills, or rather knolls, far they are nothing more, as seen from the town, become veritable mountains when you stand on their tops and realize from the surroundings you are at least 2500 feet above tide water, are of the same formation, but we found to be much the roughest from the denudation of the limestone and number of sink holes on it. We were shown one of these holes which, we were told, had been partially explored by means of ropes, but with what results our informant did not know."

"Starting from home with opinions of the country and people we were to visit, formed beside our knowledge of Tyler and Wetzel, we were not very well prepared to find things as they exist, and though we had heard of Lewisburg as one of the oldest towns in the State, and that Patrick Henry had made his maiden speech there and, by the way, we were told the old frame Court House in which he made it is still standing; and of other eminent lawyers who had started there—yet some how the Wetzel and Tyler county ideas were dominant until we really buried them beyond the possibility of resurrection. Here was a people, judging from appearance, the peers of any in the country, and a valley or rather a succession of valleys averaging six or seven miles wide, equal to any of the noted bluegrass section of Kentucky, and so eminently fitted by climate and pasturage for dairy farms that in the near future the fattening of stock must give place to butter and cheese."

HE'S SPEEDING UP THE MARCH OF DIMES: Office boy Abe Solomon, of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in New York, has had his work doubled for him these days with the huge demand for greeting cards for President Roosevelt's birthday, Saturday, January 30. With the present manpower problem, something had to be done and Abe's ingenuity finally came to the rescue. Now he uses roller skates to keep up with the increase. "I want to help these people all I can," says Abe, "and the quicker the cards go out, the more time people will have to send their contributions to the White House." Abe will have to hang up his skates in a few days, as he'll be off to join the army.

Our Army and Navy Boys

Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.
Dear Mr. Price:

I have been receiving the Times ever week since I have been in Service. Some weeks I received two papers alike. I would like to receive a paper each week.

I left South Carolina on April 5, 1942; was in North Carolina until May 10 on guard duty, returned to Fort Jackson, left there soon, and was in Tennessee two months on maneuvers, then moved to Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.

I have been in several states since I have been in the Service and hope to be in a lot more. I like the Service very well. I have been in the Army for fifteen months; time goes fast it seems like it was only last week that I was drafted. I have had two furloughs home since I have been in Service. The first time I was home I was down in West Virginia and am hoping to come back once more real soon.

I was born in West Virginia and reared near Hillsboro. When I was about 21 years of age I, with Mother and Father and the rest of the family moved to Maryland and I was employed at Glen L. Martins Aircraft Factory when I was drafted.

I have read the Soldier and Sailor letters in the paper and find that some of my best friends are Over Seas. I have a first cousin somewhere in Africa. I like to receive the Times as I like to know what is going on in West Virginia.

Well, I could tell you a lot about the Army if I were allowed to but I can't think of anything else of much interest to write. If I have to go Over Seas (and I am willing to pitch in and help those West Virginia boys out all I can, so keep the Home Fires Burning, Keep Them Rolling, Keep Them Flying and we will do our part).

P.F.C. Art Brock (33067850) Anti-Tank Co. 28th Inf. A.P.O. 8 Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.

Hevener Dilley, of Huntersville, received the following letter from his son, Roscoe, (Fatty) who is serving with the American Army, Somewhere in England.

December 20, 1942.

Dear Dad:

I expect I had better get busy and drop you a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along O. K. I have not been sick a day since I have been here. I did have a bad sore throat for a few days but it is better.

I guess today is Christmas but it does not seem like Christmas to me. I did receive several nice packages from the States. Here is a list of the people who I have received packages from: Margaret and Bob Deputy, Mrs. Anna Thomas, Ruckmans, Virginia, Catherine, Frost Church and the American Red Cross. They all ably reach you before the other one does. As you know all our letters are censored and there is very little I can tell you except I am well and very much pleased with where I am. I am sure I will like it here. Our barracks are swell, we have a nice place to sleep and the food is super, so you can see how well your son is being taken care of.

January 9th. Honestly, Mom, I don't believe I have ever seen a more beautiful place or been in a better camp. If our letters were not censored I would give you an idea how beautiful it is but censorship forbids descriptions of geographical features so you will have to take my word for it.

Did Oleta have a nice Christmas in Columbus? What does she think of Army life? I suppose Neal has about finished his school by now.

Mom, I would appreciate it very much if you would send my new address to the paper. May be then I would get a few more letters, don't you think?

I received Shan's address after I left the States so I did not have a chance to look him up and we were only thirteen miles apart too. Tell Mr. Callison to drop me a few lines and tell me the lowdown on how the store is going and something on the international situation too.

January 10. Well, Mom, I wrote to you yesterday but today being Sunday with nothing much to do I thought I would write again.

I played ball with my shirt off yesterday and my back feels as if it is on fire today. If I was home I know I would not have a burn. It's little things like that which make a boy realize how much his mother meant to him when he was home.

I saw a paper yesterday, the first in about two weeks, and things certainly do look good, don't they?

Remember when I was just a little shaver and you used to tell me if I smoked it would turn my teeth black and they would all fall out. Well, yesterday we all went to the dentist for a check up. The dentist was really surprised when I told him this was the first time I had ever been in a dentist's chair because my teeth were perfect. It made me feel a little proud too.

You must not worry about me, Mom, because I will be alright. I will try and write to you every other day and you all write to me as often as you can.

With love, Glen.

[Editor's Note] Sorry but we can no longer print the addresses of the boys after they leave the States but if Glen's friends wish to have his address they may get it by applying to his mother, Mrs. Hugh Rhea or to the Times office.

Pfc. Neal F. McKissic has been transferred from Columbus, Ohio to Patterson Field, Ohio. His present address is: Pfc. Neal F. McKissic, U. S. Army, 899th Sig. Co., Dep. Avn., Patterson Field, Fairfield, Ohio.

Private Henry W. Kershner, Co. A, 394th Infantry, Camp Van Dorn, Mississippi, kindly sends in a copy of his camp paper The Checker Board, with the request that we reprint the following poem (author unknown).

FIRST SERGEANT

On Monday morn bright and early. He rous us out—it's five-thirty. "Come on you guys, hit the ball." This seems to be his daily call.

Tuesday he starts out with a roar. Yelling, "Hut, two, three, four." If he could only count to five. Over a fence he'd have us dive.

Wednesday comes, dark and gloomy. My arms are aching, my legs are rheumy.

"Take it easy, Sarge, I'm really sick."

"Come on soldier, that's an old trick."

Thursday, and again we drill. Of marching I've sure had my fill. I march, and march, and march some more.

My feet are numb, they are so damn sore.

Friday, and I'm sad and weary. My feet are blistered, eyes are bleary.

"Come on you guys, get on the beam."

You're playing on the winning team.

Saturday wow—Inspection day! Look neat and clean all the way. Is my hair cut, shoes all polished? Flunk inspection and I'll be demobilized.

Sunday—ah—the day of rest. That's the day we all love best. That's the day we sleep till seven. Makes us feel like we're in heaven!

Urbana, Illinois, January 20—Graduated today from the Naval Training School for signalmen at the University of Illinois here, Charles Sinclair Humphreys, 23 son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Humphreys, 23 Second Avenue, Marlinton, West Virginia, was promoted to the petty officer rating of radioman, third class, and now awaits assignment to duty.

Dear Mr. Price:

My son, Joseph, who is in the Army, has just received a letter from you. He is very happy to hear from you and he is sure you are all well. He is sure you are all well.

As he struggled the radio program man, and he wanted you to answer the $100 question he wouldn't wait, though.

Los Angeles, California, January 16, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:

I thought since I have not been on leave since last May, I would write and let you know I am still in the United States. I have been stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, for 13 months. In that time I went through the Louisiana War games in 1941, the toughest training we ever had. Then last fall we went to Tennessee on a three months maneuvers, which everyone of us enjoyed very much. Now we have come to California on desert maneuvers which we are on now. The country out here is very beautiful and I like it fine so far. We have only been here 8 weeks.

Well, I was made Sergeant last June.

Well, I have not seen any real action as yet, but I hope to before long.

He writes they have wonderful food and lots of it. He tells me never to complain about rationing, saying I should be where he is, and then I would know something about rationing.

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Van Hever, Tell City, Indiana, from their son, Raymond, who has been in the United States Army since January 24, 1941.

Dear Folks:

Just a few lines this morning to let you know I am O. K. I have not heard from any of you since I changed camps. I guess my mail is being held up at Camp Stoneman. I like it much better here than I did at Pittsburg. The climate is wonderful here. There are high mountains all around us. I went to the top of the highest one last Sunday. It is a beautiful scene from the top of these mountains. I sure was sore and stiff from the climbing. You know I don't do so much walking anymore. I went to town Saturday for awhile. It is a nice clean town but there are so many soldiers that one can hardly get a round.

I imagine it is real cold at home now. The nights here are a little cold but the days are fine. We only have a little coal oil stove and sometimes it works and some times it don't. We have small buildings here, six men to a building.

Did you get the bonds and insurance receipt I sent home. Well this is not much of a letter but I will try and do better next time. Take care of yourselves.

Love, Raymond.

This letter written January 11, 1943 received by Mr. and Mrs. Van Hever from their son, Raymond, who is in the Army.

Dear Mom, Pop and Junior:

I got your letter today and it sure cheers a person up to get a letter from home. I thought I was going to get to come home for Christmas but I failed to make it. I had a letter from Carl and he said he was not going to get any more demeritons. I bet he will wish he had. Does Ralph still think he will have to go.

Well we are training seven days a week now and you never know when Sunday comes. I told them that was against my religion but it did not do any good. We have three weeks of mechanical school yet and then we will be transferred to another camp but I don't have any idea where. We are learning to drive the trucks that we will work on. We rode 30 miles today in an open truck, through a blizzard so you see it is no picnic.

Don't say I didn't tell you!

PAUL VON HINDENBURG was a professional soldier with little taste for politics and little love for the upstart paperhanger, Hitler, whom he had to accept as Chancellor.

After the last war, the shrewd of Prussian put his finger on one prime reason for Germany's defeat: "America's brilliant war industry had entered the service of patriotism. They understood war."

Now history is repeating itself for Hindenburg's successor: America's war industry again is pouring out planes, tanks and guns—meeting production goals that seemed fantastic at first.

Back of this fast-growing military power is electric power—far more power than Hitler and all his henchmen have—turning the machines that turn out everything from bullets to battleships.

Behind the great bulk of this power are the electric companies under experienced business management—doing their job and delivering electric power in ever-increasing quantities!

And back of it all, of course, is the American way of life at work—where free men are encouraged to invent, invest, produce, and everybody benefits.

Dear Mr. Price:

I see in your paper that you had some pretty cold weather during the month of December. It was some colder there than it was here. Twelve below was as cold as it got here. We have plenty of snow, has snowed a little every day since I arrived here December 13.

I guess you would like to know about the wild life here. Deer are more plentiful here than they are there, also larger.

I was talking to a man who lives out in the country; he said deer were coming in herds of 8 and ten and destroys young fruit trees. The farmer said it would have paid him to have taken two or three tons of hay back in the mountain to keep the deer there. He said he was going to get a permit to kill some of them, but you must give the meat to the Poor Farm. I saw in the Elmira Gazette where a correspondent flew over a wooded area and saw twenty does and bucks without horns.

Every kind of game is plentiful here except bears. There aren't any bears here at all. If you take out hunting license, you have to report your kill at the end of the year. If you don't kill anything you have to report that too. My teacher says this is the best hunting part of New York.

We have a fine school here, also fine neighbors. I enjoy very much reading the Pocahontas Times, especially the letters from the Army and Navy Boys. I see that a lot of my friends and schoolmates have gone to the call of their country.

Gray Alderman, Front St., Van Etten, N. Y.

Dear Cousin Calvin:

You wrote the thunder storm on Christmas evening waking up the wild geese. We did not have that this Christmas, but last one Frank Webb and John Campbell took the dogs out for a hunt. Soon they ran across a three foot snake, crawling right toward them; it looked very much like a copperhead. Old Pocahontas can not beat that for snakes, but for snow she can. We have had little snow but plenty of winter; 10 above for several mornings.

I have in my window a tomato plant with three nice ripe fruit on it. The seed was thrown in the flow box when watering the plant last fall.

WINTER AND SPRING ACTIVITIES OF THE MARLINTON METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Fred Oxendale, Pastor

Last Sunday, January 24th, a Covenant Pledge was presented to the congregation of the Marlinton Methodist Church. A Covenant to read the Bible and to pray daily. This covenant will be presented at each service until March 7th. This is a church wide program. Special services will be held at the church beginning on Sunday, February 28 to March 7. These services to be known as the "Week of Dedication." Visiting ministers will occupy the pulpit during these services. March 7th. An offering will be received for war sufferers and for war camp activities. This is the second offering of like nature within two years.

On March 8th, the Pittsburgh Area, made up of the Pittsburgh, Erie, and the West Virginia Annual Conferences; with Bishop James H. Straughn, residing and presiding Bishop, will begin work on a plan of "Visitation Evangelism." This plan was prepared by Rev. Guy Black, of Nashville, Tennessee. A group of district workers will meet at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for instructions under the leadership of Mr. Black. These district workers will direct the local church workers.

The Visitation Evangelism program will close with a weeks morning and evening services, commencing Palm Sunday, April 18, and closing on Easter Sunday, April 25.

At the close of the Easter program the Marlinton Methodist Church will be host church and Rev. Fred Oxendale, host pastor to the Lewisburg District Conference, Rev. W. C. Fink, district superintendent in charge of the conference. Special preaching services will be part of the conference program, to which the public is invited to attend.

Broiling Easy
Broiling is one of our easiest methods of cooking meat. All you have to do is put the steaks or chops you wish to broil on the rack with their top surface three inches from the source of heat. They'll broil slowly at that distance and all you need do is turn them when one side is browned and take them out when browned on both sides. If you have no broiler, these cuts of meat may be panbroiled. Panbroiling is just broiling the meat in a skillet without adding liquid and without covering.

Surface Preparation for Metal
When preparing uncoated iron and steel for painting, scraping or wire brushing will ordinarily suffice to remove the loose rust and dirt. However, in advanced cases of corrosion, or oil- or spent lubricating oil—will prove useful in loosening the rust and expediting the cleaning process. With this treatment be certain to remove all the oil remaining after scraping as the presence of an oil film will prevent the adhesion of paint. To do this, wipe with mineral spirits or turpentine.

Mushroom 14 1/2 Inches Wide
Believed to be of record size, a mushroom 40 1/2 inches in circumference, nearly 14 1/2 inches in diameter and weighing 23 1/2 ounces made a meal for four people in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Leland Winger, of Holden, Logan county, a son, January 20, 1943. Mrs. Winger will be remembered as Miss Rebecca Slaven of Marlinton.

Storks Must Stigmat Home!
The shoe-billed stork or whale-head is considered an ornithological rarity. Coming from a restricted range in Africa, few have ever been taken out of that country and further exportation is now prohibited. Their enormous beaks are very powerful and the hook at the tip is capable of tearing great gashes. Few birds are more deliberate in action and they are perfect examples of slow motion. At the Chicago Zoological park, which probably has the largest number in captivity, visitors often ask if they are stuffed.

Only After Commission
According to Dr. Alex Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution, there are no physical criteria for distinguishing the potential criminal. Dr. Hrdlicka bases his conclusions on his own measurements of 1,000 prisoners of both sexes from 5 to 16 years of age. Physical measurements of the actual criminal, he believes, can show only that he tends to be abnormal. There is no possibility of connecting abnormality with criminality.

No Effect on Real Estate
The people of Los Angeles don't feel it, but actually they're rising and falling as if on a giant teeter-totter. Dr. U. S. Grant and W. E. Sheppard, geologists, reported after a study of southern California earth movements. The experts said the movement was so faint that it would have no effect on real estate values.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Moore, of 230 Clifton Street, Wythe place.

FIELD NOTES

I beg to report briclike weather in these parts. Last Tuesday morning the thermometer hovered around sixty degrees. Twenty hours and less it had slumped to zero and below.

On January 17, Tyler Symes, on Beaver Creek, saw a dry land toad between his home and the State Road. The toad was dark, as though it had just come out of the ground. It was hopping in the weeds.

Last Friday night, Wm. Thbm, as of Rider Gap, on the Allegheny, phoned that a neighbor had brought him in a pet—a forty-two inch black snake. It had been found crawling around, and it was very much alive. There had been a thunder storm a few days before.

On January 12, a fish eagle or osprey, was seen at Marlinton. This interesting bird is seldom seen this far north so early in the year.

Monday, January 18, a large flight of turkey buzzards flew over Marlinton, headed north. This culture is not commonly seen in Pocahontas county in mid-winter though they stay all winter long farther down the Greenbrier Valley.

Letters

Dear Calvin:—My recent article, "Dreams of Yesterday," published in your paper, has brought me many fine letters, not only from old friends but strangers as well. Some of these letters came from the front State of Washington. These brought to my mind the precious memories of happy days spent in that State during my auto tour in 1921. We had many parties with old and new friends in the beautiful parks of that region. I shall never forget our drive over Sunset Trail from Spokane to Seattle. While gas is now rationed and such journeys are off for the duration, yet there is one journey we are making, with no limit to speed nor anything else. This road is known as the Sunset Trail of Life. Stop over please—appear to be few and far between. Still I am looking for the sign, Free Camping and Parking, for I would like lay over long enough to write an article on the subject, "The Finest Things in Life are the Friendships Gained Along the Way."

You know, Calvin, many of our friends are beyond the stars, but our memories of them floods our very souls with joy and glory.

TO THE ARMY

I have a brother in this great battle to keep our nation free, to crush the Axis powers and save democracy.

We bombed them on the ocean, on the land and in the air, when old glory waves o'er Tokyo, our boys will put her there.

With Montgomery chasing old Rommel right into the sea, to clear that land of Axis power and set a people free.

MacArthur in Australia, with his troops so brave and true, will show the yellow Japs how United Nations do.

Stalin, with the greatest army Hitler ever knew, will swipe the beasts from the map and invade their country too.

Now Adolph Hitler, here they come, the U. S. A., with tank and gun, your jig is up for keeps.

Potatoes for Victory

Increased goals and incentive payments for commercial potatoes comprise a new government program designed to increase production of Irish potatoes, vitally needed for wartime food, according to S. Ward Wood, chairman of the West Virginia AAA Committee.

Already the government has announced that it will support potato prices at not less than 90 percent of parity, Mr. Wood says. The new program offers incentive payments of 50 cents a bushel on the normal yield of the acreage planted in excess of 90 percent up to 110 percent of the individual goal for potatoes. There will be no deduction for planting beyond the 110 percent.

Commercial potatoes planted on less than three acres will not be eligible for incentive payments since there is no war crop goal for less than three acres of potatoes under the 1943 AAA program, the State AAA chairman points out.

More than 200 commercial potato growers in West Virginia will be expected to increase their potato goals this year in order to boost potato totals. Mr. Wood emphasizes that other growers who normally plant less than three acres will also make increases. The national goal for potatoes has been raised 100,000 acres over the 1942 goal set in December.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Save now to buy later, after the war. That's good common sense because if you spend now, you help to drive prices up for everything you buy. Durable goods are scarce so invest in War Bonds today and do that house remodeling when Victory is won.

If you have not done so, join a Payroll Savings Plan at your office or factory. If you are not investing at least ten percent in War Bonds, increase your regular deductions on your Payroll Savings Plan. Let's "Top that ten percent."

THIRD PAPER

In the evening we walked to Boncove. This town is the outgrowth of the railroad and the lumber establishment of the St. Lawrence Boom and Lumber Company, and is rapidly rivaling Lewisburg in population and trade. So formidable has this rivalry become to the Lewisburgers that they are talking of building a switch to the Chesapeake & Ohio as a possible means of intercepting the trade which now passes their door. The yearly output of the mills of the Jumber company is about 15 millions of feet, mostly white pine, part of which is manufactured on the spot into flooring, ceiling, etc., but much the larger portion, is shipped in the rough to Washington and Baltimore. The most of the logs for the mill are driven down the Greenbrier, though a small portion is rafted. The mills were idle at the time we were there owing to a portion of the spring drive not reaching the boom, some seven millions feet of the drive being "hung up" within twenty miles of the mills. The whole of the drive which exceeded 15 million feet, could easily have been driven to the boom at the time, but the fear of the boom to withstand the pressure of such a quantity induced the owners to suspend the drive and rely on a subsequent rise in the river to finish it. Unfortunately for the owners the rise did not come up to this time. As we had a little business to transact here we were detained until after the morning rain, and as we had come up the valley in the night we were determined to lay over until the next morning and make the trip by daylight. We had but small pay in the first sixty or seventy-five miles after we left Boncove for the towering hills on either side impinged so closely on the railroad that sight seeing from the cars amounted to nothing; but here we came to the commencement of the coalieries. The mines were out of sight up in the hills, and watching the return cars as they ascended the long inclines down which the coal was being lowered, fairly tired our eyes before they vanished from sight on the heights above. We were sorry after seeing New River that we had not struck it flood tide. The rush and roar of water at such times as it dashes the large rocks which everywhere fill its bed, must be tremendous. The Hawks Nest and the Falls of the Kanawha were disappointments. I have read glowing descriptions of both, but I have seen Niagara and beetling cliffs in comparison the Hawks Nest would be but a finger stone.

At Boncove we took our tickets to Charleston, as we wished to return to Columbus by way of Point Pleasant and the Rocking Valley. At the time we were under the impression we would have a couple hours in which to do Charleston, but on our arrival there we found it would be close work to make connections. We were sorry for this, as we would like to have had a chance to spy out the fatness of the land and to form some opinion of the Capital building, and must say it was a much more imposing structure than the one which is now our city building. We also noticed a large number of new store houses and dwelling newly completed or in course of erection, indicating quite a boom in the building line, to which the locating of the Capital, the development of the coal interests and the building of the dams have contributed. In regard to these last we heard on the cars a theory broached which, if it works well in practice, will make the coal operators of the Monongahela scratch their heads until the 'Davis dam' line the Ohio from Pittsburgh to the Great Kanawha. The theory is this that after the dams are completed all that is necessary after the coal is locked through to the Ohio, to get the coal to Cincinnati, will be to let down the dams simultaneously. The gentleman who was taking the matter up, said in two instances the letting down of a single dam had enabled towns to get through which had guarded for want of water. The valley of the Kanawha from Charleston to Point Pleasant is too well known to admit of description, and as the remainder of the trip was made after night fall and without incident we will close this lengthened journey here.

A reader writes in to inquire about the "Roaring Plains." These are in Randolph County, the west end of which are one mile east of Harmons; situated 6000 feet above sea level, highest point in Randolph county. I have not gotten around to visit them yet; too many equally interesting fields for geological and botanical and biological research and romance nearer at hand and to be crossed over in getting there to use up available time before arriving. I happen to know the Roaring Plains are capped by the Pottsville Conglomerate; that the level marks the Schooley Penplain; also the Alleghany Front.

The Alleghany Front is the more or less abrupt face of the Alleghany main ridge. Hereto, the main ridge has been accepted as the one which divides water drainage. Then comes the scientist to say the "front" should not be located among ridges but at the margin of the Alleghany Plateau. This roughly would make Greenbrier River the dividing line with Shavers Fork and other Back Alleghany mountains the true Alleghany Front in Pocahontas county.

Do not question me too closely about the Schooley Penplain. I know a penplain is almost a plain. The one I am best familiar with is the Greenbrier Penplain here in my own valley—the flats, 400 to 500 feet above the present bed of the Greenbrier. Look it up in the geology books as the Harrisburg Penplain, named for Harrisburg, Pa.

I know the Schooley Penplain was named by a Dr. Davis, by reason of its occurrence on Schooley Mountain away up in New Jersey. They say it is by far the most important and long continued of all the ancient plains of the Appalachian region. The last I knew, the authorities were millions of years apart in placing the particular age in which it developed. Any way remnants of this great plain, much warped by later folding and often cut into narrow strips by stream erosion, still exist from the Coastal Plain west to the Ohio River and maybe beyond. In places like the Roaring Plains in Randolph county and elsewhere on the Alleghany Plateau, its ancient level, now rendered uneven by folding, may be traced by eye for long distances. Dr. Paul H. Price says Top of Alleghany, above Bertow, presents what is not only the best example of this penplain in Pocahontas county but probably one of the best in the State. Shavers Fork is another, along with Gauley and other Back Alleghany mountains. The elevation reached here is about 4600 feet.

Dr. Price further says that as many of the major streams of the eastern United States, such as Potomac, James, Greenbrier, Elk, Gauley, Monongahela and Cheat, have sources in and around Pocahontas county, it is evident this area was near the maximum elevation of this warped plain.

I see I have written down some words and told little. I dare not start on Pottsville rock found on the Roaring Plains, lest I never get stopped, and show my ignorance for sure. Allow me to switch to names.

The name Roaring Plains is natural. Our Endless Mountains are the Roaring Mountains, any how. When a change of weather is due its coming is often announced before hand by the mountains roaring like the sound of a great wind or of the mighty sea. The Psalmist knew the phenomena; he speaks of the mountains roaring with the swelling thereof. For long I wondered at the sound of roaring in the mountains as if a wind storm was blowing

War Stamp Sales Over Half Billion Dollars, Album Drive Opens

Appearing Margaret C. Russell of the War Savings Board today unveiled a new Treasury poster which will be seen from coast to coast. It pictures a soldier's "MAY YES." A drive is underway for Americans to buy additional War Stamps in all albums and convert them into War Bonds.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The nation's retailers from the tiniest hamlets to the mighty cities are acting as a spearhead in a great Treasury Department campaign to sell the additional War Savings Stamps needed to fill more than 100,000,000 albums now in the hands of the American people.

According to a report released by the Treasury Department today, sales of War Savings Stamps totaled $559,771,000 for the period from May 1, 1942, through November, 1942. Stamp sales have risen from less than three million dollars per month when they were first introduced to the public to an average of more than fifty million dollars per month at the present time.

The Treasury's slogan, "A half-filled album is like a half-equipped soldier," has been adopted officially by retailers for the campaign.

The importance of the drive is seen in the fact that a War Bond potential of nearly two billion dollars hangs in the balance.

Every War Stamp album, converted into a People's Bond, for which the purchaser pays $18.75 and which matures to $25.00 value when held for 10 years, adds its force to the war effort.

The Treasury Department is counting upon the country's school children to play a powerful role in the success of the SAY YES drive. The volume of stamp and bond sales is at the rate of $200,000,000 for the current school year.

GREENBRIER VALLEY MARKET NEWS

By LACY D. HEAVENER

Potatoes, according to the A.A.A. is the only war crop listed that we can grow in great quantities in West Virginia.

Food Administrator Wickard is considering offering an additional 50 cents per bushel over market price for all the potatoes grown over 90% of year allotment. This would indeed put us in a very favorable position here in the Greenbrier-Valley area, as we have grading and marketing facilities already organized, and we can take care of a large acreage of potatoes here at the market.

Potatoes is one of the easiest crops to grow, requiring very little hoe work and can be completely cultivated with a six-tooth harrow and a one-horse plow.

We have recently sold several truck loads of potatoes that have been stored. They have made $1.90 to the grower. Any growers with quantities of potatoes stored may list them with us for sale. Then we can sell them for you, grade, pack and make delivery.

Greenbrier potatoes topped the market every week last summer and we could not get enough to fill orders. Other crops we should be thinking about getting planted are onions and strawberries. The sooner the better, so they will mature early in July and bring top prices. Most of you know how to grow fine onions from sets. There is no danger of growing too many quality dry onions for us to sell. We can handle acres of them for you this fall. Strawberries will bring top prices during the next few years and we will be in position to handle any quantity you may bring us.

We have already located several acres of strawberries that will be ready for market this year. Strawberries grown in our altitude usually bring a dollar a crate over those grown in the lower and earlier altitudes.

I want to tell you about another early crop that a lot of farmers have and all they have to do is sell it—and that is the crop of Field Cress. Do not wait until your fields turn yellow with it and pull it as a despised weed, but cut it for the market as soon as you see it spread out on the ground, green and about 4 or 5 inches across. This cress is in great demand as a salad. There never has been enough of it cut to supply the demand, as it is one of the finest salads obtainable and any first class grocery store likes to sell this as it moves out fast and makes everyone a new profit. There has been many acres of this fine crop wasted. Let's save it this year. Just gather, wash it and deliver to the market in white bags, no twine, any quantity.

We need more hulled black walnuts to make a truckload.

If you plan to sell your vegetables at this market, send for our list of varieties of vegetables.

We list below the quantities handled last year by your market:

Apples, 1,236 bu., $9,328 lb.
Beans, 2,000 bu., 50,360 lb.
Report of June 22 to December 31
Cabbage, 2,772 50-lb. bags, 138,682 lb.
Corn, 218 doz., 22,360 lb.

"To Market Prices"

In the 1937 hunting season I had a new partner, a boy named Whitcomb, a good fellow, willing to learn about our hunting. We went to our camp on the Joe Indian the day before open season to get things in shape for a two weeks stay. There had been a few frosts and coloring of the leaves were so beautiful, the night I will never forget.

The opening day was bright warm, to make still hunting difficult. We saw much sign but no deer. On the third day I had Whitcomb row me across the lake. We were getting short of meat, and I wanted to try something new. I wandered along an old corduroy road a couple of miles until I came to a narrow strip of green timber. I sensed game, and I crept through the brush. As I came out in a clearing I saw a big doe about 300 yards away. She was just getting to her feet, winding the air. I took a quick aim, breaking both front legs; then two more shots to put her out of misery. Just as I started walking toward my game, a couple of yearling deer jumped from the high grass to make runs for the timber. I had plenty of meat so I could wave them a fond farewell.

The doe weighed 190 pounds. After hog dressing and hanging the venison, I built a fire and cut piece of meat and ate a small snack. Brother, it was not so hot, without salt, mustard nor pickle. I sat beside my fire a couple of hours until the moon came, and then fired a couple of quick shots as signal for the boat to come for me. Soon I heard the creak of oars. We carried our meat out, dressing it at camp after two o'clock in the morning; tired but contented.

Some days after, the old trigger finger began to itch again, and I was off on another lone hunt. This time I took a pack basket, some food, a blanket and a square of canvas for shelter. I crossed the lake, followed an old lumber road for three miles and then headed for the foot of the mountain. It was beginning to get dark when I neared the green timber, so I ate my lunch, pitched my pup tent and turned in for the night.

Along about one o'clock I woke up, nearly frozen. My tent had come down on top of me. I crawled from under it and found about twelve inches of soft snow had fallen. I cleared away some snow and rolled up in my blanket. It was no good; too cold.

About daylight, I ate what was left of my hard tack, and stirred around to see what prospects. Hardly had I gotten on my feet when I heard a big racket in a clump of brush not a hundred feet away. With a low woosh-woosh something crashed through the thicket, sounded like a whole herd of elephants. I went for my rifle, but I could see nothing. Believe it or not, a black bear had bedded down in a clump of cedars not twenty yards from my little old tent. I still wonder which was the worse scared, the bear or I.

I packed up and followed that bear until the sun melted the snow, and I had to return to camp. Anyway, I almost saw a bear.

Half-Effort Will Not Defeat Japan

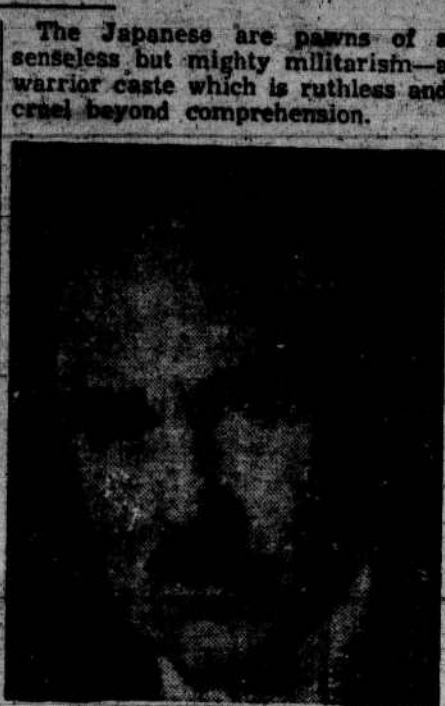

By JOSEPH C. GREW

United States Ambassador to Japan until the outbreak of war, and author of "Report From Tokyo"

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In describing one of the big air battles over Guadalcanal a recent newspaper account tells of an American flyer who parachuted from his crippled plane to the waters of Lunga Bay. The Navy craft which picked him up next went to the rescue of a Japanese pilot seen struggling in the water nearby. As the rescue boat reached the Japanese flyer he suddenly pulled out his revolver, aimed it at the drenched American pilot and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode. Then the Japanese officer turned the gun on himself with suicidal intent. Again he pulled the trigger and again his revolver failed him. At this point an American sailor knocked him out with a boat hook and pulled him aboard the American craft a prisoner.

Almost daily one reads eye-witness stories such as this one, and all of them clearly demonstrate that war with our enemy in the Pacific cannot end in compromise.

For ten years I lived in Japan. The truth as I know it from close observation is this: Nothing less than the exertion of our maximum capacities, individually and collectively, in a war of offense will bring our beloved country safely to the longed-for haven of victorious peace.

JOSEPH C. GREW

Says It's Fight to Finish

From the flood of eye witness accounts of atrocity and bestiality one fact shines clear. We must utterly crush that machine and caste and system. If, however, we Americans think that collectively and individually we can continue to lead our normal lives, leaving the spirit of self-sacrifice to our soldiers and sailors, we shall unquestionably run the risk of a stalemate with Japan. I do not have the slightest doubt of our eventual victory. But I do not wish to see the period of our blood, sweat and tears indefinitely and unnecessarily prolonged. We must not fail to realize that we are up against a powerful fighting machine, a people whose morale cannot be broken even by successive defeats and untold economic hardship, a people who gladly sacrifice their lives for their Emperor and their nation. We must also remember that Japan did not start this war without carefully laid military plans for victory over the United States and a peace dictated by their war lords at the White House.

This is a total war, the only answer to which is a total American victory. It is a war in which half-measures of any kind mean incredible waste of material, energy and human life. In this sense a half-filled War Savings Stamp album is symbolic of a half-effort. There are, I am told, roughly 100 million partially complete War Stamp albums now in circulation. These uncompleted Stamp albums are, in a measure, like a 100 million threats to us. On the other hand, for every War Savings album completed and cashed in for a Bond, you-the-owner have helped some soldier or sailor take a forward step on the uphill road to total victory. U. S. Our Army and Navy Boys

Out on the wind swept desert, Luke Field sure is the spot, Bottling all the dust storms In the land that God forgot.

Out in the brush with our axes, Down in the ditch with our picks, Doing the work of niggers And too damn tired to kick.

Out with the cowboys and Indians Out where the boys get blue Out in the wind swept desert Three thousand miles from you.

We are men of the U. S. Air Corp. Earning our meager pay, Guarding people with millions For a dollar, sixty a day.

No one cares if we are living No one gives a damn, Back home we're soon forgotten That we are loaned to the land.

We are living for tomorrow Hoping to see our gals Hoping that when we return They are not married to our pals.

At night the wind keeps blowing It's about all that I can stand, Hell, no, we are not convicts, We are defenders of our land.

By Private G. A. Jackson, 1110th S. E. F. T. S., Yuma, Arizona.

The following was sent in to Miss Lucille Beverage by Private Stearl Cloonan, 502 Ordnance Co. H. M., Camp Shelby, Mississippi:

It is 3:42 A. M. on a troop train. Men wrapped in blankets are breathing heavily, two in every lower berth, one in every upper. This is no ordinary trip. It may be their last one in the United States till the end of the war. Tomorrow they will be on the high seas.

One is wide awake, listening, staring in the blackness. It is the Kid in Upper 4. Tonight he knows he is leaving behind a lot of little things—and big ones—the taste of hamburgers and pop—the feel of driving a roadster over a six-lane highway—a dog named Shucks or Spot or Barnacle Bill—the pretty girl who writes so often—that gray haired man so proud and awkward at the station—the mother who knits the socks he will wear soon. Tonight he is thinking them over.

Sixteen hundred miles away, where he is going, they do not know him very well. But people all over the world are waiting and praying for him to come and he will come, this kid in the Upper 4, with new hope, peace and freedom for a tired and bleeding world.

The next time you are on a train, remember the Kid in Upper 4. If you have to stand enroute, it is so that he might have a seat. If there is no berth for you, it is so that he may sleep. If you have to wait for a seat in the diner, it is so that he, and thousands like him, may have a meal they won't forget in the days to come. For to treat him as our most honored guest is the least we can do to pay a mighty debt of gratitude, to the Kid in Upper 4.

Mrs. Francis Sutton sends this letter in from her son, Raymond: January 7, 1943.

Hello Mother: Received your letter and am always glad to hear from you. I am O. K. and working pretty hard. I have three aeroplanes to take care of but I sure like my job. About all I have to do when I am not working is ride around in a plane. Boy, when you get to playing pranks in the air it sure gives you a funny feeling.

I receive letters quite often from my friends in the Army. I am now sitting on my bed writing this letter. It is quite a cramp to write on a bed but there are several things we will have to contend with before this war ends.

Well, Mom, I hope to see my home town before long. I am coming in time to catch that Easter bunny if I can. Well, tell everyone I said hello. I will write more the next time. I had a nice Christmas and received several presents from around town and here at camp. Will see you before so very long.

As ever your son, Raymond P. F. C. Raymond Sutton, 71st School Squadron (Sp), Gardner Field, Taft, California.

The following letters were received by Mr. and Mrs. Neal Beverage from Private Norman B. Fuell, of the United States Army January 3, 1943.

Hello Folks: I have changed my address just a little so maybe I had better write a line. I left Fort McClellan the 31st of December; saw the New Year come in some where in Mississippi. We were not allowed to know our destination but we knew there were a lot of camps in Missouri so we used our watches and the sun for a compass and got our general direction. It was northwest and we thought we were coming here. We came through Mississippi, Memphis, Tennessee, and Arkansas. I think we are about the middle of Missouri.

We have better eats and better barracks than we did have and the iron coms are just real good to us. Yesterday we only stop inspection and played some games. But tomorrow (Monday) I guess we will get into work. Well, that will be better for us as time goes better and it seems as though we are not to get a very long training period so we have to learn fast.

From here when we finish, as it looks now, our long ride will be by boat. I am in hopes we will stay here until spring and I can get a furlough home before we leave but it seems as though furloughs do not come very fast for some branches. I do not care a about a furlough for two or three months, yet if I stay on this side, that is just a lot of saying good bye and blue hours for nothing. I have not had a real case of blues since I have been in camp but I had a job driving them away as we pulled into this camp.

When I was sick in McClellan was the toughest time. I didn't give a d— if I croaked, fought Germans or Japs—anything for relief. The doctor looked in my mouth and gave me a few pills and I came back and went to work. Boy, was I mad. I would not of ask him for another pill if I had stayed there for the duration. But I am feeling good, eating like a striped zebra and don't give a hoot now.

This is the 14th letter I have written since yesterday so you see how I put in my spare time. I was off the post four hours during my stay in Alabama. I just did not want to go. I expect it will be a long time before I ask for a pass from here. These little hitching post towns do not look good to me. And so far I have not seen any cow girls. But if I see any I'll tell them that I am an old cow hand. hah. Well, I had better close as I have one more letter to write and fifteen will do for a few days.

Well, I would like to be up on Stony Creek for chow this evening but I guess I will eat with my Uncle again. Write me all the news for us backwoods Missourians like to get mail.

So long and I will see you when my blue moon has turned to gold again. Norman, January 15, 1943.

Dear Jimmie: Your fine letter pleased me very much, and we are all grateful for your remembrance. Mrs. Curry and two of our children are with me. Our youngest little girl, Mary Marlin, is with her grandparents in Virginia.

We came here in our car. It took us about seven days for the 3,100 mile journey from North-boro. My orders authorized travel by auto, so I had no trouble in securing sufficient rationing, more than enough to bring us; in fact, I have one stamp left. The first night we stayed in Huntington; the second, Indianapolis; the third, Hannibal, Missouri; the fourth, Omaha, Nebraska; the fifth, Cheyenne, Wyoming; the sixth, Salt Lake City; the seventh, Boise, Idaho; the eighth, The Dalles, Oregon. I see here it was over eight instead of seven days. It began snowing on us just out of Cincinnati, and we did not leave show until almost across Wyoming. But it snowed on us again on some high mountains in Utah, but after that we saw no more snow. The roads in some places were slippery but they were on level ground. Wyoming is very high—one place we were over 8,000 feet above the sea level. The trip, indeed, was very interesting, and we did not get so tired for the reason that we stopped fairly early and had plenty of rest. Some days we traveled as much as 500 miles. The speed limit in Wyoming, for instance, was still 60, but in Oregon a "cop" stopped me but did nothing to warn. Here the 35 mile limit is rigidly enforced; the penalty is less of rationing.

At present we live 20 miles from my work, so I arise every morning at 6:00 so as to be able to get to the Fort by 8:00. We live right on the waters of Puget Sound near the capital of Washington, Olympia, a town of but 10,000. The weather is spring-like all winter, but there is much rain. In about a month, real spring begins. The Japanese current keeps the country warm. Just over the 100-mile distant mountains there is real cold weather.

I am supposed to be somewhat permanent in my present job, but the head chaplain at Spokane wrote to warn me to be ready at any time for overseas duty. While we hope this does not develop, I must, if it comes, accept it with willing resignation. At least, I shall not, until the war is over, see West Virginia again.

You said you saw my address in the "Observer." Although I had given them my new address while I was in the chaplain's school at Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, through November, I did not receive a single copy until today. Two came. It is hard for me to do without it. All my mail is slow in catching up with me.

I was glad to get the information about Tom and the rest of your family, although I am never glad to hear of men being overseas. My wife's youngest brother is somewhere in the Pacific, probably in Australia. So are two cousins of mine. Give all those at home and to whom you can write our best regards—even to Tom away off yonder.

I spend a lot of time visiting my men in the hospital. We are asked and do such favors as take their mail to them as well as their monthly wages. They are very appreciative, and this gives me great satisfaction. One boy with a broken back from a "jeep" wreck is from Charleston, West Virginia. I have met a number of men from West Virginia and they seem to enjoy talking with me. The men at church are very serious and reverent. Some chaplain said to me: "There is no hypocrisy in the army." One young man is recovering from serious burns received when the plane he was flying collided with another in mid-air. Two were burned to death. A nearby guard pulled this one out and thereby saved him; but he will be pensioned the rest of his life as his injured hands render him unfit for further work.

Probably you knew that I had been in the chaplain's reserve for seven years as a first lieutenant. Almost two years ago, I was declared disqualified because of my eyes. I thought I would never be called. But in September I received the order to be examined, so I went to Walter Reed in Washington, D. C. In just about a month after that I received orders by telegram to report about October 28 at Harvard University for a month's training. I never had a harder month of school—went to bed at 11:00 at night and up at 5:30 in the morning for calisthenics. Then we rushed from one thing to another all day—four hours of drill, sometimes seven-mile hikes with gas masks on. Then I received five days leave from my commanding officer here to go home and get my family. So that is how I got here.

Remember us all to all friends around there and write often. Mail is wonderful 3,000 miles from West Virginia. Best regards to your family, her relatives and yours, and tell the Ham-ricks "hello."

Devotedly, Ch. (1st Lt.) Marlin B. Curry.

The following letter was received recently by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McLaughlin, of Huntersville, from their son, Axel, written somewhere at sea:

January 6, 1942. Dearest Homefolks: It has been about two weeks since I last wrote you all. Still it makes little difference, it would not have gone out anyway.

I hope this finds you all fine and lovely. I am just fine except a little cold.

I don't guess there is much to do around on the farm now but feed and take care of the livestock. How is everything doing? Fine I hope and I also hope you are not having a bad winter.

Eleanor when you write Cale ask him all about what we done and where I am. He can tell you I think. I sure have missed him a lot. I hope he gets some good duty now for he has had his share of tough duty in the past two years. If he does tell you where I am don't be worried for nothing is going to happen to me.

Eleanor when you write Cale ask him all about what we done and where I am. He can tell you I think. I sure have missed him a lot. I hope he gets some good duty now for he has had his share of tough duty in the past two years. If he does tell you where I am don't be worried for nothing is going to happen to me.

Also if you do not hear from me do not be worried for it might be impossible for me to write.

Also tell Russ Chestnuts to tell Marshall where Cale is. He can find him a lot better than Cale. How are Basil, Jerry, Kay and Basil Edward getting along? Gee, but I would like to see them all. What does Kay think of her little brother. Jerry must be pretty busy with them.

Eleanor, how is everything at school this winter. I know you are kept busy with all the little kids to look after. Is Lloyd Waugh driving the school bus?

I guess Chester is getting along pretty good in basketball. I hope they win everything. What is Shad doing? Studying hard, or loafing like I used to do. Tell them both to drop me a line some time soon.

Is Rene still at New York or where? I sure would like to have a little east coast duty right now just for a little rest. I do not have his address so I cannot write to him until I hear from you.

The Navy is a great life now. Nothing like it for excitement and never a dull moment. Dad, I got another medal. I cannot tell you what for now but hope I can soon. It does not amount to anything though I still like to get them. I sent you all a picture with my other one.

Have you gotten my album and other things? I hope so. I sure liked to part with it but had to. The worst of it all was my diary. I had to burn it. I would like to have at least sent it home. Please take care of my things for me will you?

Mother, it will not be so long until you and Kay have birthdays. I wish I could be there to help you celebrate but that would be too much to ask now. Maybe I can be there for your next one. I still miss your cooking an awful lot. I like beans but I almost have my fill now. They taste pretty good once a day but three times is a little too much. I will send you our Christmas menu but that is not what we had by any means, but save it for me.

How is everyone along the Creek? I think about everyone owes me a letter now. I sure like to get mail. That is why I write so many letters. Tell Willard I would like to hear from him again sometime soon.

I guess I had better close. Tell everyone hello from me. Lots of love, Axel McLaughlin.

Refrigerated Rodents. Lemmings are rodents found chiefly in the Arctic regions. They resemble large field mice, having small ears and long fluffy fur. Certain species of this animal migrate in great swarms, damaging crops, and crossing all obstacles, even bodies of water. When they reach the sea many plunge in and are drowned.

Launched Incomplete. A navy ship is usually launched when 60 to 70 per cent finished.

Cass-Bach Alleghany Farm Women's Club met at the home of Mrs. Harry Wanless on January 13. There were eight members present. The matter of raising money to buy garden seeds to send to Russia was considered. This is a good idea, as it takes food to win this war and write the peace. The next meeting will be the second week of February at home of Mrs. Mattie Houbin.

Our Freedom Is Priceless. By JOSEPH E. DAVIS. Former Ambassador to Russia and Belgium.

What I myself saw in my four years in Europe gave me a new realization of the priceless rights which we here enjoy.

No secret police can in the night whisk us away, never again to be seen by those we love.

None of us can be deprived by any party, state or tyrant of those precious civil liberties which our laws and our courts guarantee.

None of us can be persecuted for practicing the faith which we found at our mother's knee.

None of us can be persecuted, tortured or killed because of the fact that an accident of fate might have made us of the same race as the Nazarene.

No American can be placed by any party or government in a regimented vise which takes from him or her either freedom of economic opportunity or political religious liberty.

What would the millions of unfortunate men, women and children in Europe give to be able to live and enjoy such a way of life?

Well, in this war, those are the things in our lives which are in jeopardy. Our boys are dying to preserve them for us.

Then we can do no less than to "say yes" and fill those war stamp albums. It is our duty and privilege to help the secretary of the treasury, Mr. Morgenthau, in his magnificent effort to do the tremendous job of getting the money to keep our boys supplied with the weapons with which to fight our fight.

Surely that is little enough for us to do on the home front.

YOU can count on a trustworthy engineer to stay on the right track. One of our first rules in making Coca-Cola is to buy the choicest ingredients. Another rule is to blend them with all the 57 years of skill that have made Coca-Cola the most popular soft drink on earth.

For you, there's only one rule in order to enjoy ice-cold Coca-Cola. Be sure you get the real thing. Call for it by its full name or by its affectionate abbreviation—Coke. It's the way to get the distinctive taste and summed up goodness that make ice-cold Coca-Cola a thing unto itself. It's the way to change a commonplace thirst-quenching into the energizing pause that refreshes.

Wartime limits the supply of Coca-Cola. Those times when you cannot get it, remember Coca-Cola, being first choice, sells out first. Ask for it each time.

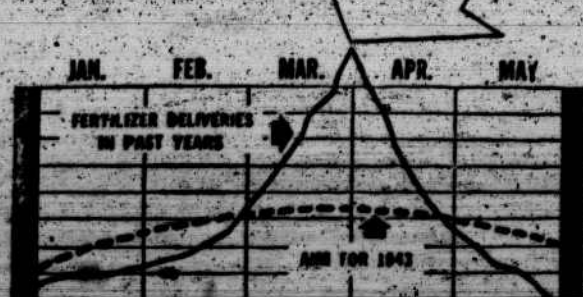

With a he-man lunch, you want more than just a beverage. You want refreshment, too. That's what ice-cold Coca-Cola is... refreshment... all refreshment.

To Avoid Disappointment TAKE YOUR FERTILIZER NOW!

NORMALLY 50% of all fertilizer orders are placed in March and April. This means costly overtime work in your fertilizer factories—a heavy drain on transportation—the possibility that your fertilizer may not reach your farm by the time you need it.

The place for your fertilizer is in the barn now—when you need it. This means your fertilizer factories can operate more efficiently by working a full speed during the slack winter months! This relieves the serious transportation tieup in the spring.

Southern States Fertilizers offer you open formula—you see on the tag what you buy in the bag. No worthless fillers are used—there's plant food in every handful. High availability of plant food feeds the plant always when the plant needs feeding.

F.O. John Ellis Beale, son of C. C. Beale, of Slaty Fork, stopped over for one day with home-folks and friends enroute from California to North Carolina. He graduated from Victorville, California, Flying School on January 18, 1943. This was his first time home since enlisting on July 27, 1942.

Orlando, Florida, January 28—Sergeant Cecil W. McHenry, personnel sergeant major of a Guard Squadron stationed here at Orlando Air Base, has been promoted to the grade of Staff Sergeant, according to a recent announcement. He is a son of the late Mrs. Emma McHenry, of Marlinton.

Born in Marlinton Sergeant McHenry attended the Edray district school. He enlisted in the Army in August, 1937, and was stationed in the Panama Canal Zone for some months. He has been stationed at the Orlando-Air Base since September 2, 1940.

Glenn Wilfong was called home from the Army last week by the death of his father, R. H. Wilfong, of Stony Bottom.

Shinnaberry, Hq. and Hq. Sq., Air Defense Dept., Orlando, Florida.

Wooddell, and other home-folks, at Lihwold, and his sisters, Mrs. Sterl McElwee and Mrs. Clara Ware, at Marlinton. He has been stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training School at Chicago. He was accompanied here by his wife.

Shannon E. Withers is home from the Army. He had been stationed at Camp Roberts, California.

Carl C. VanReenan, of the Air Corp, returned on Tuesday to Fort Bragg, North Carolina, after a short furlough at home.

Second Lieutenant Frank Hill, serving somewhere in Alaska with the Engineer Corp, has been promoted to First Lieutenant.

Frank Raymond Hayes, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hayes of Marlinton, serving with the United States Army in Hawaii, has recently been promoted to Sergeant.

Warren Moore, of R. F. D. 1, Marlinton, received the following letter from his friend, Albert L. Woods, of the United States Navy Thursday, January 14, 1942.

At last I will try to answer your letter of December 21, which I received last week. I suppose you thought I had forgotten you, but I had not. I was transferred from Newport to Boston, Massachusetts, and I just got my mail that was sent from Newport to me here. That is why I could not answer earlier.

Our company finished school on December 22nd and on the 24th I came with a dozen other sailors to Boston. We volunteered for Motor Torpedo Boats, and we are waiting to be transferred to go to take eight weeks training. Where we get this training is just about five miles from Newport.

Warren: I spent Christmas right here; had a wonderful dinner, and also worked part of that day, and I also spent New Year's day here to. I sure thought that I would get home to come home, but they were not generous enough to do so. They gave us the weekend off after Christmas, so I went home with one of my buddies to North Creek, New York. What a grand time we had, even though the stay was rather short. When we came back on Monday we were assigned to armed guard duty. I stand 2 four-hour watches every other day, then I get liberty in between and every other weekend off. This is almost good as a hotel; it used to be a large warehouse building before the Navy took it over. Nine floors with elevators running up and down, store, barber shop, library, post room, soda fountain, and bar on the ninth floor.

Well, I should say the Woods family are doing their part in this man's war, but it is going to be tough on Mother getting any farm work done this year. Elmer cannot possibly do all of it alone, because there is entirely too much to do. I do not know how they will make out. Yes, I guess that about all the boys are gone, and it must be awful dull and rather lonesome. Mother said that it is kind of lonesome for her with all the boys gone and the girls in school. I am glad I am away but I would like to see mother and several of my friends once again.

Listen, Warren, I cannot write what you asked me to now, but I think I can later. I will try when I get a chance.

Well, I haven't much to write about now, so I will just say so long. Write soon.

Your friend, Albert.

Mrs. Lena Stamper Townsend, of Norwood, Ohio, sends in this letter from her mother, Marion Stamper, of Danmore, now with the Air Corp at Miami Beach, Florida.

January 4, 1943.
Dear Sister and Family:

Boy, I could never say how I appreciated that letter I got from you today. It was the first mail I have received since I left home. I have not heard a word from anyone else and I have written five or six letters and cards home and have also written to several other people too. It is a terrible feeling when all the other boys and I never get a thing, but I have not quite given up, hopes yet. I am glad to hear that you all are well. I am feeling fine now. I did not feel so good until my cold got better.

See you're telling me I will get a sun tan. I have already got started. Have about sixteen more days of basic training which will be mostly drilling in the gym.

The boys who have finished that are as brown as you can get; just look like Indians or dark.

I guess I will be here for at least two months, maybe longer and maybe for the duration. I got cooking and baking so I will go to school here as soon as I finish my basic training.

This is a swell place but the sun is awful hot. We are right on the edge of the ocean. Here we use hotels instead of barracks and bays, are they nice. It is where the rich people used to spend the winter so you might know they are the best. I figure there are at least 500 hotels here, maybe more.

I would rather be in barracks though. We get up at 5:00 and the lights are not allowed on until 7:20, so we have to dress and clean up our rooms in the dark; sweep and mop and make up beds. Some phooey.

No that Jack boy did not come here. I was the only one from

No, I really do not need money as bad as I do, letters. I think I would go nuts if I don't soon start getting mail. Yes, I would like to have some cookies. We get some cookies and cake but it is not like they were from home.

I had some pictures made so I will send you one. I sent some home. Will have some taken in my complete uniform soon and I will send one of them.

I cannot understand why I cannot get some mail from West Virginia. Well, I cannot think of any more to write so I will stop for the time being. Write as soon and as often as you can.

A Haunting We Will Go

Our Army and Navy Boys

January 3, 1943.

Dear Cal:
How is everything back in good old Pocahontas by now? Fine and dandy as usual I suppose. I am way out west where the weather is fine. I have not seen any snow so far this winter. I have been in the Army for three months and like it fine so far.

I am in the mounted cavalry learning to ride horses Uncle Sam's way and I like it fine. I hope all my friends back there are in the best of health and I hope to see them all some day when we get the Germans and Japs wiped out.

Am sending the money for a year's subscription to the Times.
Private Lloyd E. Friel,
Troop E, 5th Cavalry,
Columbus, New Mexico.

February 2, 1943.

Dear Cal: One of the most important things I have seen in your paper was a little article about the cavalry. And me being a Pocahontas County boy, born and reared at Spice, and through my local board at Marlinton, I was selected for Service, and I am now in the cavalry at Fort Bliss, Texas.

We really ride horses here and we feel our Troop is the toughest on the line and we are getting tougher every day and better fit for service. So when our turn comes we will be ready to go.

My saddle seems to get awful hard at times and my candle rolls awful thin some nights, but after all we think we are getting along fine and we hope some day we will be of great value. And maybe some day I will be able to return back to good old Pocahontas. Enclosed you will find one dollar for which please send me a few copies of your paper.

Very truly yours,
Private Stoner Kershner,
A. S. N. 38744459
Troop F, 7th Cavalry,
Fort Bliss, Texas.

Howard Bowers was home from Fort Bragg, North Carolina, last week to see his mother, Mrs. Emma Bowers. He is a glider man. Last Saturday morning he shot a fine red fox. This did not break up the chase however, for the dogs had another old red up and going soon.

On January 18, John Ellis Beale, son of C. C. Beale, of Slaty Fork, was graduated from the Victorville, California, Army Flying School as a glider pilot and was advanced to the rank of Flight Officer, according to an announcement from the flying school.

Young Beale graduated from Marlinton High School in 1939, and attended West Virginia University. He entered the Army Air Force July 20, 1942, and had already attended Tucuman, New Mexico, and Fort Sumner, New Mexico, flying schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Wade, of Seebert, send in this letter from their son, Private Fred S. Wade, of the United States Army.

U. S. Forces in the Middle East
December 28, 1942.

Dear Mother and all:
Will try and answer your letter with a few lines although I don't have much to say only that I am well and enjoying the Army life over here. Was glad to hear you all are well.

I am still doing the same work I did back at home, but it is the real thing now. Back at Aberdeen we took the guns apart for a pastime but here the guns are brought back to us from the front lines. We fix them up and send them back as good as new. We Hope!

In your letter you asked me if I landed here the last of October. The answer is no. We did not get here until November and we rode a train from port to the camp. We will probably be in this camp until the war is over and maybe a few months after.

I would like to tell you just how long I was on the boat and where we sailed from and where we ended up but the censor would cut it out. In your next letter I want you to tell me where you think I am located. By that I mean close to what city and in what country.

Well I finally got a letter from John Long. He is still in New York so you can forget about sending me his address. I got a letter from Aunt Idella too and will answer it tomorrow night if I don't go to the show. You need not send me the paper until you hear from me again for I think it will take it too long to get here.

Well, I am getting so sleepy I can hardly hold my eyes open so will close for this time and will write again in a few days.

Love, Junior.

The following letter was recently received by William H. Arbogast from his son, Pershing, who is serving with the United States Army in Australia. His friends are glad to hear from him since his plane crashed in the Arafura Sea on November 3rd, 1942.

January 5, 1943.

Dear Dad and all:

Just a few lines to let you know I am getting along just fine. We were hit by anti-air craft while bombing an island in the Southwest Pacific area. I was wounded in the leg and our plane was disabled. On our way out we were attacked by four Jap Zeros. Our Gunner, who was the only one of the crew to lose his life, shot down two of the Zeros, but they put all of our motors out of commission but one, and it could not hold the Big B-26 plane aloft, so we were forced to crash in the Arafura Sea. We were adrift for 17 hours in our rafts until picked up by an American Cruiser. That was on the 3rd day of November, 1942. I was in the hospital for a month with my wound and a few days after returning to my base I was taken with malaria fever and am still in the hospital but, thanks to the good care Uncle Sam takes of his patients, I am getting along alright. But I have lost so much weight, I suppose they will keep me here for some time yet.

Take good care of Mom and the rest for I want you all to be there when I get back.

Love to all,
Sergeant Pershing Arbogast.

Southwest Pacific.
January 24, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:

I will drop you a few more lines to let you know that I am still alive and able to kick. I have been receiving your paper from home pretty regular even if it is a month or two old by the time it gets here. I have not seen but two of my old friends in the last nine months, so next best to seeing them, is reading about them. I have been hoping to meet up with some of the home town boys over here but so far I have not had any such good luck. Albert Moore is the only one I have heard about that is anywhere in this vicinity and he is 500 miles or more to the northwest of me.

I understand that there are some new mail regulations now under which they cannot send me the paper from home anymore so I am enclosing $1.00 for a year's subscription to your paper. I wish that you would let it extend back to the 15th of this month so that I won't miss any issues. I sure hope that I am out in this "neck of the woods" long enough for that subscription to run out while I am here.

I have been on this island for three months now and although things have improved considerably during that time, I would not trade one square inch of the good old United States for all of this island and all the rest of them around here. This island certainly does not resemble the South Sea Islands you see in the picture shows back home. If I could run across one of them it would not be so bad. Some of those beautiful women that the picture people have on their islands certainly would be a pleasant sight right now. I have seen about four or five white women in the last four months. There are some black ones here but they lack a long way of being beauties. Some of them do have red hair though and I expect that is a sight you have never seen.

We manage to get along pretty good here considering the way things are. We get plenty to eat and have a reasonably decent place to live in although we do use the ground for a floor. We see entertainment such as picture shows, good music and ball games. We also get to listen to the radio some too. I heard Dorothy Lamour and Bing Crosby one night not long ago. Money is not much good here for there is hardly anything we can buy. A person can get by on $10.00 a month easy.

From some of the letters I have received from home you must be having some real winter weather there. Some snow would look pretty good to me now. It is really hot here.

Christmas did not seem much like Christmas this year but it was not so bad. I have seen lots better Christmases but I have never seen one that lasted longer. Cards and packages are still coming in. I would like to extend my thanks to all the people who remembered me with cards. I would like to write and thank all of them personally but it would take more writing than I get time to do.

Well, I guess I had better sign off for this time but I will try to drop you a few lines again one of these times. I hope I continue to get the paper regular.

Yours very truly,
Elmer C. Taylor.

To Care for Food Complaints

Food Distribution Administration
P. O. Box 569, Elkins

Consumers will now be able to find the answers to their questions regarding food shortages. On order of Secretary of Agriculture a temporary food industry committee has been appointed to facilitate fair distribution of food supplies until the rationing program. Pocahontas County will be served by the committee located in Clarksburg.

This committee will serve as a clearing house for complaints on food shortages which have occurred as a result of maldistribution or other causes. Upon receiving a report of an existing shortage, the group will check the facts, and if an actual shortage exists, they will seek to bring about an adjustment.

Consumers and retailers are asked to report actual shortages to the committee either by calling, wiring H. C. Wagner, care of the Hoerner-Gaylord Co., Clarksburg.

In announcing the functions of the committee, Robert F. Martin, in charge of Food Distribution administration, requests that people do not report minor shortages.

For instance, "meat should not be considered in short supply simply because beef is hard to get, if at the same time pork, mutton, lamb or poultry is available. Do not complain because your favorite brands of canned goods are missing when similar products are in stock. The speed and efficiency with which the food industry committee can operate will, to a large extent, depend upon the sound judgment of consumers in registering complaints."

When a genuine shortage is found to exist, immediate steps will be taken to relieve it through voluntary cooperation of processors in this area, when this is possible. If redistribution of local supplies does not provide a solution, action by the regional or Washington office will be sought.

YOUR INCOME

THE NEW VICTORY TAX

It is important to understand the new Victory Tax, as it is a charge against your 1943 income. Almost every worker will have to pay it. If you have a regular job, your employer will deduct for the government 5% of your income over $12 a week. Others, including professional people and agricultural workers, will pay their tax in one sum after the end of the year. Certain post-war refunds or current credits are granted which will eventually return a portion of the tax you pay, but they will not reduce the 5% withheld each pay day.

THURSDAY, FEB 11, 1943

Here is as good a place as any to put down a few lines about our three-way system of government. Despoits deride the system as inefficient by reason of its balance, checks and counter checks. Such safety appliances may prove cumbersome at times, and selfish blocs have been known to use them to temporarily thwart the will of the people. However, in the long run the system proves most effective in keeping orderly government on the track for the long pull; to hold in check the untoward ambitions for power over their fellows by willful men; to retain the powers of representative government in the hands of the people.

First, we have the executive with power placed in the office of governor. In West Virginia the governor is elected every four years and he cannot succeed himself in office. The wisdom of this first check, in limiting tenure of office, was painfully illustrated a few years since in a Southern State, where a governor became a veritable dictator by building up a political machine. Incidentally he was cut down by an assassin's bullet. I have been told it is due to influence exerted by the late Thomas Jefferson that Virginia and West Virginia governors are limited to one term. There was the unhappy experience of the Colonial Governor William Berkeley, who put down a popular uprising under Nathaniel Bacon, as much bloodshed that King Charles II was wont to remark that he had killed more people in the thinly populated Colony of Virginia for questioning his dictatorship than he, the King, had put to death for the execution of his father. Incidentally the planter of the colony rose under Bacon because the governor had been let in taking defending measures against the Indians.

The governor has power to execute the acts of the legislature. This legislature consists of two houses of parliament, the State Senate and the House of Delegates, elected by the people on a population representative basis. Then there is the judiciary department, with courts which may pass upon acts of the legislature to judge whether such comply with general provisions of the basic law, our constitution. I am a bit hazy as to what extent the Supreme Court can pass upon actions by the executive. I do know the power of impeachment of a general or a judge lies in the powers of the legislature. The House of Delegates brings and prosecutes the charges, and the Senate sits in judgment on the indictment.

The executive is given the power to veto, within a specified time, acts of the legislature by a majority vote in each of the houses can over-ride a veto by the governor. Finally the power is reserved to the people to pass upon the stewardship of public servants in each department in periodic elections.

Usually, the governor has the power and responsibility of filling certain appointive public offices with the advice and consent of the State Senate. I say usually, because I recall that away back in the last generation our war governor was deprived of the power of removing from office the appointees of his predecessor without the advice and consent of the Senate. Having no vacant office, he could make no appointments. This was an unholy gang-up by a political minded executive and a servile legislature, to the hurt of their party and State.

On the face of things, this power of political patronage is a two-way club that might be used by both the governor and the legislature, with the proviso that the State Senate is to advise and consent. It does not always work that way. As the head of his party, the governor recommends and the pressure is brought against the Senators individually by the appointees and their friends. In other words the governor has room according to his strength; the senators have little leeway in which to jockey and horse trade.

To remedy in part such situation, which has led up to many a political mixup and mess, President Paul, of the present State Senate, proposes a constitutional amendment to provide for civil service in West Virginia.

In spite of all the checks and balances, our government by parties has always seen encroachments on the preserves of one branch by one or both branches. The legislature is usually the victim of such encroachment. As for the courts, whole libraries have been written on the great creative work of the late Chief Justice John Marshall interpreting act of Congress to mean what the lawmakers intended or implied or should have intended or implied rather than what such acts said.

The executive branch is the one blamed most for usurping the powers of and dominating the legislative branch. One of the most insidious ways of putting the pressure on the individual legislator is the plea not to embarrass the governor by tying his hands. This plea was worked to deadwood finish in the legislature two years ago, as it had often been done before; always to the detriment of best interest of the State.

The point to all this writing is that our founding fathers were wise in their day and generation in giving us a plan for representative, democratic government, safeguarded against would be tyrants and dictators, and men on horseback generally. These safeguards in the form of balance checks and counterchecks in our three-way governmental plan of executive, legislative and judicial branches may appear cumbersome and inefficient for the time being. However, in the long run the division of governmental power and the power reserved in the people to recall such governmental power safeguards the freedom of a free people. Systems of government, like men can be judged by the enemies they make. The Hitlers and Mussolinis hate and deride our democratic government. One need not ask for better boost.

Anti Strike Legislation

In a forthright speech before the Rotary Club in Baltimore on last Tuesday, our Congressman Jennings Randolph, predicted the present Congress would enact anti-strike legislation. He advocated adoption of the 48 hour work week.

Under the lengthened work week proposal, he said, time and a half pay would begin after 48 hours of work instead of the present 40.

The congressman asserted the nation must realize it could not hold to any 35 or 40 hour week, saying the present average among U. S. Allies was 56 to 58 while the enemies were working from 68 to 70.

"The right to strike in peace time is precious, but the right to strike when we are at war has never existed and never shall exist," he asserted.

American labor, he said, was "being led astray by men who are not leaders of labor but are racketeers and saboteurs, not only to labor but to the greater cause of the United States itself."

In an address to the Baltimore Rotary club, the West Virginia congressman said the country had lost 34,000,000 man days in the production of war materials through slow downs, shut downs and strikes, adding "For those high in the government who let that happen, I say 'shame upon you. It will mark a tragedy in the prosecution of the war.'"

Advocating a more rigid law governing aliens in this country, Randolph said that many strikes were instigated by aliens and that of the five and a half million non-citizens now in the country, only 20 per cent had declared citizenship intentions.

He said he favored a law requiring deportation of aliens who failed to declare their intentions of becoming citizens within three months following their arrival in the United States and who failed to become citizens within six years.

Mice At Manse

One day recently when the McLaughlin family was driving home from Hagerstown, as they came through Antietam Battlefield, they saw along road a stump or chunk of wood, which looked ideal for use in an open fireplace. They decided to stop and get it. When Mr. McLaughlin put it in the car he remarked, "Wouldn't it be strange if it had a bullet in it?" Since it was a superior piece of wood, they saved it for the meeting of the A.A.U.W. which was held at the manse several days later. During the program while one of the members was speaking, a little mouse came out and walked quite close to the speaker, and took the center of the stage, you might say. A heroic member picked up the mouse which made no resistance, and took it out. The meeting calmed down but was in uproar almost immediately, when two more mice made their appearance. Bill McLaughlin was the hero of this occasion. The program was resumed, when two more mice came walking out from the fireplace. It does not seem quite clear who escorted them to the door. They probably had to get out the best way they could. Their nest was found in the log. They were field mice, being brown, not gray. The heat of the fire brought them out from their nest, and though they were not so exciting as a bullet might have been, they supplied some dramatic moments for the "University Women."—Shepherdstown Register.

War Ration Book Two

Complete plans for the registration and issuance of War Ration Book Two in this region were announced today by the Office of Price Administration.

Approximately 50 million books will be issued in the five states of the Third Region just before the institution of the new point rationing system for processed foods which OPA hopes to start late in February. Every man, woman, child and infant is eligible to receive War Ration Book Two.

In the procedure outlined by OPA, public schools and churches again will be used to perform this gigantic registration task. One week will be provided for the job.

As in registering for War Ration Book One, (the sugar book), persons will go to their nearest elementary public school on a day to be announced by OPA. Each person must bring with him his War Ration Book One.

For illustration of the mechanics of the new registration, OPA explained how an individual registrant seeking Book No. 2 for her family of five persons would proceed. She was called Mrs. Jones.

Mrs. Jones goes to the schoolhouse bearing the first Ration Book No. 1 which she and her family have been using. Also she has with her a form called a "declaration form," which she has clipped from the local newspaper and has filled out indicating how much of the commodities prepared about-to-be-rationed foods she has on hand.

Entering the registration room Mrs. Jones proceeds to a table which has a sign "Surrender Coffee Stamps Here, War Ration Book 1." Here she must report how much coffee she had on hand as of November, 1942.

If more than the allowable amount is reported, a clerk will remove the proper number of coffee coupons. Also, if any coffee stamps have been used from a book issued to a child under 15, the clerk removes two coupons from an adult book.

Now Mrs. Jones is ready for the four-person production line where she will actually obtain War Ration Book Two. First she goes to the declaration clerk where she hands in the declaration form which she previously has filled out. The clerk scans the form, observes its notation for "tailoring" of coffee stamps, and also takes Mrs. Jones' Book No. 1. The clerk checks a reference table and deducts from Book No. 2 the number of points as indicated by the declaration, distributing the deductions as equitably as possible over the five books. No deduction will be made if Mrs. Jones has no more than five cans of food per person on hand.

Then the declaration clerk passes the five Books No. 1 and the five "tailored" Books No. 2 to the recording clerk. As Mrs. Jones moves on to the next clerk the recording clerk copies in ink on the cover of Book No. 2 the information on the cover of Book No. 1.

As the recording clerk completes each Book No. 2 she passes it to the document clerk, who copies the serial number of each Book No. 2 and the name of the person to whom it is issued in the official document register.

The last person in the unit who must help Mrs. Jones obtain her books is the validating clerk. This clerk affixes a validating stamp in the right-hand corner of each War Ration Book Two and writes across the face of the stamp the serial number of the book.

Thus Mrs. Jones has obtained the all-important little pieces of paper which will permit her to purchase canned, bottled and frozen fruits and vegetables, soups and meats, and dried fruits.

War Ration Book Two will contain four sets of blue stamps and four sets of red stamps. OPA has announced that the blue stamps will be used for processed foods and later the red stamps will be used for meat.

The letter on the face of each stamp indicates the ration period and the number denotes the number of points each is worth. Point values of various foods will be announced by the government just before the new system starts, and will vary from time to time depending on the relative scarcity or abundance of items involved.

Rationing periods will be one month each except possibly the first period, which may be more or less than a month, depending on the date the program starts. Each person will be allowed 48 points for processed foods in each period. Point values will be uniform in all stores.

OPA is launching educational programs as soon as point values are announced so that housewives will know how to budget their points as well as their dollars.

When You Can't Buy Nitrogen

MAKE IT ON THE FARM

IN the air over every acre of land there are 75,271,680 pounds of nitrogen. Planting more legumes is the best way of getting more of this nitrogen from the air into the soil. Southern States legume seed assures you better stands and bigger yields for most Southern States legume seed is "Kem-Fee" treated. This treatment wears down and softens the protective coats of clover and alfalfa seeds so that healthy live sprouts emerge uninjured from even the hardest-shelled kernels. "Kem-Fee" treated seed germinates quickly and more completely, so that the crop "gets the jump" on weeds.

All Southern States seed is of known origin, cleaned and re-cleaned, processed, tested and guaranteed. Each bag is fully labeled as to germination, purity and seed content. Insulation FREE with your order of Southern States Legume Seed.

Hello Everyone:

Well all the boys have been writing to the Times so here come a few lines from one of the Hell from Heaven Boys. I guess I had better tell you what that "Hell from Heaven" means—just a Paratrooper. We have a grand time jumping here. We made a jump the other day and landing was good. We landed in the lake and tree tops. ha ha. I was in the first plane to jump. About the time we got out of our chutes the other boys were coming down and what a time we had getting the boys out of the lake and trees. Do not let any one tell you that this far heel water is hot here.

It is a good life in the paratrooper; that is if you have the guts, and brother, it sure takes them.

When I was home on furlough I heard lots of people say that they would not be afraid to jump from a plane. Let me tell you a thing or two. Anyone who can walk out of a plane making one hundred miles per hour, 14 hundred feet up in the air, has got to have the guts and if any one does not think so, just let them try it.

Please print this (I can't send you my address and if there are any charges send them to Harry Ryder, Clover Lick.

From a Hell from Heaven trooper,
Ralph.

Mrs. W. N. Thomas sends in this letter from her son, Corporal

W. N. Thomas who is stationed somewhere in Great Britain, January 12, 1943.

Dear Mother and all:

This finds me O. K. and thought I would write to you and some of the rest of the folks while I have some spare time. I have been getting mail most every day since last Saturday, and it certainly has made me feel good to hear from all the folks back home. I got a Christmas card from the Schofields today. You can tell them that I got it and it was surely much appreciated. I have heard from all of you except Nellie Blye and Grandmother. Guess I will hear from them soon.

You told me about Dad butchering. Sure would like to have been there to have gotten some tenderloin. Tell Dad to have plenty of meat when I come home and this war is over, for I am coming home and stay and do nothing but eat and sleep until I get tired of it. I would give most anything for one of your hot biscuits and a big piece of ham now, but I will make up for it when it is all over.

Well, Mother, I was made Corporal Technician a few days ago which will make me a few more lbs. and I hope to do better yet. I am going to do my best, not for the ratings alone, but to help win this fight and get it over as soon as possible.

Have I told you yet about the money over here? It runs in pounds, shillings, crowns, pence and etc; one pound is equal to about $4.00 in our money. It was rather hard to get on to it at first, but I can count it and do O. K. now.

You said they did not kill any deer this year. If I had been there we would have gotten one. Tell Dad to have one tied up for me next fall.

Well, Mother I have said about all for this time and it is almost bedtime so I will close.

Write to me as often as you can and if you can get V-Mail blanks write on them for me are much faster, but you can write a regular letter once in a while, for you can't write much on V-Mail blanks. Do not send any air mail for it is not any faster. Take care of yourselves and give everyone my best regards. Kiss the two J's for me and do not worry for I am getting along fine.

Love to all, French.

Dear Cal:

I suppose I am the last person you might expect to hear from but I want to write you about the coincidences I have run across since I have been in the Army.

When I came to Officers School here, I had the good fortune of meeting Leonard McCutcheon from Greenbank and after comparing notes we found we have many mutual friends in Pocahontas County. Then I also discovered that Gardner Packard, who has spent much time at Cloverlick was also here in O. C. S. I had known him in Baltimore also but I always associated him with Marlinton because that is the thing that brought us together originally.

These things are the very occurrences that make a fellow really appreciate old Pocahontas County. You know I cannot claim to be a native, but I think my many summers there qualify me to be one. It is really swell to hear from people from that area because I still have there is nothing better than a real home-town letter. (By God) Virginian Mac is just such a person and it really is great to know a fellow like him in the Army.

Judging from the lists of men going into the Service from Pocahontas County, I would say that you all are doing more than your part in this fight and I truly say I am proud to say that I know one community that has gone all-out for Victory. Don't worry with so many people like West Virginians in the Service we will beat the hell out of those tyrants.

Thanks for the Times and for the few minutes of pleasure I get from it each week. Hope you are well and still keep the Times coming.

Best Regards,

Off. Cand. George D. Solter, Co. D, O. C. S., Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland.

Mrs. Dennis Griffin of Cloverlick, received this letter from her son, Delbert of the United States Navy:

Little Creek, Virginia, January 28, 1943.

Dear Mom and all:

Will answer your letter I received yesterday. Sure was glad to hear from you all and to know that you all are well.

It has been raining here for two days and we don't do anything but eat and sleep. We are leaving here Monday. They are sending a bunch of boys each place: California, Florida, San Francisco and Panama. I don't really know where I will be sent.

I heard from Wilford the other day. He said he was coming home the 5th of February. Sure would love to see him but don't suppose I will. I have read the Soldiers and Sailor letters in the paper and find that some of my friends have gone Over Seas. I would like to receive the Times as I like to know what is going on in West Virginia.

Well there is not much to write about tonight. Tell Grandmother and all the folks around Cloverlick hello.

Keep them flying and we will do our part.

With love, Delbert.

The following letter and poem was received by Mrs. Scott Love-lace, of Dunmore, from her brother, Private Claude E. Clark, who is serving Somewhere in the Foreign Service:

January 10, 1943.

Dear Sister:

I will answer your kind and welcome letter. Was glad to hear from you and to know that you all are well. Tell the girls I am glad they think enough of me to write to me. The reason I can't write long letters is that it would take more than a six-cent stamp to carry it. We are not allowed to write on both sides of the paper so you see I wrote too many pages it would cost more to send it so you see when you hear from me they all hear.

I am not very well. I am in the hospital now, but do not worry for I am getting along as well as could be expected, so the doctors say. I think that I will make it O. K.

Tell all hello for me and tell that old Pug I said to hurry up and get himself over here and help me finish this job. I cannot run fast enough to keep in sight of these scared brutes we are after, and I know he can run fast. He used to put run me when we used to buddy together. So tell him to hurry up I need him.

I heard from Dad the same day I got your letter and he sent me a couple of pictures of himself and boy, was I glad to get them. I hope it will not be long until we get back home and I do not believe it will be. Tell Kenneth what he put on the envelope he was sent to me. I am not feeling very good. I do not look for her to make it through the winter for she is getting pretty old, but she might live a long time yet.

I don't know just when I will get to come home but before the first of April, or sometime in April, but that is not so far off. I don't know why all I will get to see when I get to come home because I will not have very much time; just ten days and it will take part of that time on the road.

It looks like the war might be over in a few more months, but I suppose that I will be here at least another year and maybe longer. But after the war is over I won't mind staying in here, knowing then that I won't have to go across, but I don't suppose that I will have to go over anyway. Well, Hazel said in her letter that Sanford had to go across. I hope that he gets back safe and sound, but I don't think that he will be in much danger, by being in the Medical Corps. I suppose that Calvin will be going to the Army pretty soon, but it won't hurt him very much if he does not have to go across and fight and I don't think that he will ever have to do that.

I had another birthday the 25th of this month and another year rolled around. I got two cartons of cigarettes which came in very good. Hazel said that she was going to send me a package but I have never received it yet.

I am looking for another promotion soon, don't know whether I will get it or not but the Lord knows I sure do earn it. I lost this type writer and pound all day long. It is worth more than fifty four dollars a month but there is nothing a fellow can do about it.

Well, Regina, I cannot think of much more to write about only we will just have to keep on slugging until this war is over and then maybe we can all come back home and settle down and what there is left. Flow are you and all the rest of the family getting along and have you been sick much this winter? I imagine that you have been having some pretty cold days in there.

Tell Elmer that I would like to have a piece of that bear meat. There must be plenty bear back there in them woods. Well, maybe I can get to take a little bit one of these days, but would like to take a hunt for one of those days first before I hunt for anything else.

Well, Regina, I had better quit for this time, as I have to write Charlie a letter yet tonight, but write and tell me all the news, and send me some more papers. I got the last ones that you sent me and sure was glad to get them because the news was very interesting. So tell all hello and write when you can. Tell Dad I will write to him in a day or two.

Your brother, Edgar.

POINT RATIONING

War Ration Book Two, which is just coming off the presses this month, will be used to get food that is "Point Rationed."

A point is a ration value that a dollar is a money value. The point value and money value are different, of course, for different foods. For example, a pound of one kind of meat that is scarce might be worth 8 ration points while a pound of one kind that is plentiful might be worth 3 points.

If you are a food rationing expert you will make your points as far as possible when you go shopping for food. And by choosing wisely of the plentiful, low-point foods, you will have the demand for very scarce, high-point foods.

The point value of rationed foods will be the same in every store in the country, regardless of the price charged for the food. If you buy a No. 2 can of tomatoes, say, you will turn in stamps for the same number of points wherever you live, whatever you pay and whatever the grade of tomatoes.

Foods coming under the new point rationing include: all canned and bottled fruits, fruit juices, and combinations; all canned and bottled vegetables; vegetable juices; and combinations; all dried and dehydrated fruits—apples, raisins, apricots, peaches, apples, pears and others; and all canned soups, including meat and chicken soups.

Here are some of the processed foods that will not be rationed: Dehydrated soups; dry vegetables like beans, split peas, and lentils; canned salmon and canned sardines; canned macaroni and potatoes; rice; and rice and vegetable mixtures; and rice and vegetable mixtures.

Home-canned and home-dried fruits and vegetables will not be rationed. You do not have to declare any fruits and vegetables which you cannot get dried just yet.

If you have a mail in your household, or a leader who has mail with you, you can use the ration book of this extra person when you go food shopping.

The whole idea behind point rationing is to see that all citizens get a fair share of foods on the market. The government is trying to arrange that your family doesn't go hungry while your neighbor has more food than he can eat.

HAPPY HOURS FOR SHUT-INS

"Shut-ins" usually are thought of as those persons who, for various reasons, are physically unable to leave their homes. But the word is taking on new meaning under restricted use of private automobiles. Tens of thousands have become shut-ins since Uncle Sam put the ban on pleasure driving, but they're finding ways to spend happy hours at home.

Visits with friends in the neighborhood, parties for the children, games of various kinds, music, dancing just plain old-fashioned conversation—these and other things are creeping into daily lives and who will say that we won't be the better for this changed pattern of living? Keep your lights clean and bright... keep your electric appliances in good condition. They'll help you enjoy your hours at home! And,.....

Red Cross

County Chairman Mark Brooks of the Red Cross, held a meeting of his executive board, at the Court House last Saturday. The business before the board was to get organized for the war effort for $3500 from Pocahontas County for Red Cross, beginning March 1st. Of this amount $2,000 will go to the National budget and $1500 will be retained in Pocahontas County—practically all of it for war work. For instance, there is a weekly toll of from $10 to $20 a week on our local county budget for telegrams for soldier service alone.

Mrs. H. M. Widney is chairman of the drive for funds in Greenbank District and will organize her local workers and solicitors.

Mrs. Louise Barlow Beard in Little Levels District; and Miss Anna Lee Ervine in Edray and Huntersville Districts.

Dr. Chresenger, the Red Cross Field Representative, has recently inspected the Pocahontas County Chapter. His report is complimentary. There has been a recent audit of the fiscal affairs of the Chapter by an accountant, and things were found in shipshape with all contributions accounted for.

Mrs. Moody Kincaid, of the supplies department reported over six thousand separate pieces of knitting for the armed forces and sewing for hospital garments have been sent out the past year.

Mrs. Hamrick, of the surgical dressings department, reported 25,000 surgical dressings ready to ship, and 80,000 more on hand to be made up.

There is now a call for old silk stockings to be contributed to be made up into parachutes for the armed forces. These will be collected at the Durbin Mercantile Company in Durbin; John S. Hannan's Store in Greenbank; J. E. Pritchard, Dumore; Lange Dress Shoppe, Marlinton; Moores store in Hillsboro.

Every patriotic person is also asked to salvage tin cans.

The emphasis now by the Chapter is upon the raising of the life saving allotment of $3500 in cold cash from Pocahontas County for Red Cross work locally, nationally and internationally. Last year about this sum was raised by a membership roll call, a war drive and contribution of junk. This year the whole amount is asked for in one campaign. It can only be raised by people contributing more than the one dollar membership fee heretofore asked.

MARLINTON POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 22, 1943

$1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Our Army and Navy Boys

February 6, 1943.

Dear Cal:

Just a few lines to let you know I have not forgotten you all around Marlinton. I only wish I could be back there for a week or so just to see what a real place looks like. It is 65 degrees below zero here now, but of course we have clothes for the cold weather. One thing that don't worry us up here is women for there isn't any. We are on the Alcoa Highway in Canada. I am in the Quartermaster Truck Regiment. All I do is drive and I like it fine. I like country up here and I sure have seen a lot of country since I came to the Army.

Talking of wild animals they sure are up here: deer, moose, bear and snow shoe rabbits. Everywhere you look there is a rabbit. You can see more deer, bear moose and rabbits up here in one day than you could down there in a month if you would hunt every day. It is just beginning to snow here now.

The Army feeds us fresh meat all the time for we kill it ourselves, and it is a lot of sport. I will show you a picture when I get home of a real moose I had the pleasure of getting. Well, it is about time for me to go for my daily run, up the road, so I will close for the time being.

A Friend,
Private Minter C. Moore.

The State Office of Price Administration (OPA) has announced the appointment of H. Nelson Clarke of Martinsburg as Price Assistant for the eastern section of W. Va., including Pocahontas county. Mr. Clarke was in Pocahontas county last week working with the local War Price and Rationing Board in regard to the filing of Ceiling Prices with our Board. The OPA feels that more than sufficient time has elapsed for 100 per cent compliance with the regulations.

The Price Division is primarily interested in the filing of base period prices and monthly additions of new stock by retailers, also the proper posting of these prices in these stores.

Mr. Clarke is interested in helping any merchants who need assistance in the clarification of the regulations. Any requests should be addressed to his attention in care of the local board. Regular visits will be made in the future to assist where needed. Mr. Clarke will gladly meet with any association desiring assistance if notified through the local board.

In regard to cases where goods are sold higher than price ceilings, he explained that all facts concerning the sale or sales should be supported with a sales slip showing the price, the previous price paid, and the name and address of the person overcharged. If the overcharge is proven, the plaintiff can obtain damages for $50.00 or three times the amount of the overcharge whichever is greater. These complaints are to be sent to your local board to the attention of Mr. Clarke who will see that they are routed to the proper department and investigation made.

months, being given an intensive course in work in Army kitchens.

In a recent letter from their son, Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Dean, of Pyles Mountain, was informed of his advancement from a Private First Class to a Corporal in the Army. Corporal Dean entered the Armed Service one year ago this February and has served the last six months overseas "Somewhere" in active duty. He has been buying a $25.00 war bond a month out of his pay as a Private First Class and plans to increase it to two with his pay increase that came along with his advancement in rank to Corporal. If all the boys in the Service are of the same mind of Raymond they are determined to win this "Fight For Freedom" even if they have to win it on the field of battle and finance it by buying War Bonds. His parents subscribed to the Times for him so he will be sure of getting it under the new mailing regulations, and as the other County boys he enjoys reading it very much. He wants his many friends to know that he is well and thinks of them often.

Senator Fred Allen has been named by Governor Naylor to succeed himself as a member of the State Board of Pharmacy. For the past eight years Senator Allen has been a member of this Board. He has been an influential and valuable member, and the profession will hail with enthusiasm his appointment for another term.

A good news item this week is that Squire T. S. McNeel is back again in his office for Justice of the Peace work.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baker, on Thursday, February 11, 1943, a daughter named: Martha Kay.

Legislature

This week marks the beginning of the last half of the sixty day session of the legislature. Not what this session has done so far, but what it is refusing to do will mark it as a remarkably good session. The body, as a whole, has shown it has a will of its own, and this will is responsive to the will of the public as expressed in the election of last fall. And all this means economy in the expenditures of public funds.

To begin with, the House and Senate elected Speaker of the House and President of the Senate; one replacing a man who got himself into the penitentiary, and the other, who failed to be re-elected by his constituency.

This legislature, responsive as it is to the will of the people, is economy minded. The emergency, nuisance State income tax was repealed over the veto of the Governor. Attempts have been made to freeze unexpended sums of certain extra appropriations by the last session. These were contingent upon the money coming in, and it came in.

As usual, there is attempt to make the bear a game animal and put him on the protected list, at heavy loss to sheep owners. The peculiar thing is that this time the champion of the bear hails from Webster county. Senator Allen and Delegate Raliff are watching out for the interest of our sheep men, and I expect they will be able to kill this bear bill once again.

A so-called pollution bill has been introduced by the Delegate from Monroe county. It deals with the Greenbrier River and is directly aimed at the tanning industry of Pocahontas county. The health and conservation departments do not advocate this bill, for the fishing is good and the water is all right for domestic purposes. It is sponsored by a bunch of birds from off the coal mine polluted Piney Branch who have come across the divide to establish summer homes on the Greenbrier. They do not like to swim on summer week ends in water 160 miles below our tanneries. Senator Allen told them to close up their homes on Piney Branch so they could do their swimming closer home. Incidentally, the tanneries of Pocahontas county paid out well up toward a million dollars in wages last year.

While I am not holding the republican party responsible, I am mean enough to say that Webster delegate with his bear bill and that Monroe delegate with his filly white swimming bill were elected as republicans.

Z. S. Smith, Sr., is recovering from a severe sick spell.

FIELD NOTES

William Workman found a trinket in the fields of Joel Beard and he sent it in for naming. "I happen to be old enough to remember when some of the gentlemen of the old school carried a neat little seal as a watch charm. A century back from now those little seals came in handy to press down the sealing wax when sealing up letters. A coin could be used but it got hot. The seal will found is about the size of an ordinary seal ring. It was made of copper heavily plated with gold. The pretty reddish brown stone with streaks is agate I guess. The broken link, to attach it to a chain, is worn thin."

Zero cold at Marlinton on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday mornings. The blizzard blew up Saturday night, for one of the cold snaps of the winter.

Elmer H. Hamrick was over from the New Glades last Saturday. Somehow or other the conversation naturally turned to bear hunting. Elmer then got to telling about the time his uncle John Hamrick killed one big bear with an axe. The dogs brought in a whole of a bear and caught him under a big log which had fallen across a deep gulch. A big fight resulted, and things looked only tolerable for that pack of dogs. Uncle John grabbed an axe, and walked out over the fight on the big ash log. The bark was loose, his foot slipped and he fell right in the middle of a bear fight. He landed standing, and he sunk the axe right into the bear's head, laying him out proper. After the bear was skinned, one of the neighbors commented on the cool bravery required for a man to tackle a fighting mad bear with an axe. Then Uncle John modestly allowed he was not the kind of a man who would stand back and see any darn bear kill his dogs.

Selectees Honor Guests At Party

Meadeville, Pennsylvania—William F. Ashford and Howard C. Wilfong, who left for Army service recently, were honored prior to their departure at a party given by Mrs. Ira Sheets and Mrs. William Hart at the latter's home, R. F. D. 1, Meadeville.

Refreshments were served and games were played at the affair. A number of guests were present and the two selectees were presented with farewell gifts.

Both are former residents of Greenbank, West Virginia, who for the past two years have lived in Meadeville. Ashford was employed by the Erie Railroad and Wilfong by the American Viscose Corporation.

The U. S. Forest Service through its Forest Nursery, located at Parsons, West Virginia, is co-operating with China in furnishing native seeds for experimental purposes, announced Supervisor Arthur A. Wood, Monongahela National Forest.

China, through the centuries has depopulated its forest lands with resultant floods and periods of drought. The present world condition has demonstrated the need for forests and the many products which are obtainable and used in the prosecution of war as well as during peace. Forests are considered so important that China, even though in a death struggle with Japan, is carrying experiments looking toward replacement of many of her former timberlands.

Supervisor Wood stated that black locust, Norway spruce, red pine, red spruce, pitch and white pine seed had been sent to the Chief, Forest Service, for transmission to the National Bureau of Forest Research, Chungking, Szechuan, China.

I. H. Pennybacker, who spent a couple of weeks with his family in West Virginia, has returned to Wyandotte, Michigan, where he is employed by the big Sharples Chemical Corporation. His mother is Mrs. W. E. Pennybacker, of Frost. He wears an Army and Navy E for excellent production.

Our Army and Navy Boys

Luke Field, Arizona—Graduates of the Technical Training School of the Air Force Advanced Flying School located at Luke Field is Sergeant Brooks R. Muller of Bartow, West Virginia.

According to Lieutenant W. A. Peyton, Technical Training School Officer, the Luke Field School is one of the largest of its kind in the West Coast Training Area. The course is a stiff work-out of instruction on all technical phases of aviation.

Cadet Clair Page Hamrick, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Page Hamrick, of Hillsboro, is a member of a class of Student Officers and Aviation Cadets to be graduated soon from the Air Force Advanced Flying School at Stockton Field, California.

The graduates will be commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Air Force Reserve and will be given the coveted wings, symbol of the aeronautical rating of Pilot. They will be placed on duty in their new rank with the Army Air Forces.

Before entering the final and advanced course at Stockton Field, Cadet Hamrick completed his 18 weeks of primary and basic training at Visalia and Chico, California.

He married Miss Agnes Lovik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Lovik, of Clarksburg, West Virginia.

Private Enoch Pyles, of the United States Army, stationed at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana, sends the menu of his Christmas dinner home to his mother, Mrs. Joe Pyles, at Huntersville. It reads as follows:

Christmas Dinner: Sweet relish, mixed pickles, oyster stew with crackers, roast turkey with sage stuffing, Virginia baked ham, cranberry sauce, candied sweet potatoes, buttered whole kernel corn, lettuce salad with mayonnaise, sliced tomatoes, fresh celery hearts, mixed breads, with butter, Dutch apple pie, mince meat pie, ice cream, sliced fruit cake, mixed hard candies, assorted mixed nuts, fresh mixed fruits, coffee, orangeade and assorted cigarettes.

Captain Clyde F. Tom, Mess Officer; Master Sergeant Herbert Jones, Mess Sergeant. "It was always said of him, that he knew how to keep Christmas well, if any man alive possessed the knowledge. May that truly be said of us, and all of us! And so as Tiny Tim observed, 'God Bless Us Every One'—Charles Dickens.

Private Forest Harold Turner was called home in January by the illness of his father. He returned after four days to his station at Taft, California, accompanied by his wife and baby. The following letter was received from him by Mrs. Turner's sister, Miss Daxie Arbogast, of Bartow:

Hello Toots: While waiting for time to go to work will drop you a few lines to let you know we're all O. K. Mary and Nora-Mae seem to be liking it fine. We lived in a hotel for a while but we are now living in a house with another woman and she is very nice to us. We use the household things just the same as if they were our own. I believe she and Mary will get along fine.

Mary enjoyed her trip out here and we met lots of friends on the train; one was Ellen Waybright. We had some pictures taken and will send them home in our next letter.

I go to work at 5:30 and work until 12:30 at night. Well, Toots I wish you could be here with us, we would go to Hollywood. I want to take Mary there and on out to the ocean but best of all let her pick oranges from the trees. The wind is sure blowing here today. We wanted to go down town today to get Mary a permanent but the wind is blowing and it is too dusty to take the baby. Mary met a girl from Pennsylvania; she lives across the hall from us. They came over to our camp Sunday.

Well, Toots, I hated that I did not get to see you while I was at home but I expect to get to come home again about October. We have been looking for a letter all week but have never gotten any as yet. If you were out there you could get plenty of work.

Tell all our friends hello and if any one asks about us, tell them we are O. K. Don't worry about us we will be home sometime soon we hope. Well, I must close. I hope some day you will get to see California. Wishing you the best of luck.

Your brother-in-law, Harold. Pvt. Forest H. Turner, 741st School Squadron, Army Air Base, Gardner Field, Taft, California.

The following letter was received recently by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Galford, of Charleston, from their son, Earl, who is in the Air Corp in the Southwest Pacific.

January 16, 1943.

Hello Mom: How are the home folks? Fine I hope. I am getting along all right and my health is good so I have no room for complaint. How is Dad getting along with his defense job? I guess Marie is taking exams. I was glad to hear that you had gone to see Grandma Sheets Lytton. She is bound to get pretty lonesome, especially during the winter months. When you write to her tell her I said hello.

You wrote about Hunter killing a deer. Boy, I would like to have been there and seen him. I guess you are all having winter. I would like to trade you a pineapple for a snow ball. I had a letter from Dot and she said she was getting along fine with her twin boys.

I was so glad to get my watch. Well, you all keep your chins up and I will be at home before you realize it.

Lots of love, Earl.

The following letter is from Private Austin M. Sharp from Somewhere in Africa to his sister, Mrs. Marlee Curry:

January 16, 1943.

Hello Sis: Just a line to let you know that I am O. K. and I received the packages that you and Bob's sent me and I don't know how I can thank you enough for them. They sure were nice. I have had several letters from Mom and Nina the last few days. I thought for a while every body had quit writing but I guess my moving had held my mail up.

They said you had moved and Cecil was working at the water plant. I sure hope he likes his new job and that you like your new home. Nina said that Anna was in the band and doing good, but I let her drive you "nuts" blowing that hog caller. I know Nina did me. Boy, I can hear some of those sour notes yet.

How is Curt? Running up like a milk weed I bet. Tell old Cecil I can just see the skinned places

Victory Is Near

Through the thunder of guns, And the shrieking of shells, And the crash of tanks, Over millions of miles, There is a voice that is heard By the faithful who hear: "Come day this will end— And that day is quite near."

In the mills, on the farms, In the factories, too, This still voice is heard And we all know it's true— If we give all we've got, We have nothing to fear, For the day this will end Will be nearer than near.

We may lose a great deal Before Victory Day, But whatever the cost, We art willing to pay! Our homes and our farms And our freedoms are dear— They are worth all we do To bring Victory near.

The dawn comes upon us When darkness is deep, And spring time comes quickly To end winter's sleep; When things seem the blackest They are quickest to clear, Don't worry "We Will Win" And the winning day is quite near.

on his nose where that old single barrel shot gun kicked him, this fall when he was squirrel hunting. ha ha.

Well Sis, there is not much I am allowed to write about so I will close hoping to hear from you real soon.

With lots of love to one and all.

Auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter McMillion sent in this letter from their son, Orval, who is serving with the American Army overseas:

Australia! January 5, 1943.

Dear Mother: I will answer your most welcome letter I received the other day. Yes, Mother, I received the pictures and I thought they were grand, especially the one of you and Dad. I am so sorry but I haven't a picture to send you. I had some taken the other Sunday and when I get them developed I will send you one. Mother, would you send me "Hammy's" address, and also Lola's.

I am feeling fine, except for a sore hand which I have hurt twice in the last two weeks and it so happens it is my right hand, so please excuse the scribbling.

I guess the weather is rather cold there by now. You know it has been four years since I last saw snow. I could sure use a large drift of it here right now.

Mother, I get plenty of cigarettes, so there is no use of your sending me any. I went fishing the other day and caught a few. I can catch fish within twenty-five yards of my tent. We fried them in butter and were they tasty! Tell everyone hello for me. How is everything around Marlinton? I sure would like to be there. Well, I will close. Answer real soon with a long letter.

With love, Orval.

Mrs. Evelyn Higgins, of Elliott City, Maryland, sends us the following letter received from her brother, Gay Fertig, who is in the Service:

Alamogordo, New Mexico. January 22, 1943.

Dear Sis and All: I guess you have begun to think I am gone and I am just about. They sure are pouring it on now. I am able to talk my way out of about all the training. Sometimes I have to go out and box and etc. How is everything back there by now? I was hoping that I would move back that way but I guess I will be going further away. We are to leave here within the next ten days. You continue to write to me here for a while though. I will write and tell you when we leave here. I will be there about six weeks so I will have time to look the situation over and I do mean to look it over. Imagine lying out in the back yard enjoying the good old sunshine just like you do there in the summertime. But I still like the snow and if they would give me my choice I would come back to the mountains and I would take my shoes off and wade in the snow just to see if it was real.

I got the Times yesterday and was glad to see quite a few more boys writing for the Army. I have heard from anyone around here for quite some time. I guess the boys don't get time to write to home any more.

I am making an allotment of $40.00 a month which will be sent to the Bank of Marlinton and you will receive the checks for that. They should reach you sometime during the latter part of the month. If I ever get a furlough I will have to write you for some dough to get there on but I do not think that will be any way soon. If you have any blank checks on the Bank of Marlinton you can send me two or three I may need them in case of an emergency.

I guess Gay is having a nice time working in the shipyard this cold weather. There is one good thing about the Army the rationing does not worry us one bit. Tell everyone around there hello and that I will enjoy their part of Sunny California along with my own. Send me a pack of snow by return mail. Tell Louis Gene hello for me.

Love, Gay.

Walterboro, South Carolina. February 8, 1943.

This letter is from Damon Landis, who is in the Service, to his cousin, Lanty Landis at Buckeye, February 1, 1943.

Hello Lanty: How is the world serving you? Fine I hope. I suppose every one is feeling well as usual. I am feeling fine and getting fat; I weigh 135 pounds now. I think that in two more months I will weigh 300 pounds. This Army grub sure is agreeing with me.

I like the Army fine so far. They sure do put us through the ring here now eight hours a day. We get off on Saturday noon until Monday morning to rest up and we sure do take advantage of it too.

The weather down here is very hot. I have not seen any snow since I left West Virginia but it rains quite a lot by spells. Boy, it sure does get muddy here then. But we do not pay any attention to the rain and mud. We go on with our training anyway. Well, Grope Head you had better stay in on Ground Hog Day for if you see your shadow it will be bad weather probably for six more weeks ha ha.

How is the weather back there? Plenty cold I guess. I suppose things around Marlinton are very dull since so many of the boys have gone to the Army aren't they? I am driving a jeep part time and drilling part time and I have been on K. P. twice since I have been here. Boy, the Army is a great life.

Well, Grope Head as the lights

As ever your cousin,

Private Damon C. Landis, Hq. Btry, 371st F. A. Bn., 9th Division, P. O. 99, Camp Van Horn, Mississippi.

Dear Mr. Price: I am enclosing a letter from my brother Private William H. Buzzard, Btry. A, 43d Sep. C. A. Bn., Fort Bliss, Texas. Judging from his letter, he likes the Army very much.

Bill is one of the four sons of R. W. Buzzard, who are in Service. Master Sergeant Harlen L. Buzzard is with the 6th Armored Division at Fort Chaffee, Arkansas; Hubert H. Buzzard is Aviation Mechanist Mate 2-c, Naval Air Base, Pensacola, Florida; Waldo Buzzard was with the 82nd Air Borne Division, Camp Claiborne, Louisiana, but is home now because of injuries received in training.

Yours very truly,

Mrs. Elmer Workman.

January 30, 1943.

Hi Lola: Will try to answer your letter I received today. I was on K. P. but am all through now. The camp is sort of dead at the present as this is Saturday night and most everyone has gone to town. I was thinking that today would be pay day so I could go over into Old Mexico and see a bull fight. They have them every Sunday. Some of the boys were over last Sunday and saw four bulls killed, but they still they did not want to ever see another one. So you can just imagine how bad it is, but I would like to see one just to say I have, but I don't expect I will get to go tomorrow as I am broke. Maybe where else. We have another problem on the range this week for a couple of days so we might not get paid until the middle of the week sometime.

I hope this finds you all well and doing a good business. I never felt better in my life except for a cold and I don't think it will amount to very much. It has been pretty warm here lately, but it does not really get cold, it is just that we are used to lots of sunshine and when it comes a cloudy day we just think that it is awful cold, but I guess if we live long enough we will get over that. ha ha.

You should see some of the planes that fly around here. They are of all types and are worse than cars back home on the Fourth of July. You can hardly hear your car talk for the noise they make but I guess they are just like Angels from Heaven. They are really something to feel proud of.

Well, I will have to write to Polly and Lill yet tonight before I turn in. I will have to shave for tomorrow is Sunday after all so I will just say so long until I hear from you again.

Love and best wishes, Bill.

PRODUCING MORE FOOD MEANS USING BETTER SEED

To give larger stands and better crops, the seed you sow must be adapted to growing conditions on your farm.

All Southern States seed is domestic seed of known-origin and selected parentage, grown on carefully inspected fields and processed and re-processed to assure freedom from weeds.

All small grain seeds are treated for control of smut and other diseases. Most legume seeds are "Kem-Fee" treated to soften the hard outside coat and assure quicker and greater germination.

Through scientific selection, harvesting and processing, Southern States has taken the gamble out of seed buying. Each bag is fully labeled as to germination, purity and weed content. You save with Southern States seed because Southern States quality permits planting less seed—because co-operative purchasing and distribution helps bring down the cost. Inoculation FREE with each purchase of Southern States Legume Seed.

"Erwähnen Sie nichts von Amerikanischen Eisenbahnen zum Führer!"

GEN'L VON BLITZ: Don't mention American railroads to the Führer! He has been hearing reports on their wartime performance. He is frantic! The last rag in the War Ministry he has totally chewed up!

UNCLE SAM: General, it breaks our heart to think your boss guessed wrong again. Remember he said that private enterprises like railroads in "decident" America would think only of business as usual? Does he know now that right after Pearl Harbor, all railroads—like a nationwide machine—swung into the biggest mass-transportation job the world ever saw?

GEN'L VON BLITZ: Please! Don't speak of—

UNCLE SAM: But your Führer ought to know. Tell him that in 1942 our railroads rolled up some 640,000,000 ton-miles of wartime freight—one-and-a-half times the volume carried in 1918! Remind him that much of this freight was for civilians—keeping them the best-fed, best-housed, best-clothed nation in the world! Tell him that, since Pearl Harbor, more than 11,000,000 railroad trips were made by soldiers moving in organized groups—not counting men under individual orders or on furlough. And vastly increased civilian travel was handled at the same time. Tell him that when his U-boats were sinking coastwise shipping, the railroads pitched in and delivered more than 18,000,000 tons of coal to New England.

GEN'L VON BLITZ: Please! Such figures—they give spells by the Führer!

UNCLE SAM: So sorry! But tell him if he's still around at the end of 1943, he'll hear a story of American railroad performance that will twist him like a pretzel. Along with our fighting men, our railroad men are all out for victory. And they're not foolin'!

In the early sixteenth century Sicilian families dined in chairs with removable food trays instead of sitting at tables. It saved housework.

That Extra Something!

... You can spot it every time

Andre Kostelanetz, in "The Pause That Refreshes On The Air", broadcast every Sunday afternoon for Coca-Cola, brings you music with distinction. His listening audience is counted in millions. It's the extra touch Andre Kostelanetz gives to music that gives this program a character all its own. Coca-Cola, too, won distinction by giving folks something extra in refreshment.

Raise a frosty bottle of Coca-Cola to your lips. Where else than in Coca-Cola itself will you find this unique taste? It more than quenches thirst. It adds refreshment... refreshment that goes into energy.

Fifty-seven years of experience and skill, with choicest ingredients—create a quality in Coca-Cola that never loses the freshness of its appeal.

War-time limits the supply of Coca-Cola. Those times when you cannot get it, remember Coke, being first choice, sells out first. Ask for it each time.

Intermission for musicians means a trek to the Coca-Cola cooler. These artists look to the pause that refreshes for quick energy, complete relaxation. Ask your musician friend what drink he prefers.

SURGICAL DRESSINGS—Assembly line methods have been adopted by the Red Cross Production Corps to speed up the all-important job of making surgical dressings for the U. S. Army and Navy. In the past 16 months thousands of volunteer workers like these have turned out 530,000,000 dressings for the armed forces and the United Nations.

Our Army and Navy Boys

Chicago, when it was torpedoed and sunk in the Solomons on January 20. He has been in the Navy six years. He is now in Noumea, New Caledonia. This is the fourth battle he has been in.

Mrs. Hazel Hannah sends in the following poem she composed in memory of her brother, Private Frank H. Weatherholt, who has left the States for duty at an undisclosed destination:

HE HAS SAILED
It was the ninth month and the ninth day,
In the year of 1942,

When Uncle Sam called our dear brother,
For his duty to do.

He trained with other boys at Fort Eustis,
But not for very long.

They went to North Carolina
And there they heard their song.

Boys, we are going to sail,
We have got it to do,
You may write to loved ones and parents,
But don't say where you will go.

So the letter came to Mom and Dad,
Just a few days ago,
Saying, "I can't come home for a year or so,
I have to help clean up Tokyo."

We love our Frank with all our heart,
For we know he is there to do his part,
We can sacrifice in a million ways,
To help bring our boys back in a few days.

In Memoriam
William Elmer Baxter was born June 14, 1885, and departed this life February 15, 1943. He married Miss Margaret V. Hevener of Virginia. To this union two children were born, Elmer Clark at home, and a daughter, Virginia Ruth, who died in infancy. He is survived by his wife and son Clark.

God called our friend away to our great loss and Heaven's gain. He told us he had a home over there, and he is now at home. The boys, angels, are waiting for him. Father, mother and other loved ones gone before. He has told them how he overcame, and likely he is now looking over the portals of Heaven and saying dear companion, dear friends and neighbors come over; this is such a place of beauty, without sickness and without parting. Here is joy and peace; we have no need of the sun to shine, for Jesus the son of God, giveth light through all eternity. We are singing how beautiful is the home of the soul.

So let us take new hope, new courage, new faith, trusting God and reading His Holy word that we too may be over comers. Let us be like Abraham of old, who looked for a city not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

Praise Him above ye heavenly host,
Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

FIELD NOTES

This is a good spell of sugar weather, and a lot of trees are being opened. With sugar scarce and on the rationed list, I expect most of the maple run is for home consumption.

On Sunday night, L. O. Simmons, of this office, saw a good sized bear cross the road in front of his automobile between Churchville and Shenandoah Mountain, in Augusta County.

Statton Lambert, who lives on White Camp Run, up the West Fork of the Greenbrier, sends me word the deer are eating up his feed, and that I had better do something about it. I feel for him all right, but it seems like I just can't reach him. Statton also sends me word that trout came up to spawn in great numbers numbers last fall. He did not send any word about feeding my assistance along the fishing line. The inference I gather is that he expects to have the situation well in hand come fishing time. As for Statton and the deer, don't feel too sorry for the old dickens. He and I have spoiled too many ticks with a dirty rag soaked in coal oil and sulphur not to know how keep deer away from a hay stack, if we begrudge them feed.

Grandson Basil Price Sharp, 7 years past of Hillsboro, came up Washington's Birthday, and opened the family fishing season by catching a nice redeye at the railroad bridge.

Last Wednesday L. H. Beveridge came across a couple of panther tracks in the snow on Spruce Flat. One of the panthers was walking, and a few rods away the other was in a hurry. The big cats were headed for the Black Forest.

A sign of spring—young Jack Vaughan has just been in to sell wands of the pussy willow.

Attending the funeral of the late Elmer Baxter last Wednesday were Neal Baxter and Mrs. Myrtle King, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. W. A. Groger, of Parkersburg; Mrs. Bertha McAlister, R. N., of Norfolk, Virginia; Samuel and Wilma VanReenan, of Camden-Gauley; Miss Golda VanReenan, R. N., of Beckley; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hevener, of Waynesboro, Virginia; Henry Hevener, Mr. and Mrs. George Hevener, of Monterey, Virginia.

Joseph Grover Collins, aged about 53 years, died at his home at Cloverlick on February 19, 1943, after a short illness. On Sunday afternoon his body was laid in the family plot in Mount View cemetery. He is survived by his wife Mrs. Maude Bussard Collins and a sister, Mrs. Virginia Clark. He was a son of the late Samuel Collins.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will meet at the home of Mrs. H. H. Marshall on Tuesday afternoon March 2, at 2:30 o'clock. Note the change in the hour of meeting by reason of the series of special meetings at the Methodist Church.

Foreign Mission Study at the Presbyterian Church tonight, Wednesday, February 24, at 7:30. The subject is South America. Everyone urged to come.

The Logic of Service Charges

A BANK has two commodities to sell—credit and services—and compensation for these is essential if the bank is to operate soundly.

Every service rendered costs the bank money. There are direct expenses such as the cost of the actual time spent in handling checks—examining them to guard against forgery and alteration, sending those deposited to other banks for collection, bookkeeping entries, filing, postage, stationery, forms and records. There are indirect costs such as rent, light, heat, depreciation, salaries, insurance, taxes.

If a depositor's loanable balance is not large enough to produce sufficient earnings to offset the costs of services rendered, then a charge is necessary. This, you will agree, is simply sound business practice.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, FEB. 25, 1943

Dear Mr. Price:

The week of February 7 to 13 is Religious Emphasis Week for the University of Richmond. During this time many well known ministers come and speak to the students. I was asked to entertain the Reverend Cary Montague, Director of the Holy Comforter Episcopal Church in Richmond. Dr. Montague is a native of White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, and on learning that I was from Pocahontas county he became very solicitous about his old friends there. He asked me to give his regards to you, Dr. Jim, Dr. Norman, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Andrew Price, Rev. O. N. Miles, and the Coyners of Clover Lick, whose relative, Dorothy Hankins, is a member of his church.

I am afraid that Dr. Montague entertained me more than I did him by telling me stories of his younger days. He told me of the time that he was walking from White Sulphur to Mingo, in 3 days, stopping at my great grandfather George McLaughlin's hotel for a night. This was before the railroad came through Marlinton. He also referred to a religious educational school he helped to teach there in 1900.

He lived in West Virginia thirty years, and has been in Richmond twenty-five years, in which time he has become well known and loved. Dr. Montague is truly a wonderful man and a brilliant speaker. He is most popular with students because of his keen sense of humor, and his ability to argue forthrightly against a man with strong convictions.

His topic for the forum was "What is Prayer?" My only regret is that you, and his many friends in Pocahontas County, were not here to enter into his religious discussions.

I know you remember Dr. Montague, and that you are glad to hear of his whereabouts and accomplishments after such a long time.

Sincerely,
Dotty Lou McLaughlin,
Westhampton College,
Feb. 10, 1943 Richmond, Va.

Dear Cousin Calvin:

Will you kindly send my Times to me here in Florida until the first of May, after then to my home in East Bridgewater, Mass. I am a regular reader of the Pocahontas news and your editorials so much until I have been without them for a few weeks. Two things always especially interest me in your paper—one is your editorial. For some reason my daily delights are various editorials. For some years I read them in the New York Times, World Telegram and the Daily New York News.

When I went back to Boston in 1837, I still read the New York Times, Boston Herald, Boston Traveler, Boston Enterprise, and more recently The Christian Science Monitor and the Pocahontas Times (thanks to my sister, Price for The Times). And I'll confess the two papers I like best are the last two. I don't know whether you run across the Monitor very much, but they sure do have good editorials, and as I said, along with yours they are next best.

Maybe why I like to get the Times thrills back to me a little bit of West Virginia where I grew up, and I like so well and where I hope soon to return. The second thing that interests me are the articles you have on Fish and Game, Fishing and Hunting, as you know, between Kennison and Denmar. I can draw a map showing every rock and pot hole in Greenbrier river. I think I caught more fish out of that section than one. Ask Sol Workman. Fishing is all I am doing here. There is always some thing good comes out of things bad. So since I was in bed six and one half months, the medical profession thought I would do best in Florida sunshine until the cold left New England.

I am sorry and glad too, that I can't buy any kodak films here, for my own use of some of the fish I catch here. I'm glad because I can tell people what kind, size and weight of fish with out being proven a liar. I don't mind being called a liar but I hate for people to prove it. Kodak has always been a fisherman's worst enemy—so, rather than send you a picture of the fish I catch here, I'll reserve it to tell you when I see you.

Hope you people will keep striving to restore bass to Greenbrier river like they were years ago and you can if you run pike out. Well, Cousin Calvin, I didn't think I was going to write you a letter when I started. All I wanted was the Poca-Times sent to me here.

Kindest regards to you all.
Andrew W. McLaughlin,
5 Davis Court, Glenport Florida.

C. C. Carpenter of Seebert was up last Thursday to give me logical, scientific explanation of and low down on the phantom hounds of spring. Every one with any experience in woods running at all has heard the hounds a running at the coming of the first general thaw in late winter as the freeze goes out of the timber. You take your stand and the pack comes around the mountain in full cry; you look for varment being chased and you see nothing at all. Just when the hounds should come into sight, you heard the chase going over your heads through the tops of the trees. It is all very strange and weird. Most people put it down as just another sign of breaking up of winter and let it go at that. Charley admits the weather sign all right, but he has lain awake at nights, figuring cause and effect. He has arrived at the perfectly logical conclusion that it is a hound chase all right, but it is what might be well termed delayed action; what the radio people would term a hound chase by electrical transcription. His theory is that when hounds run a hot trail in cold weather, the bark of the dogs freezes to the bark of the trees, and when the timber thaws the sound is released like from a phonograph record. What part static electricity may play in the matter is not as yet developed. To back up this interesting theory one cold day last December Mr. Carpenter staged a demonstration fox chase. The hounds brought the fox around the mountain, to the stand, he shot the varment.

This year we had a Christmas thaw and the ice broke up in the river. As the freeze was going out of the timber, Mr. Carpenter paid attention; heard all over again the spirited chase around the mountain; heard the chase end at the stand; and the report of his gun. He recognized the sound of his gun and the individual mouths of his hounds. To the trained ear, the reproduction was not what could be called exactly perfect as a hollow tree would send off its booming bass reproduction of a little head of its turn, while a cross-grained stick would come in just a mite behind its place in the chorus. The timing, too, was a bit too fast, as this was a ground thaw and the freeze went out of the timber in

Old Cold Cures

By O. H. Atkinson

Few things tick the dust off a man's memories like this talk of the remedies grandmother used around this time of year when some of the family came down with the sniffles.

Almost any person past thirty can still wince at the stinging, pungent odor of the steam that rolled up in his face from a hot mustard plaster on his chest. Or feel the breath taking sharpness of the pain as the heat sank in.

And the man or woman who can't, even after a long span of years, get a little gooseflesh at the thought of the old-fashioned onion poultice or peppery tang of hot ginger tea, must have skipped over the years from six to fifteen.

The bustling, watchful mother of those days depended on mustard probably more than anything else to "break a cold." Mustard was mostly for external use, but when they set you on fire externally, with mustard, and started a flame in your insides with ginger, you usually passed into a merciful stupor and the cold fled.

And it isn't just a joke writers notion that "everybody in the community, practically, had his own private and special remedy for a cold. These ranged from mild treatment for the sniffles, to a kind of all-out remedy for bronchitis and any other kind of cold in the chest."

Camphorated oil was a specialty for babies who couldn't defend themselves, and they had it rubbed on them, back and chest until they screamed in protest. The mustard plaster was for the age bracket from seven to eight on up.

One of the pleasantest was the genuine hot toddy. That was a mild concoction of whiskey, steaming hot water, and rock candy. The idea was to gulp it as fast as you could, without actually taking the lining off your tongue, and then lean into a bed piled high with comforters. You then proceeded to "sweat out" the cold.

The mother of a kid I used to know, favored this method over all others, and innumerable times when this conscienceless faker, in perfect health would invite boys to come to his house, coughing rapidly and putting up a hue and a hurry. The phantom chase came around the mountain like the wind. This phantom hound business has been a kind of a bother to me whenever I would let my mind ponder on the subject. So, I am gratified to know this hound has been laid to rest. The phenomena has been clearly demonstrated to have a scientific basis in fact.

Use Your OLD Ration Book for SUGAR and COFFEE

HOW-TO USE YOUR NEW RATION BOOK

TO BUY CANNED OR BOTTLED FRUITS, VEGETABLES, SOUPS, AND JUICES; FROZEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES; DRIED FRUITS

1. The Government has set the day when this rationing will start. On or after that day, take your War Ration Book Two with you when you go to buy any of these processed foods.

14 POINTS

YOU GIVE MANY POINTS FOR SCARCER FOODS

8 POINTS

YOU GIVE FEWER POINTS FOR FOODS THAT ARE NOT SO SCARCE

2. Before you buy, find out how many points to give for the kind of processed food you want. Prices do not set the points. The Government will set different points for each kind and also no matter what the price. Your grocer will put up the official list of points where you can see it. It will also be in the newspapers. The points will not change just because the prices do.

3. When you buy, take the right amount of blue stamps out of the book. Do this in front of your grocer or delivery man and hand them to him. The grocer must collect a ration stamp, or stamps, for all the rationed processed foods he sells. Every rationed processed food will take points as well as money.

4. Do not use more stamps than you need to make up the right amount. For example, if the food you buy calls for 13 points it is better to use one 8-point and a 5-point stamp than two 8-point stamps and a 1-point stamp. Save your smaller point stamps for low-point foods. You can take the stamps from more than one book belonging to your household if you need to.

5. Every person in your household, including children of any age, has a total of 48 points to use for all these processed foods for one ration period. This means that you may use ALL the blue stamps marked A, B, and C from all the books during the first period. You may use as many of the blue A, B, and C stamps as you wish at one time. When they are used up you will not be able to buy any more of these processed foods till the next stamps are good. The Government will announce the date when the next stamps are good.

6. Use your household's points carefully so that you will not run out of stamps. And buy with care to make your points come out even, because the grocer will not be able to give you change in stamps. Use high-point stamps first, if you can.

IMPORTANT

You may use ALL the books of the household to buy processed foods for the household. Anyone you wish can take the ration books to the store to do the buying for you or your household.

We cannot afford to waste food or give some people more than their fair share. . . . That is why canned fruits and vegetables are rationed and that is why meat is going to be rationed. Rationing of some foods is the best and fairest way to be sure that every American gets enough to eat.

BE SURE TO READ OTHER SIDE

Here is the OPA's consumer instruction sheet on point rationing. This booklet will be given to consumers when they receive War Ration Book Two at the end of February. The booklet explains how point rationing works and how to buy canned and other processed foods with the new point ration stamps.

BETTER SEED FOR

BIGGER CROPS

HERE are the steps Southern States has taken to insure your 1943 crop success:

1. Known-origins seed carefully selected from areas that grow seed adapted to Southern States territory. Selected for growability and freedom from weed seeds and disease.
2. Cleaned and Redressed with modern, scientific equipment to remove weeds, inert matter, thin, light, undersize and damaged seed.
3. Processed for better crop results. Legume seed is "Kem-Fee" treated for greater germination; seed oats and barley are treated to prevent smut; vegetable seed is treated to control both seed-borne and soil-borne diseases.
4. Tested and Guaranteed. All seed must measure up to Southern States standards of quality. Each bag is fully labeled as to germination, purity and weed content. The full purchase price is protected by the guarantee.

The Spring Fire Season, beginning March 20 and ending May 20, during which period a permit is required by law before setting on fire any forest land, grass, stubble, brush or slash, when such materials or any part of them lies within three hundred feet of any forest land. Due to the lack of sufficient men with whom fires can be suppressed, in all probability Forest Protectors will be further restricted in issuing permits, and they may be cancelled altogether. Farmers, gardeners, and others having burning to do this spring are urged to accomplish same before March 20, when the more dangerous fire period is here, and when they will be interfered with in doing needed jobs in preparation for Spring planting.

TO OUR ARMED FORCES

Hitler is retreating; Rommel is on the run; look out, you Axis powers, our fight is being won. When Doolittle bombed old Tokyo, our war had just begun.

Callon Kelley, a hero of the air, led his buddies in the bombing to keep our flag a-flying here.

Our Pocahontas County boys, the peers of all creation, are there to do their every bit to keep our Uncle Sam a nation.

We'll sweep them from the oceans; we'll bomb them from the air; when Axis power broken Uncle Sam will still be here.

When the Allies join with comrades to set the captives free, Old Glory will be the emblem of a people always free.

Fifteen members of the Loblolly Farm Women's Club met at the home of Mrs. E. L. Cutlip for the February meeting. A fine demonstration was given by George Landenslager, assisted by Mrs. Bragg and Mrs. McLaughlin, on how to prepare a one dish meal, cheese souffle, and sugarless cookies which was enjoyed by all. Dinner was served to twenty-five people by the hostesses after which the club was called to order by the president, Mrs. E. L. Cutlip had charge of the devotional and lesson. A fine exhibit on the necessary supplies of the home medicine cabinet was given; also a demonstration on how to care for a sick person, and how to change and dress a bed. The most important point in the lesson was that during wartime large numbers of doctors and nurses are in military service, local communities are often left without enough doctors and nurses to take care of all the people in the area they are expected to serve. It is therefore, important during emergency that every thing possible be done to prevent accidents and illness, and to be prepared to give the best possible home care to illness as may occur. The next meeting will be with Mrs. C. C. Cutlip, March 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Phillips, of Cambridge Springs, Pennsylvania were called here last week by the illness of their daughter, Mrs. Virgil Spenger, of Bartow. She is now better. On Thursday Mr. Phillips called at this office to check up on those January snake and wild goose tales, and to tell the editor just as gently as he could that he writes bigger lies than Doc Hull tells. Mr. Phillips owns a dairy farm and he is now milking eighteen Holstein cows. His output goes to the city of Erie. Among his neighbors are many former Pocahontas County people and among them are: Ted Ervine, Luther Phillips, Howard Hollen, Arthur Sutton, James Arbores, Norman Smith, Lloyd Williams, Dick Sheets, Lester Ervine, Ira Sheets, Frank and John Galford.

Weekend

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Woodrell, of South Sawha Street, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Alpha Woodrell, and William R. David, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. David, of Reedy.

The wedding took place on Thursday, February 4, 1943, at the Naval Station Chapel, at Corpus Christi, Texas, where Ensign David is stationed. Captain J. H. Brooks, of the United States Navy, officiated the rite.

Following the wedding ceremony the bride and groom were entertained at the Officers Club, at the base.

Mrs. David is a graduate of the Woodrow Wilson high school and attended Concord and Marshall colleges. While at Marshall she was a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority and president of her sorority house. She is now attending Texas A. and I. at Corpus Christi, Texas, and will receive her degree there in June.

Ensign David is a graduate of Riverside Military Academy, at Gainesville, Georgia, and also attended Beckley College, and the University of North Carolina. At the latter school he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

He is stationed with the Naval Air Corps as an instructor at Corpus Christi. The couple are making their home at 715 1-2 West Lee Street, Kingsville, Texas.

GREAT BRIDGE

Dear Calvin—
I have been criticized for calling you "dear Calvin." If I have a better friend than you I do not know it, and why should I be criticized for calling my friends dear?

I just fed my bear. He is a wonder. If I lived along some public highway he would be worth his weight in gold in attracting tourists. As I do not I will take less for him.

My son Bob penned a large bear. He wired it up, through the cracks of the pen. He lifted the lid, and away went the bear. Later a man from Bartow killed it, along with three others.

This is a beautiful morning and I am thankful.

The Edray Farm Women's club met with Mrs. Elmer Poage on February 12. Nine members present. Devotions were led by Mrs. George Shrader, and the lesson on How to Care for the Sick, was led by Mrs. C. L. Barlow, and discussed by all members, and we hope it will be very useful. Mrs. Poage showed some of her electric household equipment which is very nice. Three of our members attended the community farm meetings for recreation. A game was played, and delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Skaggs, March 18th.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Women at War today are saving for Women at Peace when the War is won. They are buying War Bonds as thrifty housewives, saving to buy those handy, convenient and necessary electrical appliances when their Bonds mature.

Women know that money saved now will help win the peace, putting their money to work in our domestic factories when the war is over. They know that War Bonds today will help keep the United States strong and the world safe from the reign of terror.

WILL SPONSOR

Mrs. Marion Allen and daughter, Betty Jane, of Chatsburg, Kentucky, were guests of Mr. W. D. Clark and Mrs. James Williams, at Seebert, the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Miller, of Baltimore were weekend guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Miller.

Mrs. H. W. McNeil visited her daughter, Miss Harriet, who is a patient at the Laird Memorial hospital at Montgomery. Miss Harriet's many friends will be glad to know her health is much better.

Miss Dorothy McNeil was up from Charleston for the weekend with home folks.

Mrs. John Bear and Miss Lois Ann LaRue, of Marlinton, were Sunday guests of Miss Emma McClune.

Mrs. Albert McCoy has returned home after spending some time at Baltimore with her husband, who is employed there.

Miss "Sugar" Margaret Kellison, spent the weekend with her aunt, Mrs. Dice Grimes, at Marlinton.

Mrs. Emma Jane Satterfield and little daughter have returned from Fairmont and are now with her sister, Mrs. Hubert Lewis.

Miss Jane Sheets, a teacher in the Graded School here has a good case of mumps. Her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Morrison is teaching for her.

Mrs. Esty Mayse was called to McClung, Virginia, by the illness of her brother, A. S. Mayse, who suffered a stroke of paralysis. She was accompanied by Mrs. Basil Sharp and Mrs. Denny Ruckman and children.

Rinnie, the large well trained police dog of W. D. Clark, died last week. This dog was noted for his kind nature and intelligence.

There will be special services in the Hillsboro Methodist Church on Thursday night, February 25, at 8:00 o'clock. Rev. Fred Oxendale, of Marlinton will speak, the theme being "Life Dedication." The Hillsboro Men's Chorus will sing.

The Locust Creek Farm Woman's Club met on February 12, at the home of Mrs. Dick Beard with good attendance. Theme of the lesson was "Home Care of the Sick." The president, Mrs. Nora Jackson, gave a demonstration on "First Aid." An ever increasing number of women and girls are taking First Aid and Home Nursing Courses as part of their war service. In normal times as well as in days of disaster, this training will be very useful because there are occasional illnesses in all families that can be nursed without professional help. During these critical times when nurses and doctors are being called to military duty and private duty nurses are scarce it behooves the home maker to be ready to take care of minor sick-room needs. During the recreation hour delicious refreshments were served. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Nora Jackson, on Friday, March 12, at 2:00 P. M.

THE MARLINTON METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Fred Oxendale, Pastor.

Marlinton Methodist Church will join in a country wide observance of a Week of Dedication, beginning next Sunday, February 28, in which nearly 8,000,000 members of the denomination will be asked to pledge a "new dedication of self, service and substance" in meeting the challenge and needs of a war torn world.

Ministers from other churches will occupy the pulpit of the Marlinton Church each evening at 7:30, Sunday through Friday, Sunday, March 7, a voluntary, sacrificial offering will be taken to aid in meeting war-time emergency needs of the church.

The public is invited to these services.

The Swago Farm Women held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Walter Graham. Mrs. Lewis Gay was leader of the lesson; Mrs. John Sydenstricker gave an interesting talk on "Home Care of the Sick." There were several members and two visitors, Mrs. Arnet McNeill and Mrs. Sydenstricker, present. The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Edna Kellison, with Mrs. Nema Palmer leader of the lesson. After adjournment delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

VOL. 42 NO. 23

MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, MARCH 4, 1943

42-23 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

The greatest Red Cross Campaign in history opened March 1. The funds will be used by the national organization and county chapter to meet the primary and fundamental Red Cross responsibilities to the American armed forces at home and abroad. The quota for Pocahontas County Chapter is $3,500.

During the past year hundreds of pieces of sweaters, dresses and caps have been produced by this chapter, also many hundreds of surgical dressings have been made and shipped to the armed forces. Communication between America's fighting sons and their loved ones is maintained through Home Service work. By this responsibility hundreds of telegrams have been sent during the past year to boys from Pocahontas County.

General MacArthur cables this message from Australia, "The Red Cross has never failed us."

Pocahontas County War Fund Chairman is Mrs. H. M. Widney, of Frank, who will serve in Greenbank District. Miss Anna Lee Ervine will be in charge of Edray and Huntersville Districts and Mrs. Louise Barlow Board will be the leader in Little Levels District.

The chapter appeals to every citizen to contribute their dollars to the Red Cross and if you are not contacted in person please mail your donation to any one of these ladies or the Pocahontas Chapter at Marlinton.

The following people have contributed to the War Fund:

Luther Hudson $5; Mrs. Lou Coyner $5; Miss Anna Lee Ervine $5; Mr. and Mrs. Mac Brooks $5; Curry & Callison $10; Mr. and Mrs. Ward Hudson $5; Cal. Price $5; Mr. Ferguson $5; Mrs. Pearl Yeager $5.

S. S. Davidson was down from Back Alleghany last Thursday to attend the annual meeting of the County National Farm Loan Association. The interesting report he gave on his flock of hens was that in 1942 he sold nearly 8600 worth of eggs, and average income of more than $2 a head for each hen in the flock. Mr. Davidson keeps a number of cows and ships cream each week. His hens give him a profitable market for his skim milk and feeds raised on his farm.

Mrs. Marshall Casdorph will leave Thursday night for Centerville, Miss., where she will spend several weeks with her husband, Pvt. Marshall Casdorph, who is stationed at Camp Van Dorn, West Virginia News.

Our Army and Navy Boys

The following clipping about Lieutenant Richard H. Brown is from the Covington, Virginian. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy E. Brown, natives of Pocahontas County:

Second Lieutenant's bars and the silver wings of an Army Air Forces pilot will grace the uniform of Aviation Cadet Richard H. Brown, of Covington, following his graduation Tuesday from the Army Air Forces Advanced Flying School, Napier Field, Dothan, Alabama.

Aviation Cadet Brown and other members of his class will be graduated at ceremonies in the post chapel at Napier Field, with Colonel James L. Daniels, Jr., commanding officer, presiding. It has been announced by the public relations office. The oath of office will be administered by Major Herman L. Harris, post adjutant.

Cadet Brown's graduation will see him completing flight training that has carried him through the primary, basic and advanced schools. When he receives his diploma from Colonel Daniels he will be entitled to take his place in the ranks of the young men who are flying throughout the world for the Army Air Forces.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Brown, 114 1/2 Washington Avenue, Covington, Cadet Brown is a graduate of the Covington High School. He was employed by J. A. Shumaker Plumbing & Heating Company before he entered the armed service. He is married to the former Miss Mary A. Switzer, of Clifton Forge, Virginia.

The following poem was sent to Miss Virginia McPeters, of Marlinton, by PFC. Robert Ryder, now serving with the United States Army in Alaska:

"WHO SAID ALASKA"

Up there there's no ten commandments,
And a man can raise a thirst,
It's the outside of civilization,
A victim of life at its worst.

Nobody knows they are living,
And nobody gives a damn,
Back home they are soon forgotten
These soldiers of Uncle Sam.

Living with the dirty natives,
Up in this cold rainy zone,
Up in the glacier country,
And where you are all alone.

Into town we go on pay day,
And squander our meager pay,
We raise merry hell for one evening,
And wake up broke the next day.

Disgusted at night on their pillows,
Illness that no doctor can cure,
"Hell No," we are not convicts,
Just soldiers on an unknown tour.

There is just one consolation,
Gather around and I shall tell,
When we die, we will all go to "Heaven."

For we have served our "Hitch
In Hell."

Great Lakes, Illinois—Three Pocahontas County, West Virginia, men reported to the United States Naval Training Station here last week to begin several weeks of basic training.

During their period of training here the new Bluejackets will be physically conditioned through participation in the Navy's vigorous physical hardening program. They will learn the fundamentals of seamanship and Naval procedure, and be given a series of aptitude tests to determine the type of work to which they will be assigned.

Upon completing their recruit training they will be granted a nine-day leave.

The Pocahontas County men here are: Lysle Yeager Hively, 19, son of Walter A. Hively, Rural Route No. 2; Dunmore; Charles Arling McLaughlin, 26, son of Mrs. Charles A. McLaughlin, Rural Route No. 2, Dunmore; and Edgar Lee Cromer, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Cromer, Box 8, Durbin, West Virginia.

Napier Field, Dothan, Alabama—Private First Class Claude W. Bruffey, of Lobelia, has been promoted to the grade of Corporal. It was announced today by the Public Relations Office at Napier Field, Alabama.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Remus M. Bruffey, of Lobelia, Corporal Bruffey is a graduate of the Hillsboro High School. He was employed as a cabinet maker at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and Beacon, New York, and immediately prior to his entrance into the armed service he was employed by the Aberdeen Proving Grounds. At Napier Field he is working as an airplane mechanic.

Barksdale Field, Louisiana—Charles Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Wilson, Route No. 1, Marlinton, West Virginia, has been promoted from Private First Class to Technician 5th Grade, at Barksdale Field, where he is now crew chief in a Signal construction battalion.

A farmer in civilian life, Wilson was inducted into the armed services on August 31st of last year. He has been at Barksdale Field for two and one-half months and was previously stationed at Harding Field, Louisiana, and MacDill Field.

(Note: Charles is the son of Neighbor Moody Wilson, who had a good record as a soldier in the A. E. F. in the First World War.

Private Densel C. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Williams, of Lobelia, has reported for duty at Parris Island, South Carolina.

Earl Marshall Kesler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Kesler, of Clover, left Wednesday for Fort Hayes, Ohio. He joined the Air Corps Reserve in June 1942, but was allowed to continue his studies at West Virginia University, where he recently graduated. He will go from Fort Hayes, Ohio, to Keesler Field, Mississippi, for his basic training.

L. O. Simmons received the following letter from his son, Houston Simmons, who is stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas:

Wednesday night,
February 24, 1943.

Dear Dad:
I guess you think that I have forgotten you, but I haven't. I think of you often, but we are kept so busy that we hardly have time to write. The training is still tough, and I am as hard as a rock. I am starting to progress though. I have been made an acting Corporal, and if I can keep the good work up I will be made a Corporal and I am trying as hard as it is humanly possible. I have completed my firing on the range and I made a rifle marksman's medal.

The food here is swell. We get plenty of everything to eat, and all the shoes we can wear out. I appreciated your letter and the card from Junior. You cannot imagine how much I appreciate them; they certainly do help a awful lot.

I get the Times every Sunday and I spend the day reading it and in that way I can keep up with the folks at home. I show it to the boys here and they get a big kick out of the Field Notes and they get mad if there isn't any in the paper.

Tell Mr. Price and the force I said hello and to keep the good work up.

Take good care of yourself and I will do likewise and one of these days we will be together again.

Your son, Houston.

Pvt. Houston E. Simmons,
Co. F, 39th Bn., M. P. R. T. C.,
Bldg. No. 3757-T,
Fort Riley, Kansas.

The following letters are from

Farm Loan Association

The annual meeting of the Pocahontas National Farm Loan Association was well attended at the County House in Marlinton on Monday, by farmers from every part of the county. The meeting was held in the County House, and P. Bell, secretary, showed the affairs of the association to be in good condition. The pay off of loans was far in excess of the number of new loans made. The board of directors, Z. S. Smith, Jr., Moffett McNeel, M. F. Rader, G. M. Sharp, and G. Arbogast, among the speakers were County Agent Ben Morgan, Attorney P. T. Ward and Calvin W. Price.

Naturally, the subject of both private and public discussion with farmers this year is how to stretch another link to produce more with less labor available. Invariably, the subject is approached from two points: first patriotism and, second, profit. To back up the fighters of our own forces and those of our allies, it is necessary that every possible bit of food be produced this year. "Feed a Fighter in 1943" is a 4-H Club slogan.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Pocahontas County National Farm Loan Association, Z. S. Smith, Jr., was elected president; Moffett McNeel, vice president; R. B. Bell, secretary and treasurer. The Loan Committee Mr. Smith, Mr. McNeel and O. G. Arbogast, with alternates M. F. Rader, G. M. Sharp and Elba Callison.

Kyle Dille, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dille, of Dunmore, to his mother and sister. Kyle is in the Army and stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.
January 23, 1943.

Dear Mabel:
I received your letter today and was glad to get it. I am well now but have been to the doctor twice this week. My feet have been hurting. We have to walk so much. We walk 25 miles a day. That is what the Infantry is—hard work.

It is a nice day here but it was cold Monday—43 degrees below zero. These were the six boys died here Monday. They camped in the woods Sunday night and it was so cold and they laid in the snow Sunday night. Ninety of them are in the hospital.

How is Dad by now? Well, I hope, and how is Mother? I got Christine's letter and she said Charles Arbogast was in this camp. What is his address?

I will send you all some pictures when I get some made.

I have the radio on now. I would like to be back home to night. Hope to get back home some day and might get to come in March. It is about 850 miles home from here. I got some maps from Lawrence Friday.

I have not got a pay day yet for December and January but I will get pay the first of February for the two months. How is Dorothy? Hope she is well by now. Tell Donald and Calvin to be good boys and I hope to see them soon. I had a letter from Doris today.

I am on my bed now listening to the radio and the news sounds good. I will close for this time. Write soon.
Love, Kyle.

Dear Mother:

I will drop you a few lines tonight, although it is about bed at eight o'clock.

Arboreal C. S. C. S. Meets

The Arboreal Children's Society of Christian Service met at the home of Naomi and Alice Sutton, on Saturday, February 20th. The program was in honor of George Washington's birthday and consisted of essays, readings, poems, patriotic songs and the flag salute. There was a thorn tree to represent a cherry tree and each member brought a small red bag to represent cherries. The bags contained as many pennies as they were old; the money taken in went into the treasury. After the program a short devotion was held with Mrs. DeHaven giving a quiz on Washington. Several members were assigned essays on various places in Latin America to be given at the next meeting. At the close of the meeting delicious cookies and ice cream topped with cherries were served to sixteen members and one visitor. The next meeting will be held at the home of Betty Orndorff on Saturday, March 20.

Time now. I am O. K. tonight. I received the box all right Monday and the cake sure was good. I hope you all are well.

Well, Mother, we are moving again. We will leave here some time between March 5th and 15th. Expect we will go to California or Arizona and it will be hot there. My bed will be on the ground.

My work will be on maneuvers and it will be hard work and hot too. I will not get home now, but I hope to get back soon. Do not write any more to me here after March 2nd, for I will not be here. I would like to be there with you tonight, Mother, and I hope to be again some day soon. Well, I will close for this time. Good night. Love, Kyle.

Even if the useful lives of Editor Will Price, Bill Snyder, Arch J. Weston, Luther Montgomery, Herchel C. Ogden and John Andy Grose—all gone with in a year—had been spared longer to us in their newspaper endeavors, I still would welcome the return to the fold of three prodigals. With the ranks so depleted, it is especially good to note that Phil Conley is back with his first love, the West Virginia Review. It would be neither kind nor fitting to say he is bringing the West Virginia monthly back to life from ashes, phoenix-like. However, the last issue does carry the sign of revival from the loving touch of the hand of its old master.

After a successful go in the commercial printing business in Buckhannon, and a spell in the army, Editor Joshua W. Reynolds is back in the art preservation of arts as owner and editor of the Doddridge County Republican, at West Union, Doddridge County.

Then, good news broke again last week with the announcement of the return to the craft of Robert H. Pritchard, through the purchase of capital stock of the Western Democrat from Congress man Andrew Edmiston. Three years ago Mr. Pritchard left the fold to "read, write and rove."

I guess it turned out mostly reading and roving. In that time he did fifteen months of effective public service in setting up the War Savings office for the National Treasury in West Virginia. He is the able West Virginia country editor, whose standing has been recognized all over the country; he is a past president of the National Editorial Association. His guiding motto is: "No printed story a child cannot read," and that kind of a man should not be wasted outside the newspaper realm.

Mayor Sheets, Now

At the meeting of the Town Council on Monday night, the resignation of G. Steele Callison as Mayor was received and accepted, and Carl Sheets was elected to fill out the term expiring June 30 next. My congratulations and best wishes are extended to our worthy citizen, Mayor Sheets, on his deserved promotion.

Here follows the telegram from Mayor Callison, who has accepted a position as pharmacist in Oak Hill:

To become effective March 1, I resign from the office of Mayor of the Town of Marlinton, due to the fact my work requires me to move my residence to Oak Hill. I extend to each councilman and every citizen my sincere appreciation for their kindness and cooperation through the greatest progressive construction period Marlinton has witnessed. This was accomplished only by the cooperative efforts of the individual citizens. No one man, nor dozen, can claim credit. Wish to commend Carl Sheets as my successor. Best wishes and may God be your guide always.

At the meeting Monday night there were present J. W. Hill, recorder; W. H. Arbogast, J. M. Bear, W. L. Davis, Dice Grimes and Walter Mason.

Among those attending the funeral of the late E. P. Shafer, at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, on Monday were Mr. and Mrs. John S. Hannah, Dr. U. S. Hannah, and R. F. Fox.

County Court was in session Tuesday. Present, Z. S. Smith, Jr., F. W. Rockman, and B. B. Beard.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Castellow, of New Martinsville, on Saturday, February 27, 1943, a son, Mrs. Castellow will be remembered as Miss Frances Hunter, formerly of Marlinton.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1943

Without doubt, the best known bird in America is the robin red breast. Some one has said the red breast is not a robin at all; differing much from the English robin. Our robin is one of the thrush family. Though migratory, I would always claim him as a West Virginia bird, for no winter is too cold and snowy to prevent him staying all winter long in the mountains to the east of the Greenbrier River, in the dogwood range. Since bird banding has come into practice, it has been proven the robins raised in the Greenbrier Valley winter in Tennessee and North Carolina. The robins which sometimes winter by the tens of thousands in the Greenbrier Valley are said to migrate here from Canada.

The wide distribution of the robin, its attractive plumage, its fondness for human society, combine to make it a general favorite. In many books of reference the writers go out of the way in attempt to prove the robin is insect-eating habits of the robin more than offset any fruit he may need to piece out his daily food ration and raise his family. I say, the robin is worth all his board and keep for his cheerful presence and song, and for never ceasing to bring spring back with him each year.

Another member of the thrush family is the blue bird. He is not so apt to hang around all winter as his cousin the robin, but it seems blue birds are always seen earlier in the year than robins. This early migrating habit has proved the undoing of many a poor blue bird, by getting caught in a tough, late winter storm.

Much dubious bird lore has been written up by poets, with fancy crowding out facts, but James Russell Lowell caught the right idea when he wrote:

"The blue bird shifting his light load of song,
From post to post along the cheerless fence."

This habit has delighted many a wanderer along a country road and through fields yet seen in early spring.

The titmouse family is classified among the song birds; not because they can sing, but because they have well developed vocal organs. We have the crested titmouse, known also as the tomtit; also, as the "peto bird" from his characteristic call note. A few years ago there was legislative flurry to make the tufted titmouse our official West Virginia State bird, after referendum by the school children. The legislature balked, as such a modest, trusting, useful, wistful little bird is hardly symbolic of the forthright nature of our mountaineers.

In the titmouse family are the chickadees. These cheerful little birds even in the bitterest weather flit from tree to tree, happy and care free, with laughter and little jokes. These are most useful birds, inspecting every nook and crevice of tree bark to take and eat insects, eggs and larvae. Like the nuthatch and a few other birds, the chickadee does not mind being upside down.

Titmice are much more numerous than most people think. Unobtrusive by nature and small in size, summer and winter they serve as an effective standing army, to keep in check insect pests which would eat up the world.

No mention of birds in this town of Marlinton could overlook the red bird, the Virginia, or Carolina, or Kentucky, cardinal. I study to pass latin names for flora and fauna, but the book name of the red bird, cardinalis cardinalis, rolls off the tongue with such gusto it seems to fit this romantic and charming bird. There is the old saying that fine feathers do not necessarily make fine birds. However, in the case of the cardinal, we do have a fine bird with fine feathers and refined ways. He is ever cheerful and active and industrious. The young are cared for eagerly by the male while the female is sitting on a second laying of eggs. The attention the cardinal gives to his mate is noticeable. He is never fearful to fly about looking after the nest or leading her to some favored food or singing to her far up in a tree while she is busy bathing by a brook—a gentleman gallant and unafraid. It is a joy to have such a bird as the cardinal in the neighborhood, and this winter as many as a dozen pairs have been checked at a feeding station in Marlinton. There are many householders in this town who maintain bird feeding stations. I have never been able to know for sure whether these red birds come from far hunch country to our hunch country, or are regular residents at our place. Any one who knows they are easily a hundred pairs of red birds which come to this town on a winter day. Look for the cardinal nest in evergreen trees.

Another grosbeak is the rose breasted one. A beautiful bird, but such a rugged individualist he is not attracted to bird feeding stations. This grosbeak migrates, but he is found the winter long in this region, but it is impossible to tell whether these are our birds or those who came here from farther north.

Another of the finches is the towhee. He is not a winter resident, but is a most welcome woods dweller during the spring, summer and fall. What hunter has not been fooled by creeping up on a towhee scratching in dry leaves fully expecting a grouse or quail to break out in head long flight at any minute.

Another very fine gentleman in feathers is the cedar wax wing. He is also called the cherry bird. The bird people are always talking about the apparent politeness of the cedar waxing; how a half dozen of these birds sit close together on a limb and pass a cherry down the line and back again; none of them making attempt to eat even a part of the fruit. One hard boiled authority allows the birds are not hungry. A more romantic brother asks how he knows they are not hungry. This is a bird of marvelous beauty and elegance. The wax wing name comes from the row of red sealing wax-like spots "on terminal appendage of secondary Coverts" speaking of tail feathers. Unlike many birds of beautiful feathers, the wax wing is a singer of parts too.

While the cardinal comes to feeding stations as a gracious act of politeness, to show his appreciation of food provided, that onery cuss of a jay bird shows up only because he thinks he is stealing something, and to put it over on the lords of creation. He sits in the seat of the scornful; though it must be said that he, has at least third place (to the cardinal and the wax wing) as the handsome bird of Ambria. Here is the "literal truth" of the saying that "fine feathers do not make fine birds." The jay is a persistent nest robber, and he steals from the love of stealing. He is just another crow all dressed up. James Whitcomb Riley gives accurate sketch of him in "Knee Deep in June."

Mr. Blue Jay, full of sass
In them baseball cloths of his,
Sportin' round the orchard jes
Like he owned the premises.

The jay is the mail carrier or the town crier of the woods. Let a deer hunter pick up a game trail and the pesky jays will follow him from daylight to dark, in relays, advertising his progress all along the line, by their fussing and their cussing. Thief is the best thing they call him.

This writing is only remarkable in the fact that time and space permits the mentioning of so few of the hundreds of birds which make their homes, at least part of the year, in our home region—a region remarkable for the number and varieties of birds it supports. Believe it or not, it is easier to write a long chapter on each bird than it is to say even a good word for many birds in one short chapter.

To Forest Users:

Some of us will be clearing land this spring. We want to grow more in the way of crops. Such clearing is praiseworthy. Our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, has asked us to grow more of the essential crops for ourselves, our fighting forces and our Allies. We are going to do it. That's fine.

We would like, however, to call your attention to one consideration. Please be careful with fire. It is your privilege to burn brush but do it according to law. The law states that it is your obligation to take precautions to take precautions to the end that fire is confined to the burning of brush and trash. Do not lose sight of this important point.

You've seen the log trucks rolling down the highways. There are some fine logs on these trucks and there are some poor logs on these trucks—and there are some parts of both, kinds of logs that have been left in the woods—parts burned by fire, parts rotten and decayed where fire has opened the door for insects, fungus and disease. Look at these log trucks again. Are those logs in trucks or are they wooden troop transport ships? Are they logs of are they Army Cargo. Look at these a thousand miscellaneous wood products which are essential to fighting a war! Look again, you—they are logs. It is there in the background that you visualize these products for which the logs will be used.

Wood is needed for war. Fire destroys wood. It follows, even as battle follows fire, that to wantonly destroy timber by fire is to imperil our war effort. In addition, it is endangering a future timber resource which may be important as our present timber supply.

Those of us able to get into the woods to hunt or fish must be careful that our fires are "black out" before leaving them. Also that our cigarette butts or pipe heels are not cast thoughtlessly into dry leaves or brush. Crush them into a wet place with your shoe heel. Consider the boys fighting "out yonder." What a paradise the West Virginia hills will be for them after the Hades of war. Don't we owe it to them to turn these woods back to them unspoiled by fire.

Please consider moreover, there are very few of us left to fight fire. Surely we don't want to take men away from essential war effort for the purpose of controlling forest fires. Such fires need not occur; to have them happen is sabotage.

So, let's "blitz" this fire business. We need only one inexpensive weapon—it is called "Care with Fire." Carry it with you when you burn brush, put it in your gun case, wind it on your fishing reel. It is unrationed and there is plenty for everyone, put a little in every pocket.

We appreciate your cooperation

Dear Jane:

I did not expect to get a letter from you, but you are much better at writing than Dad! What did Santa bring you? Or were you not a good girl and he forgot you? I bet he didn't did he!

I bet you would like to be over here so you could ride camels with me but you would have to hold on tight or you would fall off. They are big and tall and very hard to ride for they throw you backward and forward when they walk. They lay down for you to get on and off, and they almost throw you off when they start to get up.

The best thing to ride are the little donkeys which are about as tall as you are, and can carry anything twice as big as they are. The natives ride them. I have rode them several times but they are so small that I have to hold my feet up to keep them from dragging the ground. They also use them to pull two wheel carts, and you can always see little native boys going by with them.

We used to have a monkey but he ran away and never came back. You probably would not like the little native girls here for the most of them wear buttons in their nose, and have holes punched in their ears and wear big rings in them. Most of all they go barefooted and wear bright colored rags wrapped around them for a dress. They carry everything on their head and they can even stoop over without it falling off.

I am about to run out of paper so I had better say goodbye for this time. Tell Jenna hello for me and write me again real soon. Your brother, Carl.

P. F. O. Norman Dilley, of Fort Lewis, Washington, was home on furlough last week with his sister, Mrs. G. W. Gilmore and other relatives.

The following letter is sent to us by Private Denley, Cassell, of the United States Army Air Force stationed at Miami Beach, Florida. He is the son of Robert Cassell, of Cass.

February 19, 1943.

Dear Calvin: The next time the call comes to make the world safe for democracy I'm taking a crack at the Navy. As you know, I was a victim of "Class A." The next time I want to be in "Class B." "B" there when they go and "B" there when they come back.

I remember when I was registering I went to the desk and my boss was in charge. He said, "What is your name?" I said, "Denley Cassell." He said, "are you an alien?" and I replied, "no, I feel fine." Then he said, "when did you first see the light of day?" I said, "when I moved from Pittsburgh, to Cass, West Virginia." He asked me how old I was so I told him "twenty the 19th of September." He said, "The 19th of September you will be in North Africa, and that will be the last of August."

A veterinarian started to examine me. He asked me if I had ever had the measles, small-pox, or St. Vitus' dance and if I ever took it. I said, "No, only when I stay in a saloon too long." Then he said "can you see all right?" I said sure but I'll be cockeyed tonight if I pass. Then he listened around my chest and said, "I think you have a wart somewhere." I said "wart, my neck, there is a button in your ear." The doctor said he had examined 140,000 men and I was the most perfect physical wreck he had examined. Then he handed me a card—Class A.

Then I went off to camp in Columbus, Ohio. I guess they did not think I would live long. The first fellow wrote on my card, "Flying Corpse." I went a little further and some guy said "look what the wind blew in." I said, "wind nothing the draft is doing it."

On the second morning they put them down on me. What an ordeal! As soon as you are in it you think you can lick anyone. They have the same two legs and two arms. The pants are so small and tight I can't sit down. The shoes are so big that I can turn around three times and they don't move. And what a raincoat they gave me. It strains the rain. I posted an officer all dressed up with a fancy belt and all that stuff. He said calling after me, "Don't you notice what I have on?" I said "yes, but what are you kicking about, look what they gave me."

I landed in camp with $75.00 and in ten minutes I was broke. I never saw so many threes and twos on dice before. No matter what I did I went broke. Something went wrong even in cards. One time I got five aces and I was afraid to bet and it was a good thing that I didn't for the fellow next to me had six kings. Finally I said, "this is a crooked poker game." The fellow next to me said "we are not playing poker, this is pinocchio." Everything was crazy. If you were a farm hand you were put in the medical department and if you were a watchman you were made officer of the day. I saw a guy with a wooden leg and I asked him what he was doing in the army and he said he was going to mash potatoes.

Oh, it was nice—five below zero one morning and they called us out for underwear inspection. You talk about scenery—red flannels, BVD's—all kinds. The union suit I had on would have fit Tony Galento. The Lieutenant lined us up and told me to stand up. I said I am standing up—this underwear makes you think I am sitting down. He got so mad that he put me to digging ditches. A little while later he passed and said, "don't throw that dirt up, dig another hole and throw it in there." I was pretty mad then so another guy named Jones and I drank a quart of whiskey. Finally Jones acted so funny I ran to the doctor and told him that Jones was going blind. He asked me if Jones saw pink elephants. I told him "no, that was the trouble; they are all over the place and he can't even see them."

Three days later we sailed for Australia. Marching down to the pier I had some more bad luck. I had a Sergeant who stuttered and it took him so long to say "halt" that twenty seven of us matched overboard. They pulled us out and the Captain came along and said "fall in." I replied "I have just been in." I was on the boat 12 days and was seasick all the time. In the middle of one of my best heaves the Captain rushed up and said to me, "what company are you in?" and I said "I am all by myself." He asked if the Brigadier was up yet and I told him if I had swallowed it was up. Talk about your dumb people! I talked to one of the fellows and I said "I guess we dropped anchor," and he said, "I knew we would lose it, it has been hanging out ever since we left New York."

Well, we landed in Australia and was immediately sent to the trenches. After three nights in the trenches all the cannons started to fire. I started to shake with patriotism. I tried to hide behind a tree, but there was not enough trees for the officers. The Captain came around and said, "five o'clock and we go over the top." I said, "I'd like to go on a furlough." He said, "haven't you got any red blood in you? I answered "yes, but I don't want to see it." He said, "where do you want to go?" I said, "anywhere it is warm." He told me where to go.

Five o'clock and we went over the top. Ten thousand Japs came at us. They all looked at me like I had started the war. The Captain yelled "Fire at Will." But I didn't know any of their names so I didn't fire. I guess that the fellow behind me thought that I was Will. He fired his gun and shot me in the excitement. On my way to the hospital I asked a fellow where they were taking me and he said, "you are going to the morgue." I said, "there is some mistake, I am not dead." He said, "do you want to make a fool out of the doctor?"

The Army life is not as bad as some of the boys think it is.

Yours very truly,

Private Denley Cassell, 595 T. S. S., Flight G., A.A.F.T.C., B.T.C. No. 4, Miami Beach, Florida.

Time Is Our House

By Louise McNeill

H. B. McNeill in Washington Herald-Advertiser

This slender book of poems came to my desk the other day and started a train of recollections which eventually carried me to a letter at the very bottom of a drawer, dated July 11, 1937.

The writer of the letter was Miss Margaret Miller, at that time a member of the faculty of the Concord State Teachers' College and she was enlisting critical support for Miss McNeill's writings—none of which had then been published except in magazines. I quote from it:

"Miss McNeill has written this year a number of poems of very high quality. Only one who has read all her poems, both published and unpublished, can realize the recognition she is due to receive within the next few years. The editor of American Mercury has just accepted another of her poems."

Louise McNeill is a cousin of Mrs. Ann Scott Wilson of Huntington.

Pinned to the letter is a clipping from The Morgantown Post and another from The New York Times, the first concerning Miss McNeill's work while she was attending West Virginia University the second reviewing of her first book of poems, "Gaugley Mountain." And because it practically impossible to review a collection of poems except by quoting from them, I submit the following from some early, uncollected stanzas to explain why I have kept the letter furlough with his his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Remus Brulley, at Lobelia.

Five years: the strength of mountains, pulses, in the wind, the sound of frozen ground. "Louise McNeill" home in Marquette, West Virginia and she began putting her thoughts into verse at the age of two. It was just a single line uttered as she leaned out of her farmhouse window, with stories of sheep pens constructed by her marauding wolves away, passing through her head. The poem was: "Down in the sheep pen, round and round, I think I see a dandelion. I think, I say."

It was not an auspicious start for a poet, perhaps, but it might have suggested to a person of keen perception the sort of thing she would later produce, like this:

AUTUMN DUSK

Down from the still spring we drive them home, And the sun makes a halo around their backs. The lambs run ahead and kick their heels. We stick our brown, bare toes in their tracks. Down the path where the rough burrs lie To jog our feet like the pricks of sin. Down by the "seek-no-farther" tree. When let down the bar and drive them in. The sun and the gold are gone from their wool. It's dark in the lot and the grass is damp. We race up the lane through the swinging gate To fire and food and the kitchen lamp. These samples should save to convince you that I had reason to save those clippings and the letter from Miss Miller. So that when I received a second letter, indicating that she had switched her allegiance to Southwestern College at Winfield, Kansas. I was more than intrigued and could hardly wait until Miss McNeill's new book was delivered the following day.

"Time Is Our House" is a striking little book—striking in appearance, in the illustrations of Arthur K. D. Healy, in topography and in content. There is vigor and imagery in the poems, variety in their moods and a kind of mountain melody in their cadences. Here, for example, is a paragraph from "Hill Daughter":

Land of my fathers and blood, oh my fathers, whatever is left of your grudge in the rock of your hate in the stone; I have brought you at last what you sternly required that I bring you. And have brought it alone.

Contrast that with this, a fragment from a poem called "American Nursery Rhyme":

What is a country made of, made of words and swales and buffalo trails—Winds and rivers and old men's tales. Legends and dreams are made of.

While there is nothing in Miss McNeill's poems to suggest the easy cynicism or the brittle snariness of so much modern verse, she is more subtle here than she has been in the past. The yearning of a son and perhaps other things, both disturbing and distracting have suppressed the gaiety and whimsicality which have been her earlier poems. I recall, for instance, the closing lines of "Mountain Corn Song" from

"Gaugley Mountain"

This is the season to kneel in the muck And strip each ear from its withered shuck. With, "One for the dodger and one to feed, One for licker and one for seed."

In the present book as in her earlier collection, she is at her best with mountain topics and mountain scenes. Constantly recurring in her verses are the country side she knew as a child and the impressions of West Virginia left upon her from those earlier days. The wind, the open fields, the trees on the mountain sides, the sky, the hillside spring—these are the subjects with which she deals best. When she attempts, very rarely, to go "modern," her sureness fails her.

I think Miss McNeill really has something on the ball. While poetry is not my special weakness I find in her verses an eloquence and a sincerity which are refreshing in these days of the slipshod word. If she does not deserve the rank of West Virginia's first poet, I know nobody who does.

Electric Costs Show Decrease

According to figures printed in the Monthly Labor Review of the United States Department of Labor the cost of electricity decreased two per cent in the period from September, 1939, to August, 1942. The Review also gave some figures on costs of other articles for the same period which also are of interest. They included: Fuel oil, increased 35.4 per cent; coke, increased 22.3 per cent; bituminous coal, increased 15.5 percent; anthracite coal, increased 14.6 percent; ice, increased 12.4 percent; wood, increased 10.7 per cent; kerosene, no change; and gas decreased 1.7 per cent.

West Virginia Merit System

The West Virginia Merit System has announced forthcoming examinations for stenographic, clerical and machine operators positions in the State and county departments of public assistance, unemployment compensation, health and the United States Employment Service for West Va.

Examinations will be given for thirteen classes of positions. Beginning salaries range from $75 monthly on the county level, to $160.00 monthly on the state level depending upon the type of position. The examination announcement defines minimum requirement for each position and lists salaries paid for each position.

Applications for these examinations are now being received in office of Merit System Supervisor Atlas Building Charleston. Application blanks and announcements may be obtained at any of the local or state offices of Public Assistance, Unemployment Compensation, Health or Employment Service.

Positions under the Merit System offer a chance for permanent employment and regular advancement upon satisfactory service. State departments are greatly in need of competent workers, and present a real opportunity to serve at this time.

The closing date for filing applications is March 10. Robert F. Bingham, supervisor of the Merit System, states that in all probability, the examinations will be given the latter part of March.

A Bird A Week

Last week the cold spell brought snowbirds back in plenty to the food station under the pines in the back yard. No bird is more welcome, and none makes himself more at home about the premises in the unobtrusive, unpretentious, genial, cheery, friendly ways of a true gentleman. Dark slate in color, with white under parts and white edged tail, his color is distinctive, and attractive, too, against snow and evergreens.

The snow bird comes to Marlinton with the coming of cold weather. However, he is a year long resident of the Greenbrier Valley. In summer he is found in the spruce woods of the Black Forest. I have seen snow birds nests on Black Mountain, Cranberry, Spruce Knob and Red Lick. Every time I found the nests well hidden in moss, by the mother bird fluttering away to keep from being stepped on.

The snow bird is a seed eater in large part. Its insect food is composed almost entirely of the harmful kind; caterpillars form the greater part. No fruit nor grain for him.

About a century ago the scientific name of junco was imposed on the snowbird. School children are gradually being led to use this meaningless word, junco. What it means nobody seems to know. It appears there is a latin word, junco, which means seed. Confidently, I ask you why adopt a foreign word of doubtful meaning and no apparent application in any instance, and particularly none in this case when we have such an expressive and meaning name as snowbird?

Our snowbirds cover the land from the Rockies to the Atlantic Ocean; from the Gulf to Alaska. Their summer home is from the West Virginia Appalachians north to Siberia, by way of the Yukon Valley and the Aleutian Islands. It is probably the most common of all American birds.

In the southern Alleghenies there is another variety known as the Carolina snowbird. It is a little larger and its color is not so dark as the familiar bird of winter days. However, I have never been quite sure whether or no the Carolina snowbird is to be found on our higher mountains in the summer.

West of the Rockies, there are so many varieties of snow birds, the scientists get headaches trying to class them.

The snow bird is a finch. Distinguishing marks of a finch are a strong, cone shaped bill, nine feathers in the "hand" of his wing and twelve feathers in his tail. In a snow bird's tail, the two outermost feathers are white.

The finches are probably the largest family of birds. There are more than a thousand species and subspecies. I have been told that they are found in every land except Australia. Maybe as many as a couple of hundred finches are found in America. Four names have been applied to this group: snowbirds, sparrows, grosbeaks, buntings and finches. The plumages range from the dusty spar-

NYA

Byron B. Ruddle, of the National Youth Administration, Lawburg, was in Marlinton last Thursday. His field embraces counties of Greenbrier, Monroe and Pocahontas. At this time the NYA has openings for young women between the ages of 16 and 25 years for training for war defense positions. The training schools for girls only are at Arthursville in Preston county, and Camp Caesar, in Webster County. The units of training are in welding, radio, sheet metal and machine shop. In addition to these four units an additional course in wood working is given at Camp Caesar. In addition to room and board, girls enrolling will be paid $10.80 a month.

For full particulars write Mr. Ruddle at Lewisburg YPA office, or see the National Employment Service representatives, who are in Marlinton and Cass every two weeks.

rows to the flaming red bird. Nobody seems to know what the word finch means or where it came from; bunting is plump or jumpy, as a sail puffed out by wind; sparrow is from the Anglo-Saxon word, sparrow, meaning flutterer; grosbeak is just big beak; but there are birds in other families with big bills.

To Whom It May Concern:

This greeting has a familiar ring. Most often you see it on letters and other communications intended to introduce or to identify someone. Another but less common form, serving a somewhat similar purpose, reads: "Know all men by these presents, &c." Both have been handed down for generations. They are part of our inheritance.

Ordinarily, the Legal or Public Notices appearing in this and other newspapers do not bear any such salutation. Nevertheless, this is precisely what legal or official advertising is—Public Notice to who ever it may concern, or affect.

In reality, it is a form of warning that some move or action is planned that involves the rights of other individuals or of the public at large. It is printed in compliance with the law, but it also implies that some times so states that unless there is prompt and proper objection the change will be carried out without other Notice than is provided by law.

Such a Notice may affect or concern you as an individual, or you may have occasion to use it yourself. Many such Public Notices, especially where they concern public improvements, directly affect you and your neighbors, or the community. It is highly important, therefore, that such Notices be given. It is equally important for them to be read and understood, otherwise the intent of the law is not met.

There Goes Your Line Extension

Perhaps you would like to have electricity but can't get it because we are not permitted to extend our lines. Believe us—no one is more sorry than we are that the materials needed to do this are not available.

But do you realize that building an average bomber takes more copper than there is in a mile of the wire used for electric line extensions? When you multiply that by thousands of bombers and add to it all the other uses in tanks, ships, guns, and ammunition, you will see how enormous the demand is and why, for victory's sake, your needs must wait.

We want to provide you with service and as soon as possible, we will. In the meantime, you will understand that the sacrifice is a necessary one for both of us. Next time an army plane roars overhead, you may well say—"There goes my line extension."

A PROCLAMATION

By The President Of The United States Of America

WHEREAS The American National Red Cross during the first year of our participation in the war has rendered vital humanitarian services to the members of our armed forces and to their families;

WHEREAS The demands made upon the Red Cross are steadily increasing from day to day as it is called upon to accompany our Army and Navy into world wide theaters of action, to provide blood plasma for our wounded, to send relief to American and United Nations prisoners of war, and to expand its preparation to meet emergencies at home;

WHEREAS The American National Red Cross is under the necessity of raising further funds in order that these essential services may be continued and expanded;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, and President of The American National Red Cross, do hereby designate the month beginning March 1, 1943, as "Red Cross Month," and I request that during that month our people rededicate themselves to the splendid aims and activities of the Red Cross. I envision the men, women, and young people of our country, in every city and town and village, in every county and state throughout the land, to enlist in the army of mercy mobilized under the banner of the Red Cross and to contribute generously to the Red Cross War Fund in order that the sum of One Hundred Twenty-five Million Dollars, every cent of which is needed, may be raised promptly.

INFORMATION ABOUT MAIL FOR SERVICE MEN

During recent months, complaints from the public of delayed or lost mail addressed to members of the armed forces indicate that there is a widespread misunderstanding of how this mail is handled and of the difficulties encountered in its delivery. The complaints, incidentally, are far fewer than the number received during the first World War, although the volume of mail is much larger, according to veteran postal officials, who have direct postal activities in both wars.

Mail for members of the armed forces is delivered by the Postal Service to Army and Navy authorities at post offices convenient to camps or stations in this country or to ports of embarkation when addressed to persons overseas. The Postal Service then has no further jurisdiction over the mail, and responsibility for its delivery from that point on lies entirely with the Army and Navy. Likewise, the Army and Navy handles mail from members of the armed forces until it is delivered to civilian post offices in this country, and the Postal Service has no jurisdiction over the mail until received.

Army and Navy post offices are, technically, branches of civilian post offices in this country, but they are not under the jurisdiction of the Postal Service, being maintained and operated by the War and Navy Departments and manned by military and naval personnel. For instance, A. P. O. 1234, care Postmaster, New York, N. Y., would be a branch of the New York post office, although it may be located with troops in Africa or elsewhere. Mail deposited in that post office for delivery in this country would carry the return address of "A. P. O. 1234, New York, N. Y.," although it came from abroad, and the postmark on the envelope is placed thereon at the overseas location and not at New York.

Directory service, through which improperly addressed mail is readressed and forwarded, is provided by the Army and Navy.

Delays in the mail to the armed forces may be caused by various factors. Transportation of the mail sometimes must be postponed so that more urgent needs for arms, food, or more military and naval personnel may be filled first. Although mails are dispatched at every opportunity, at times the overburdened facilities cannot accommodate all the mail and it must be held until shipping space is available. Ships must travel in convoys, in the interest of safety, and a convoy can start only when the last ship is loaded and can travel only as fast as the slowest ship in the group—all of which consumes much time. Transfers of personnel from one point to another also add to the time required for mail to catch up with the men shifted. Censorship, which is done by the Office of Censorship or military authorities, may also cause some delay, although this is held to a minimum. The Post Office Department does not have jurisdiction over censorship of mail.

Ship sinkings by the enemy account for much of the lost mail. Many thousands of letters and packages have been on ships lost by enemy action.

Many postal patrons have wondered why there is more rapid and regular mail service from the armed forces overseas than to them. This is because less mail comes from overseas; ships and planes on return trips have more space available; and the location of addresses in this country is more stable than that of overseas personnel.

V-Mail letters are given priority in transportation by the Army and Navy over ordinary mail, and, when possible, are sent by plane.

Some of the public are under the misapprehension that the Post Office Department can provide the addresses and location of soldiers, sailors and marines abroad. The Postal Service has no such records. When it is necessary to obtain such addresses of soldiers they may be had from the Office of The Adjutant General, War Department, Washington, D. C., of sailors, from the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Navy Department, Washington; and of marines, from the Marine Corps Headquarters, Navy Department Building, Washington.

Social Security

Harry A. Nelson, acting manager of the Clarksburg office of the Social Security Board, called attention to the fact that cooks, maids, and other employees of boarding houses are covered by old age and survivors insurance provisions of the Social Security Act. He said that since the war began, with attendant increase in business, numerous boarding houses have come into existence, especially industrial areas and in the vicinity of military camps; and although it is generally understood that employees of cafes, hotels, restaurants, etc., are subject to the law, very few owners of boarding houses realize that their employees come under old age and survivors provisions. Even though a boarding house has only one employee, he declared, that employee should have a social security account number and should show it to the owner of the boarding house so that he, in turn, may include it in the quarterly wage tax report required by law.

Mr. Nelson pointed out that around 60,000,000 workers in the United States now have individual accounts with the Social Security Board, and their wage earnings are recorded from time to time as long as they work on jobs covered by law. Each worker's account is a record of his wages, as reported to the government by his employer, every three months. The wage record is carefully kept for each insured worker whose name and number are known to the Board, and on the ledger sheet showing his wage earnings his name and his social security account number appear.

The old-age and survivors insurance tax paid by the worker is one percent of his wages. The employer—who in this case is the proprietor of the boarding house—is required by law to deduct one percent from the worker's wages, add his own one percent wage tax to this amount, and then send it with his quarterly wage report to the Collector of Internal Revenue.

The quarterly wage report covering the months of January, February and March, due on or before midnight of April 30—will include the names and account numbers of many workers who, until recent months, were never employed in jobs that come under the Act.

SIXTY PER CENT

We can have a real winter. So much cold and failing weather has made especially hard on sheep. The wool gets soaked and then frozen.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Martha Moffatt.

Since the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company finished lumbering around here, so many people have moved away. However, our church attendance is holding up real well. We believe our American people as a whole realize we must look to God for victory. We must repent, clear the saloons and beer joints and keep the Sabbath day holy. Let us pray to that end.

Most all the able bodied young men from our Elk Valley have been called to the colors.

The labor unions make me sick. To think that in this time of great National crisis they would be so unpatriotic as to quit work and strike for unreasonable wages. We have been told so many of them beat in time on full pay. It does not look like a free country where a man has to contribute to wealthy so called labor leaders for the right to work. What has happened to our government that strikers are not drafted and sent to the army? Under the circumstances every man worthy of the name should be willing to work long hours at a reasonable wage. The boys on the battle front should have the advantage; they are the ones who should have the big wages. If any one gets time and a half it should be the soldier boys.

What if our soldier boys should strike for higher wages, shorter hours and time and a half? Well, you know what Uncle Sam would do about that. Then why not use the same remedy on the strikers. They would soon see what would happen if Teddy Roosevelt, Cal Coolidge or Woodrow Wilson were still living and had the managing of union leaders. So we hope our government will soon take proper action to insure us victory.

Every union man should read Captain Eddie Rickinbacker's speech to the New York legislature. He gives the solution of war time problems. I agree with him. I say allow no more strikes at least until after the war, and make a law to draft every striker into the army immediately. I can think of nothing much worse than labor on defense work to strike when our freedom depends upon every one doing his utmost.

Brush Burners

The West Virginia Conservation Commission advises prospective brush burners of certain revisions in the brush burning law.

1. Written permission of the landowner must accompany the application for burning permits of tenants or agents.

2. No burning permits will allow burning of brush before 5:00 P. M., E. S. T.

3. Permits are void after 48 hours of issue, except by notation on the face of the permit over the signature of Commission representative issuing the permit.

Seasons of the year during which permits are required are March 20 to May 20 and October 15 to December 15.

It is requested that all brush be burned before the fire season begins, or before the high drying winds of March arrive to cause possible trouble. Our constant reminders of safety still hold and are especially cited now that man power to fight fire is very scarce. These are:

1. Keep your brush piles small.

2. Begin burning at the top of a field and work progressively down hill. A plowed line on the top nearest the woods is very handy in case the burning piles cause spread of fire.

3. Don't start burning until after 5:00 P. M., in the afternoon. This is a new part of the law and certainly good sense.

4. Have plenty of help to suppress jump overs and to get the job done quickly. Ask your neighbor to help you.

If you burn before fire season it will be unnecessary to secure a brush burning permit.

Let's be extra careful with fire this year and always. Fire in its place is necessary—it is when we become careless and fire runs away that damage is caused. So let's think and thereby prevent forest fires.

Your engine's cylinders can't stop empty. They'll either load up with fresh raw gas when you shut 'er off, or get clogged with stale burned gas they can't back out.

In those useless leftovers are corrosive acids, trapped in the engine you can't replace—along with moist "swart" as the interior cooks. Any chemistry freshman knows these causes of biting corrosion, always present—long before war-time. But when your car was in frequent use, at speeds that thoroughly warmed the engine, it helped to offset the worst acid effects. How different today, when mileage, speed, and average engine heat are all down—giving acid its chance to run riot!

You can't open the engine and keep sponging out any acids or other moisture, while your car stands little used nowadays. But without extra fuss or extravagance you can change to Conoco N4h motor oil and get your engine internally OIL-PLATED.

You're familiar with anti-corrosive plating...like chromium-plating. Just as closely, this protective OIL-PLATING will be kept surfaced to delicate parts by advanced synthetic means—as described in the celebrated patent on Conoco N4h. Though your gasoline-rattled car makes few runs, you can combat corrosion between times. For you can keep your engine OIL-PLATED by changing to Conoco N4h this Spring at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

Dear Mr. Price—Thank you for your letter, and now that you have sent me your reminder of my delinquency, I am under still. Co. here I go!

Sincerely, Mr. Price, when I saw my recent letter to you in The Times, I was surprised and ashamed. While I have little confidence in Mr. Neely—how could I remember how he hindered and embarrassed Gov. Kump and took in every possible way while they were establishing a record of good government that was being noted throughout the nation—but he is our Gov. Had I known my letter would appear in print, I would certainly have at least called him Mr. Neely.

However, the more I thought about it I had to admit that I was not mad but pleased. I was pleased at what you said about my letter being of interest to a good many people in Pocahontas Co. Really, I think some of the best friends I have are in Pocahontas Co. Two of the sweetest letters I got during my long disability came from Pocahontas—one from Katherine Campbell and the other from three of Wade Galford's girls. I had been in their homes a lot, and it pleased me immensely to have them write me as they did. I shall never forget the effect of a little visit to your office upon two little girls I had with me. To myself I said there is something to man who so impresses children. Yes, you have guessed it—when I got those letters from the little girls, I said, old man, there is a little to you too.

How often have I tried—and succeeded pretty well too—to entertain my friends with stories I heard in Pocahontas. You and the two Richardsons were the most prolific sources. Two among your best was the old dog that got himself killed, and you pronounced him the bad bad wolf; then the old mother beaver that licked her young ones for playing when they should have worked. Would it not be fine to have some such management in our defense plants?

C. J.'s best story was time he was casting for trout and caught a mink.

Mr. Ed's best was when he ordered a set of high priced pig skin fenders for his stirrup straps. Mr. C. J. looked at them and wondered what the trouble was with the gray matter of a man who paid so much for so little leather. Mr. Ed replied, dryly, same kind of gray matter, but working in a little different channel, which prompts a man to pay three times as much for a rod and reel and then spend days wading up and down Greenbrier River.

A thrilling story came from the lips of Mr. Jim Wilfong. He told me of the poverty of his childhood days, and a vow to free himself from it. Now one of the finest farms in the county bears eloquent testimony to his success.

Now, you'll think a long time before you send me another dun, won't you?

Virginia and I still want The Times. It is likely both will give you new addresses before long. I am going to the Navy Supply Depot at Norfolk, but with the understanding that when a ship sails and needs another crew member and will have me. I am going along. R. M. Steele.

Approximately 20,000 tires will be available to trucks, automobiles and farm vehicle owners in West Virginia during March under quotas announced by the Office of Price Administration. An allotment of 15,390 for all grades of tires for passenger automobiles and motorcycles was reported for the mountain state. 4,199 truck tires was stipulated and 139 tires for farm and implement vehicles. The OPA said the quota of grade 1 passenger car tires for March "has been practically doubled," with 30,593 set for West Virginia.

Legislature

The 46th regular session of the Legislature of West Virginia, adjourned early Sunday morning. Put it down as a really useful and worth while session. About 600 bills were introduced; about 100 were passed. Six major measures were vetoed by the Governor; all six were repealed over his veto. The administration asked for ninety million dollars on which to run the State the next two years, beginning July 1. The legislature said to try and cripple along on eighty millions.

The estimated saving was made by doing away with the State income tax; cutting the gross sales tax ten percent and cutting down consumers sales tax an estimated ten percent. The last will be brought about by beginning to count tax on food stuff at fifty cents instead of a dime.

To take the conservation department out of politics, a seven man commission was provided for. This commission has power to name the director of conservation.

Very properly, teachers were given a flat raise of $25 a month for the next two years.

Both houses went out of their way to go on record denying belief in the validity and legality of the purchase of Old Sweet Springs as a hospital property. A nominal sum was appropriated for custodial expenses.

As usual, the temperance people were so intemperate as to be unable to agree together on details and the beer nuisance was not abated.

All but two of the 130 odd appointments by the Governor were confirmed.

Men of the highest type, in Speaker Amos, of the House, and President, Paul of the Senate, presided over both bodies. No members of either body wielded greater influence for the good of the State than Delegate McElwee from Pocahontas, and Senator Allen from the Twelfth District.

RATION BANKING—ANOTHER WAR-TIME SERVICE

The government has called upon all commercial banks to help in the enormous job of handling ration coupons within trade channels. The service is known as Ration Banking. Banks handle all the accounting and transfer details. The public is not affected directly, but indirectly you benefit through smooth and efficient handling of ration procedure!

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1943

This is Thursday morning. The clouds are down to the ground, but the mist is no thicker over the face of nature than the fog is in my head. I have what a quaker would call a concern. Copy is the call for next week's issue; the program committee of the County Board of Trade has called for some random remark on the country newspaper in war time. It also occurs to me that I have signed up with the newspaper union to write a piece every six months or so on the State of the Craft. May be I can combine all three chores, and here is trusting with small hope of success the effort will be more than a space filler.

To begin with the everlasting grind of getting out a country weekly in war time is about the same as usual, only more so. The country publisher has three visible means of support—subscriptions, sale of advertising space, and job printing. This three-piled foundation is put out of line in war times by war conditions.

The willingness of a long suffering public to support a paper year in and year out by subscribing for it is the one and only sure foundation for continued publication. While no periodical that I know of could last over night without additional income from the sale of advertising space, the marketing of such space to up and going business enterprises hinges in the long run upon circulation.

War times and conditions bring about great increase in the number of subscribers, with attendant increase in the cost of production. On the other hand there is marked decrease in the sale of advertising space. This is particularly true of what is termed national advertising. With the automobile, radio, and other factories turned into war plants, there is no justification in great expenditures for the sale of products they are not making and which the people cannot buy. As for local merchants, in war times their output by selling is governed largely by what they are able to stock. Their problem is to get things on their shelves rather than getting them off. Of course the wise ones are keeping their names before the public so they will not be forgotten and passed over when the good times return, when the customer and not the dealer confers the favor.

In the country office, job printing is a good side line to take up the slack time and labor after publication days. In the average office, war time sees a slackening in this line. Some of the commercial printing concerns tell me their volume has slackened off too. The merchant and business people generally do not send as many statements nor write so many letters as in ordinary times, nor neither so much printed matter to attract trade. Then, too, it is some times necessary to turn away work on account of inability or delay in getting supplies.

Speaking about subscription, the country publisher who keeps any sort of a cost record has found out to his dismay that the line of diminishing returns begins when his circulation tops the two thousand mark when the yearly rate is one dollar. So, with the crowding up of the least profitable department and the sliding off in departments, where profits can be figured, war conditions bring about that unhappy state where the more you do the more you lose.

A classic instance in this regard is the experience of a nation at magazine which sold advertising space on a basis of a million circulations. Before the contracts expired, the circulation had doubled. The result was business, which had been figured at a profit was done at a heavy loss.

Naturally the tale of woe is not recounted in any complaining or whining way. Even if times out of joint put the old plant, with a life time of effort in its establishment, under the green sod, the price would be plenty small to contribute that freedom should not perish from the face of the earth.

Some papers have invisible means of support. For instance, the party organ, vulgarly known as a kept paper. War conditions are to these what the annual old cow storm is to the shelly beast. The past year has seen many such sifting organs playing its last tune. In this connection I would paraphrase the wailing lament of an old world politician, had I but served my public as well as I served my party, I would not have been forsaken in my old age.

Our government, like a mule, never makes the same mistake over. Those of us who wintered through the war of the last generation may kindly to remembering and selling prices. Us old time shrews, however, look with jaundiced eye upon the wails against regimentation on the part of those who would despoil us again. In the last war, we saw three cent paper sell up to worse than four hundred percent to fourteen cents a pound and more. This robbery persisted, too, until relief from U-boat menace allowed a ship from Finland to venture across with a cargo of newsprint. The Finnish product was rotten enough, heaven knows, but not much worse than the poor stuff racketeering paper makers had forced on us. Anyway, the inflated price came down to normal almost over night.

To touch on a technical matter in the handling of paper, the old time printer always said that during war times static electricity is always more noticeable than in ordinary times. A sheet of paper will crackle and spark like hair of a cat and twist and squirm like a dying fish. I always put this aggravation down to a cheap job product rather than to some mysterious natural phenomena still beyond the ken of science. However I must admit to losing out on many a hot argument on the matter, in which sun spots and northern lights were played as high points to put me down and out.

In war time, the papers do their full part in putting before the people the many things our government must let the people know about. Of course that is as little as we can do. On our own part, we all must be careful about things entirely fit and proper when we are peacefully fussing among ourselves when no force from without menaces the welfare of our own freedom. Too often such matter out of place gives aid and comfort to our enemies, to prolong the war.

From the office of National Censor I have a classical instance which justifies the strict provision forbidding the apparently innocent matter of publishing the name and regiment and address of a local soldier in foreign service. In the first world war, an American traveler in Switzerland saw a rumbled newspaper on the floor of a railroad car. It had been used to wrap up a lunch and then discarded. It proved to be a country paper, published in Germany. A local news item told about a man and his wife going to a band concert of a certain crack division of Uhlans, home from the front. The traveler knew his way around and lost no time in getting word to General Pershing's headquarters. It was just the news he wanted; the battle of the Argonne started next day.

Here is the explanation. General Pershing was feeling his way around to see where the German line was weakest. One section was supposed to be held by the 17th Uhlans Division. These were strong, shock soldiers, tested in long and severe service. When the General found out by way of a news item of a local paper they had been withdrawn, that was the sector he put the pressure on to make the hole he went through to win the war.

War conditions send our local papers to the ends of the earth. Speaking of the Argonne reminds me that a returned member of the American Expeditionary Force said he picked up a copy of the Pocahontas Times in the Argonne woods where it had been dropped by another soldier from Pocahontas County.

Finally, my brethren, in peace time or under war conditions, no editor can live up to better directions than those given me as a punk starter in the newspaper business by a father wise in his day and generation, to never knowingly print anything to needlessly hurt the feeling of any one.

P. S. After a fashion I got through with the little talk before the Board of Trade. The reference to static electricity affecting man and beast and printing things for the worse was like bread cast on the waters. President Jack Richardson came back with the true tale about the old timer who had proved to his own satisfaction that the dry summer was due directly to using up the supply of electricity by the radio and like gadgets until it was difficult to gather up enough electricity to raise a thunder storm any more. Why, he said, electricity is like bees and the electrons are its young. You kill off little bees and you have no swarms; you use up the electrons and it cuts down on electricity.

P. P. S. That forthright Harper Smith spoke out in meeting to say he felt relieved when I got through. At first he had the impression I was leading up to an application for a place on the public relief rolls. His feelings were touched as WPA has been discontinued.

FIELD NOTES

C. P. Adams reports that on ground hog day, February 2, 1943, his dog found a chunk of a ground hog. The spontaneous remark of a bystander was that Charles's faithful guardian of the best interests of mankind had gotten his good work a little late in the day to save the weather.

Up at the Circuit Court the other morning a member of the bar gravely remarked he was seriously considering moving the Court for an injunction. The Judge called for statement of the case and grounds. The advocate stated he wished to enjoin the ground hog, and his grounds was the provision of our constitution expressly forbidding cruel and unusual punishment. The Judge allowed he undoubtedly had something.

L. E. Simmons of Slaty Fork, brings the good news of seeing a flock of at least twenty wild turkeys near his home last Tuesday morning. The turkeys had flown from the Gauley side across to Slaty Fork mountain. There were only two gobblers in the flock.

Mr. Simmons is a cripple, bent double from a fall out of a tree 26 years ago. However, he does a good days work whenever he can get employment. He is a hunter, trader and trapper too, but he worked on WPA until it gave out, and then hurt his knee so he could run no trap lines this winter.

HOW ELSE could you move 25 million tons a day?

MODERN WARFARE demands production and transportation on a scale that nobody dreamed of a few years ago. And railroads are the mainpring in this war of movement. Suppose, for a moment, that there were no railroads. What would happen?

No railroads... soon, no war production. For who but the railroads could handle war traffic in the necessary volume of 25 million tons a day? Who would take to factories the coal and raw materials they must have? Who would deliver the heavy tools of battle?

Shippers would stop work; for lack of materials and parts. Troops would have to be transported in small numbers by jeep and truck and plane. But on the railroad they move at the rate of over a million a month!

Transports would lie idle in our harbors. Food would rot on the farms and lie in choked warehouses. Supplies and munitions for our forces and allies would quickly be used up—never to be replaced. Armies would collapse...

But the railroads are on the job! And they'll continue to give their all to this tremendous task... every minute of every hour... hauling freight at the rate of a million and a quarter tons a mile every minute—1,440 minutes every day!

The following letters were received by Miss Loretta Carpenter, who is working in Baltimore. These letters are from her cousin. She forwarded them on to her mother to have them printed.

February 28, 1943.

Dear Loretta:

I thought I had better write you a few lines, since I haven't anything to do but write at the present time. I just wrote to Deb and Claude. I have written about 35 letters and I have not gotten a one yet. Oh! well, I guess they have not had time to reach here yet.

How are you and your work getting along. Tell Maxine hello for me and for her to write to me.

Army life is swell. We have some real good Sergeants and Corporals down here. We do have a few grouchy ones, but the good ones make up for them. I am in the Army Air School and I think I will like it. Well I must close for this time. Will write more next time. Write when you find time. With love, Dempsey. Pvt. Dempsey W. Carpenter, 604th T.S.S., Ft. 397, Princess Martha Hotel, St. Petersburg, Florida.

February 22, 1943.

Dear Loretta:

Would have written sooner but did not know your address. I have moved twice since you wrote so I just received your letter today.

I guess the Army life isn't too bad. I have a pretty good job now, since I finished my basic training; am driving a truck. I like it very well down here; it is nice and warm. The dust is about ankle deep and I don't like that part very well.

I don't have any post cards of the capitol of Utah, but I have one of the Mormon temple in Salt Lake City I will send you.

How do you like working in Baltimore? I had to go to truck drivers school today to learn the Army way of driving. Will have to go five more days to complete the course.

I can't think of anything else to write, I could but you know how it is. I am not allowed to, so I will close. Write when you can. Your cousin, Woodrow.

Pvt. Charles W. Adkinson, 459th Bomb Squadron, Alamogordo, New Mexico.

The following letter was received by Charles Carpenter, of Seebert, from his nephew, Claude Carpenter, who is in the Service:

February 28, 1943.

Dear Uncle Charley and all:

I guess you thought I was never going to write again but I have been so busy that have not had time to write to anyone except my girl friends and home this week. I guess we will burn up this summer.

We go out Monday and stay out all week. It is so cold here we may freeze to death but I hope not. If it gets too cold we may not go, I hope not. I had to walk guard the other night for the first time and I did not mind it at all but it was pretty cold; 8 below zero. One thing we have plenty good warm clothes.

I was a truck driver for awhile, but now I am a machine gunner. I know every piece that is on a machine gun. We have to take them apart and put them together again blind folded. If we do real good work we might get promoted to a machine gun corporal.

I guess you all are wondering when I am coming home. I don't guess I will be home before the first of April. I guess I could get a furlough sooner but I don't want to come until it gets warm. We can have a better time then, don't you think?

It is pretty here today and the sun is shining bright but the wind is blowing. If I can get a roll of films I am going out this afternoon and take some pictures and if they are good I will send you one. I have not had any pictures made since I came here. I had a card from Mr. Johnston, at Hillsboro, and he said he wanted a picture and a large one at that. I will send him one if I can ever get any taken.

Tell Cecil I will write to him one of these days, and also that I am coming in and for him to be ready for we are really going to have a good time when I come.

How is poor old Grandmother? I hope she is getting better and is feeling fine. Aunt Geneva when I come in all I want is a good pot of beans for I like the ones that you and Mom cook. I wish that I was there to help run some one's sugar camp.

News is scarce so I had better close for this time. Here's hoping to see you all soon. Tell all hello for me. Goodbye and good luck. With love, Claude.

Mrs. Earl Sutton sends in this letter from her brother, Arlie Long.

Dear Sis: I got your welcome letter yesterday so I will try and answer it now. I just got through eating supper and am going to the show tonight but will write you a line or two before I go. I had a letter from Mother, Dad, and Evelyn today. I am glad to hear they are getting along O. K. We are all well at present and hope this finds you and the children the same. I bet Buz is a corker by now, and does he still like to follow Earl around. He will be out on the road hitch hiking like his Uncle Arlie used to do. ha ha. I sure would like to see you and the children. I want to come and see you when I can get my furlough.

It sure has been hot down here!

As I can't think of anything to write I will close. Answer soon and tell me all the news from around. Tell all hello for me.

Your brother, Arlie. Pvt. Arlie Long, Hq. Co., 3rd Bn., 124th Inf., Fort Benning, Georgia.

Private Lester W. Boerner, of the United States Army, recently spent a 15 day furlough with his parents at Covington, Virginia, and Miss Violet Shinnberry an Edna Kershner, in Washington, D. C. Before entering the Army Private Boerner (better known to his Marlinton friends as "Butch") was employed at Marlinton, by the C. & O. Railway Company. He is now in Co. A., 337th Engr. Regt., and has been stationed at Camp Swift, Texas, but is now on maneuvers in Leesville, Louisiana.

Lieutenant Max Workman, of Huntington, was visiting friends in Marlinton last week. He has just received his commission as Second Lieutenant. He will be remembered as educational officer at CCO Camps Price and Black Mountain.

Marvin McLaughlin, of Dunmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Letcher McLaughlin, is home from the Army with an honorable discharge. The 38 year, over age ruling caught up with him.

Neal Alderman is home from the Army on furlough with his father, George Alderman. He is now stationed in California. He wears badges showing pro-Pearl Harbor, Asiatic and home front services. Sure, he wears about all the medals for marksmanship.

Harrison Evans has received the following letter from his son, Harrison Jr., who is now "Somewhere in Africa" under date of February 25. He has been in the Army since last April:

Dear Father: Just a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along all right. I know you have been wondering why I did not write to you. I am in North Africa. Tell brother Earl and the rest I said hello. It is not so bad over here, so don't worry about me. Tell Miss Hattie I said to write to me. You can give some of the rest of the folks my address so they can write. Well, father, I will close for this time. Give all the folks my love and best regards. Harrison.

Smith Vaughn spent his furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Vaughn. They have received a letter from him saying he had arrived safely at Camp and had been transferred to a Truck Division.

Mrs. Mollie Hinkle has received

J. A. Sedberry appointed trustee instead of L. D. Shaid. Lucille Gafford v. Barkley, dismissed, settled. State v. Ralph Long, plea of guilty, probated. State v. Lyle Hulse, plea of not guilty, continued until June court.

THE U. S. CANNON BALL

We get up in the morning. You can hear the sergeant squall. Get out on the line boys. And dodge them cannon balls.

Hear the rattle of the machine guns.

You can hear that urgent squall. We are headed on for Tokyo. On the U. S. Cannon Ball.

Here's to old man Hitler. His plans are sure to fail. We'll take him to his destination On the U. S. Cannon Ball.

McArthur is a General, and a good one so they say. He's over in Australia fighting every day.

He has been in several battles and the Japs before him fall. We'll carry him on to Victory on the U. S. Cannon Ball.

Listen to the rattle, the rattle and the roar. As she travels through mountains all along the Pacific shore. Hear the rattle of machine gun, and hear that urgent squall. We are riding on to Victory on the U. S. Cannon Ball.

Written by: P. F. C. William H. Buzzard, Btry. A., 453 C. A. Bn., A. A. Fort Knox, Kentucky.

The following letter was received by Mrs. W. A. Seabolt from her brother, Corporal Robert E. Hinkle. Corporal Hinkle volunteered for the Army about three years ago. He was stationed in Iceland for some time but where he is now is unknown. In another letter to his sister he told her he was getting to see some of the places he had always wanted to see and that he was glad he could see them and serve Uncle Sam at the same time.

January 26, 1943.

Will answer your letter received today. Sure was glad to hear from you and to know you and the family were well. I am well and O. K. I don't know very much to write, so I have to write about the same things in every letter, but I guess that does not make much difference so long as I write often and let you know I am O. K. and getting along all right. I would love to see you all. Try and get the baby's picture taken and send it to me.

I had a letter from Mason a few days ago; he was at Fort Benning, Georgia. Tell Alva and all the children I said hello. You write real soon and I long letter.

Your brother, Robert.

How is everything in old Marlinton? It was pretty cold when I was there in January.

I have changed camps again so please send the Times to the below address. I think the Times is getting better all the time. I enjoy reading it very much. Just keep up the good work Cal, you are fighting your battle on the front too, keeping up the morale of the West Virginia boys.

Sincerely,

Sgt. June R. McCloud, 35206649, Co. A, 85th Armored Ren. Bn., A. P. O. 255, Camp Forrest, Tennessee.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

ASK the ski trooper why he welcomes ice-cold Coca-Cola. He will tell you what every ski enthusiast knows. Few things can make you thirstier than skiing. The dry cold, the exertion, the altitude do it. Experienced skiers know that Coca-Cola is the perfect refreshment after a ski run.

Coca-Cola not only quenches thirst. It adds refreshment that goes into energy. It is refreshment that tastes good, feels good, is good. Coca-Cola is made with choicest ingredients put together with a finished art.

Each time you raise an ice-cold Coca-Cola to your lips, you'll agree that the only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

Even with war and so many Coca-Cola bottling plants in enemy-occupied countries, our fighting men are delighted to find Coca-Cola being bottled in so many places all over the globe.

Even with snow and ice outdoors, it's summertime indoors. Ice-cold Coca-Cola is the year-round answer to thirst that everybody welcomes.

Axis cuts your driving—Terrorizes your engine with ACID!

Every time short rations keep your car idle it's really like the Axis trying to down your engine with acid. All the Axis needs is the acid products of combustion always left in your engine when it stops. This unavoidable acid wasn't so bad when cleaned out pretty well, several times a day, on fast runs that warmed the engine completely. But now with slow sputter runs often keeping the engine too cool, acid's chances have increased to corrode metal.

To keep your tools from corroding you apply oil—again and again. In your engine you can have a more lasting preservative. It's designed to combat internal acid corrosion.

It's surfaced to metals as closely as any protective plating. That's why this inner-engine preservative—made possible by the quick, simple, economical change to Conoco Nth motor oil—is known as OIL-PLATING.

Conoco Nth—patented—brings you the special synthetic invented to make metal surfaces cover themselves with OIL-PLATING. It may be quite a while "between coupons" now. But you needn't give hungry acids all that while to gnaw at your engine, which the Axis won't let you replace yet! OIL-PLATE it now. Change to Conoco Nth for Spring. Continental Oil Company

Butch is on a BALANCED DIET!

This situation isn't covered by Army regulations. But we're betting that Butch will find a way to handle it!

In fact, we electric companies know just how he feels. We have the same problem. Right now, we're being called on to balance good service and low, regulated rates against fast-climbing costs and tremendously increased demands for electric power.

We're doing it, too. Filling all our war orders. Giving America far more power than all the Axis countries combined. Pushing production up and up. . . . And besides that, we're helping a big piece of time.

Don't get us wrong. We know the need of wartime. We're proud that business-managed plants comparable with $200,000,000 in time last year. That was 250 out of every dollar you paid us—50 to local and state governments—15 to the federal government—through to each 1,000,000 back citizens.

How is it possible to make so much power and meet so many needs at the same time? Because of sound business methods and long experience—business men, women and managers working together as a team.

But while we're doing all this, government and independent power systems are not getting a penny in federal taxes to help with the war. . . . Shouldn't every one do his full share?

THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1943

The bird this week is the turkey buzzard. With all the spring birds making country glad with presence and song maybe it is not exactly in place to write of so sombre a citizen. However, old man turkey buzzard is in mind because the other afternoon just before the cold snap, a flight of nine came sailing out of the north like shot from a shovel. Though the clouds were still heading off the river from the south, when I saw these vultures beating to ward a warmer land, I needed no weather report to know a cold wave was on the way.

Of late years we have two varieties of vultures in this Greenbrier Valley. The new comer is the smaller southern vulture which sometimes has white feathers in his plumage. Both kinds flock together.

The least said the better about the food habits of vultures, but certainly in certain warm sections of our country they perform or have performed good service as scavengers. I happen to know that out in the corn belt buzzards are blamed with carrying bog cholera from farm to farm.

I am interested in the name of buzzard. Over in the old country of Britain it is an honored name. The eagle and the sailing hawk are buzzards over there. Buteo is the book name, and here in America the eagles and the sailing hawks are still called buteos. The darting hawks are falcons.

The story goes that when the early settlers came to Maryland as a haven for persecuted church people, they gave the name buzzard to the big vultures they saw sailing around. While the nice name did not change the nature of the scavengers, it did bring the name down to their low estate.

Ellis Bean reported to me the other day that he failed in the bear business last fall for the first time in many years. Along late in November he did find a bear track on the Allegheny and followed it for three days. It was a traveller and they never came up with it; the snow gave out. They figured it was an old bear going to hole early, or an old he headed for the birch woods.

Over a period of seven or eight years, around twenty-seven head of bear were killed from Mr. Dean's pack of bear dogs. Of this number there were three females and twenty-four were males. While this is an unusually small proportion of females, it is the experience of most bear chasers that males killed outnumbered females more than two to one. My recollection is that Elmer Sharp has told me that of about four dozen bears his outfit has killed in the last ten years the proportion was three males to one female.

The way they were this disproportionate kill is that the hunting is done in the late fall and early winter in the snow. The females get fat and hole up by Thanksgiving time; the males feed until Christmas and at times all through the winter.

Two afternoons last week a big eagle was seen flying high over the town of Marlinton. He sailed around over Bucks Mountain, evidently looking for lands and/or ground hogs. I could not make out whether it was a bald or golden eagle. Its size and breadth of wing leads to a wild guess it was a golden eagle.

Note that I have used the compound conjunction and-or. This double jointed word was sprinkled freely in law papers such as legislative bills some years since, and it looked like it might come into general newspaper use. Then the language purists began to cut the ground from under the handy and-or, as clouding rather than clearing expression. I have a hazy recollection, too, that a high court took a fall out of and-or in construing a statute, as confusing to the issue. In my slipshod writing I always liked and-or, as a short cut around any one or both.

A young soldier writes home that he is not yet sure that his top sergeant is a professing Christian or not. However, he does know that on his first night in barracks, with a lot of new beginners, the said top sergeant gave forthright notice that all who had been properly raised to say their prayers at night could continue this practice of devotion without fear of derision or interruption. Personally, he felt sorry for any person who would make fun of a man's religion and doubt by sorry for him if he caught him doing it.

I do not now recall ever using the expression: exposure of all eyes, meaning center of attraction. How or when I know the expression came from the reek and its literal meaning is big tail. Just another case of fine could not making a fine word. For the information of intelligent young readers, let me say Cynosure is the name of the North Star. This star of stars is a part of the Constellation of the Little Bear. Locate it in the tail of the Little Bear by the two pointer star in the Big Bear grouping of stars. Through the age-mariners sailed their ship by the North Star, Cynosure. So, how plain is the explanation of how the cynosure came into use meaning the center of attraction.

My friend D. A. Tharp was up from Lobelia last Thursday on one of his occasional visits to Marlinton. Away back in the hard winter of 1896, as a young man, he made a trip over into Webster county to hunt for work in the lumber woods. He found no work, and early one extremely cold morning he started to walk home from McClintic Camp on the Middle Fork of Williams River. The snow was knee deep, but he made it all right on the hay road. Somewhere about the Big Loop of Black Mountain he saw a blaze leading off to his right and he took it for the trace down to the South Fork of Crabber. He turned off three or four miles too soon and found himself on the North Fork instead. Climbing up the Horse Path Ridge, he found the path all right, but the snow had weighted down the laurel over it so completely, he could not be sure. He turned the wrong way, and about dark he found himself down at the Forks of Crabber. While he had a few matches, his hands were so numb from the cold, he was unable to start a fire. To keep from freezing to death, he stamped around all night. Early next morning he started for the settlement, going up the South Fork. Late in the afternoon he had made the ten miles or more through the forest to the home of Martin Lane, who lived on the Edgar and at the head of the Glades.

Here Mr. Tharp stayed a couple of days. He was frost bit all over, but his feet were the worst. Making it into home, the late Dr. LaRue was called. The outcome was that the late Dr. F. T. McClintic was called in consultation, and Mr. Tharp suffered the loss of one foot at the instep and a couple of toes on the other foot. Up to that time, the effect of all the schooling Mr. Tharp had enjoyed was ability to read and write. Though past twenty-one years of age, he went back to school. In two years of steady application, he prepared himself for teaching. He stood the examination, and made a certificate. For eighteen years he was a successful and sought after teacher in the schools of Pocahontas county. I never had occasion to observe his technique in the school room, but it is a poor instructor who can teach no more than is in the book. His determination to stand up and stamp around all night when he was freezing to death, and his will to prepare himself for a life work when too badly handicapped for manual labor marks him as a man to influence for good those with whom he came in contact, particularly young persons. Came 1917 with big wages in industry and teacher's salaries miserably low in comparison. Mr. Tharp got himself a job in the coal fields. For fourteen years he dug coal and worked in and about the mines. In the depression he was cut down to one day's work a week. Farming back in the old home county of Pocahontas looked good to him then. He traded up a piece of real estate on Hills Creek, moved back, and he is content to remain.

Now gasoline rationing affects your car

War-time driving conditions, for which your car may not have been originally designed and adjusted, necessitate annual care. Here are the four Pontiac engineers to help you guard against trouble and excessive wear:

Pre-war normal driving required a change of crankcase oil every 2,000 to 3,000 miles. Today, shorter drives on a cold engine may cause harmful condensation and thus require more frequent oil change.

Engine knock or "ping", frequently caused by lower octane, war-time gasoline, can be corrected through motor tune-up, timing adjustment and serious carbon-removal of cylinder head to clean out carbon.

Batteries discharge in idle cars. Pontiac engineers advise, especially in A. Carol drivers, limited use of electrical accessories; battery checked every two weeks, periodic check of generator, starter, voltage regulator.

Excess wear normal driving required a change of crankcase oil every 2,000 to 3,000 miles. Today, shorter drives on a cold engine may cause harmful condensation and thus require more frequent oil change.

The Unafraid

HOW much courage it takes to dive a plane down the funnel of a Jap aircraft carrier most of us will never know.

Men like Major Anderson don't come back to tell us.

How much courage it takes to fight in a deadly jungle crawling with Japs... how much courage it takes to battle heat and cold and thirst and Germans in the African deserts most of us can only guess at.

Our boys who fight there don't talk about it.

Such courage staggers the mind. It is the same kind of courage that has that neighbor boy of yours waiting at the hospital in uniform to see his new-born son.

Some day soon that young father may have to dive his plane down the funnel of a Jap carrier.

He knows that. So does his wife.

Yet their faith is such that they get married... have babies... plan a confident future.

They are the unafraid. They make the fears and doubts of the rest of us seem mean and small. They make us see some of their vision of the magnificent future of our country... a country which can be entrusted with the same of men who may never see them.

Private Robert C. Dilley, aged 18 years, son of Sergeant and Mrs. E. C. Dilley, of Barboursville, formerly of Pocahontas County, has enlisted in the United States Army Signal Corps, and is now stationed in Fort Lewis, Washington. Private Dilley is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Warner, of Franklin; and the late Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Dilley, of Huntersville.

Fort Benning, Georgia—Corporal Marvin A. Dumire, of the 11th Armored Division, 10th Armored Division, has been promoted to the grade of technician fourth grade, Major General Paul W. Newgarden, division commander, announced last Tuesday. Sergeant Dumire is the son of Mrs. Frankie Dumire, of Marlinton.

Corporal W. Earl Linday has returned to Lowry Field, Denver, Colorado, after spending a short furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Linday, at Durbin.

Gulfport Field, Mississippi—P.F.C. Delbert O. Cogar, formerly of Marlinton, West Virginia, has been graduated from this big Army Air Forces Technical Training Command School for airplane mechanics and is ready to take his place on the far flung service lines of this global war wherever the biggest American planes are based, at home or abroad.

He has received a course of intensive training to fit him for his important task in this war. His training has also fitted him for an important job in peacetime aviation.

In private life P.F.C. Cogar was mechanic for the Federal Bureau of Roads, Millpoint, West Virginia. He is a son of J. O. Cogar, of Marlinton, West Virginia.

Gulfport Field is producing an endless stream of airplane mechanics to service the biggest bombers and cargo and transport planes of the Army. Students attend classes in shifts around the clock, every hour and every square foot of space being given the most thorough utilization.

Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 29, 1943—Now wearing a third class petty officer's badge is Loris Henry Duncan, age 23 years, son of John Preston Duncan, of Marlinton, West Virginia, who was graduated from the United States Naval Training School for electrician's mates at the University of Minnesota here today. One of the 103 graduates out of a class of 140 who received the rating, he awaits assignment to duty with the fleet or at a shore station.

Selected for this special training upon the basis of a series of aptitude tests taken during recruit training, he has undergone 16 weeks of instruction in the use and repair of electrical tools and equipment used aboard a warship. He has learned soldering, brazing and electrical wiring.

Private Enoch Pyles, writes to his mother, Mrs. Joe Pyles as follows: Dear Mother:

I received your letter and the money you sent me to day. I sent you a money order of twenty dollars today. I am getting along fine now. I have to take six weeks of Medical training, and maybe five of truck driving. I don't know yet, but I will always be in the medical corp. It is a fine thing. After you train your work will be in a hospital until you go across so you will have better practice. We won't use a gun if we go to Germany, we won't have guns. They respect the medical. But if you go to Japan you will have a pistol, because they don't respect the medical. They shoot anything.

I got myself a pen today. There is a lot of snow on the ground here now.

Farmers should place orders for fertilizer at once, advises Wilbur Moore, County Chairman—Farmer War Board. Nitrogen is used for powder as well as in fertilizer; the demand is great and supply is limited. So, farmers are asked to determine their needs and see their dealers at once.

former resident of Pocahontas county, now of Anjean, W. Va., sends letters from her two sons in the service; they were both raised in this county.

March 8, 1943.

Dear Mother: Will answer your letter I received yesterday and sure was glad to get it. I also got a letter from Lawrence Gifford. I was surprised to hear of him being in the Navy. It sure makes us feel good to get a letter from home. This letter leaves me well and getting along good. I have had two promotions in the last six months, and that is very encouraging to make a fellow feel like he is getting some place. Altho I think a lot of you all back home and hope I can soon get back with you all.

I have a girl friend and she is 5 feet 3, and has real dark hair and very dark skin, and she don't wear clothes like they do in West Virginia. I don't know her name. How is Helen Goff? I bet she has grown a lot. She said in her last letter that you hadn't been well. Mother don't work too hard.

Well mother, don't worry about us, we are O. K. Hope Harry is too. Do you hear from often? Write to me every time you have a chance and I hope that will be often. Tell everybody Hello.

Donald

Another son, Private Walter Raymond Hoptonstall, also in foreign service, writes under date of February 14, 1943.

Mom: I am well and hope everybody back there is too. There is not much I can write about, but will tell you about it when I come home. We have been seeing some real action and I have seen quite a bit of the country, as I have been stationed in both Ireland and England, before coming here, and I wouldn't give the poorest old hill West Virginia has for all I have seen. I am sure they will look good to us boys when we do get chance to see them. Write to me often.

Love to you mother.

Walter.

Sunday afternoon, March 14, 1943.

Dear Cal: Just a few lines from another Pocahontas County boy in Any. My wife sends me the Pocahontas Times each week and I get lots of enjoyment reading the letters from our army and navy boys, so thought I would write a few lines from this part of the country. I have been in the army three months today and like it fine. I sure want to do my part toward winning this war. We sure have a fine bunch of boys here from all over the United States.

Just a little about our camp. Camp Phillips is located near the center of Kansas, and is made up of the 84th Division. This is a fine country out here, but I don't think it will compare to our West Virginia hills.

I hope to get a furlough soon and will drop in for a chat.

Keep the home fires burning. Pfc. Clarence C. White, Hq. Co. 3Bn. 376 Inf. Camp Phillips, Salina, Kansas.

Mr. Calvin Price: Dear Sir:—Announcing the birth of a son born on March 14, 1943; name Calvin Charles Dilley. We don't mean to offend you in anyway but we named this child after you. Please announce the birth in your paper.

Yours very truly, Mr. and Mrs. Arch J. Dilley, Cloverlick, W. Va.

I get this tale second hand, but it is an artistic one and could have happened, maybe. A farmer or friend of mine went up to the mountain place the other day to see how had the deer were working on his berry vines. He heard something coming through the woods business like. He stood still beside a tree to see what was what. Just then a chunk of a bear went in sight. The bear went straight to the carcass of a neighbor's horse which had failed to survive the winter. Coming to the carcass, the bear roared up and dealt the flank of the horse a mighty blow with a front paw. The man noted this was apparently a left handed bear. There was a sound of ripping hide, tearing flesh and cracking bones. The bear then bit and clawed out a chunk of round steak, fully ten pounds in weight. He then made off in the forest, eating his meat as he went.

You know these scientific birds are blindly groping around to find the reason why for the well established fact that for several years the woods will be alive with game and the streams teeming with fish. Then for a series of years there will be decreasing stocks of both fish and game. They term such periods of increase and decrease cycles. They talk hazily about spots on the sun having to do with such phenomena. I have never gotten anywhere with my puttin that blood on the moon might play its part.

All this is just a preamble to saying that as I read the sign, this will be a good game and fish year. The sign I go by is that E. M. Richardson's old nanny goat dropped four fine kids, the other frisky morning, and Henry Warren's sow farrowed a litter of seven fine piglets the other night. Also I hear of litters of 13 pigs at Mill point and 11 over on Elk. Then too as I travel over the roads of the county, every farm shows up with young lambs skipping around in more than the usual number and vigor. This is a bull calf year too. On one farm the five cows dropped five male calves when they freshened.

Rodney Buzzard brings report of seeing a pair of fisher in a field near Huntersville one day last week. A number of other citizens were present when the two strange animals were seen coming from Browns Creek and heading for Marlins Mountain. Rodney and the others were close enough to them to make out the dark brown color and the long tails, and the tell-tale white spot on their chests. When men attempted to approach them, they disappeared in the woods and grass of a meadow which went uncultivated years.

The fisher or black fox or pekan is put down in the books as Pennants Marten. It is member of the weasel family. In size about that of the gray fox and larger. Length about 36 inches, with a 14 inch tail. In shape it is more like the fox than the weasel.

The last black fox I knew of being killed was the one the late Reese Workman got more than forty years ago. Two or three years ago, a pair of black foxes were reported on the head of Stony Creek, and about 15 years ago a couple was seen in Marlins Mountain.

The black fox is a night traveler, and is seldom seen in the day except in mating season at this time of year. Like other weasels, they are meaters, but some times they piece out on beech nuts in the fall and winter.

I let St. Patrick's Day go by without any comment. Since I have been asked I will try my hand in writing down a little about St. Patrick and his day.

It is the day of Patrick, the Apostle of Ireland. He was born in the year 377 and died in 433, at the ripe old age of 128 years. These facts and figures are open to question, but not nearly so much as the place of his birth. The English claim Patrick; the Scotch border raiders carried him as a child. The French claim him, and list a number of places where he might have been born. Not to be out done the Scotch say he was born on the River Clyde at Kilpatrick, near Dumbarton. St. Patrick himself says his father was a deacon by the name of Calpurnius. Anyway, at the age of sixteen years he was seized by pirates at his father's farm, taken to Ireland and sold as a slave to a small chieftain. After six years he escaped, and made his way to France, probably after a second captivity. There he became a Monk at Tours. In the year 431, he went to Rome. The Pope, Celestine, sent Patrick back to Ireland to preach. Some books say he was ordained in France. Anyway in 432 he arrived in Ireland. His ministry was wonderfully blessed. During the years he visited most all parts of the island building churches and ordaining priests. The number of churches founded is put down at 265, and the number of persons baptized with his own hands was 12,000. He died at Downpatrick.

Of course there are traditions of miracles performed by St. Patrick. The one which will never down is that of driving snakes and frogs from the Emerald Isle.

HAPPY PINK

We have had a very long winter. Not much growing time as yet. The ground is still frozen. Frank, thank you a good horse by it falling on the frozen ground. Also Mrs. Ernest Hinch lost a good horse by being kicked.

L. D. Sharp says he is not planting any hybrid corn this year. Last year he bought two bushels of yellow number 94 hybrid and planted it. One half of one field blighted when it was in coming ear. In a few days the corn began falling down, and it looked like boiling water had been poured on it. Mr. Sharp planted some corn of his own raising. There was no blight on any of it and the corn was much better than the hybrid he had ordered from Ohio. He says they can talk all the want to about the advantages hybrid corn, but he does not want any more of it. Besides raising less corn, he may have to contend with corn blight on his farm from now on. Blight was never known on Elk before.

We hear a lot about meat shortage. They say meat can hardly be had in Baltimore. One farmer on Elk had a sow to farrow 11 pigs. That was not doing so bad to help the meat shortage. X

Our Army and Navy Boys

Remember to Australia,
March 4, 1943

Dear Mr. Price:
I feel that I could almost call you by your first name since I was once introduced to you by Lieutenant Milton, at Camp Cooperfield near Frost, West Virginia, when he had command of that Camp. You gave a short talk to the men at their evening meal as I recall.

I feel like I am a native of your good county Pocahontas in that I married one of your girls or do you say "gals" from Cam, by the name of Miss Ann Ruth Vint, a graduate of the Greenbank High School in 1930 and worked in the Postoffice at Cam. The marriage took place in Highland County, Virginia, December 4, 1931. I have done business with your First National Bank for the past few years. At the time I was married I was on extended active duty with the Civilian Conservation Corps. I had command of the Negro Camp near Berwind, West Virginia, taking over from our good friend, Captain LeGrand Herman Headington, Infantry, Columbus, Ohio, and one time Commander of Camp Watoga.

Mrs. Choke is now living with her mother, Mrs. Walter Vint, at Cam. Prior to me going to the Colors in April, 1941, we lived in Lewisburg. I was ordered to Fort Hayes, Columbus Ohio, and from there I was assigned to an army camp in Louisiana. We lived down there until after the Louisiana Big War Time Maneuvers in which I took part. From there I was sent to the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia, and graduated in January, 1942, with the only class (at that time) to graduate all their students. From there I was sent back to Louisiana, later to a camp in Massachusetts, then to the West Coast and from there to Somewhere in Australia. The trip over was fine but we did not know where we were going. We arrived in our late spring and to find ourselves coming into the fall and winter season here.

Several months ago we made another move, after making several in Australia, to the Battle Front in New Guinea. I was at the front for over two months and in that time we saw plenty of action and I can say once more that I can take the old squirrel hunters from West (BG) Virginia, for the purpose of hunting Japs and they get their bags full.

Our Camp is made up from all kind of men and from all walks of life and from all over the United States. A lot are from Wisconsin and Michigan and they really go after the yellow Japs. (However this is not the name we call them. Your guess is good.) We have one man in one of the Companies here from Marlinton and he went through the Camp when he was in New Guinea in good shape from all aspects I got from one of my Brother Officers. The name is Private Beverage. (I know they are plentiful.) So much for the information. Will tell you more when I get back.

We are back here in Australia, after so many months away at one of the rest camps. We have the Pacific Ocean in rear of us and a big river in front of us. We are doing some work that I cannot disclose at the present time. The recreational facilities are fine as to swimming and sun bathing. Plenty of games and athletic equipment, good band music (we have one of the best) and last but not least plenty of good eats. They are fine after living off of the Type "C" Ration (especially when you are your own cook). We have an exchange where the men are able to purchase Coca-Cola, ice cream, candies, cigarettes, etc. The latter two were issued to the men free when we were at the Front.

I will say one thing we are all with General McArthur and we are going to do our damnest to wipe the enemy from the face of the globe and after that we are coming home to live and take our places back in the good old world. Sure wish that I was back for a short visit with you and all my good friends in and near Marlinton. In fact I would even take my County (Logan) but would prefer Pocahontas County.

Best of luck to you and your comrades or associates in civilian life. I know you people are with us 100 per cent.

Sincerely,
Captain Odie G. Cooke.

[Editor's Note] The Private Beverage Captain Cooke refers to is Wilbur Beverage, of Marlinton. His brother, Clyde, received a letter from him this week, saying he is in a rest camp in Australia.

IN THE SERVICE
In the service of Uncle Sam is a brother dear to me. He is training here in camp, and not yet across the sea. When his training is complete and he boards the ship to go, God will watch him and protect him all along the way I know. For him I'll pray both night and day. That God will lead him all the way. It's hard to keep our spirits up. But we will give those rats a better cup. It sure does give us courage and hope. To know the Axis are just a dope. When our boys strike they will find them mighty tough. They will fight them until they have had enough.

Now's here's to the good old USA

And to our boys in the army, We'll plant old Glory on the land of the rising sun. Then our work will all be done.

Mrs. Earl Shinkensky,
Minnehaha Springs, W. Va.

The following poem was sent in by Miss Jacoba Carpenter, of Millpoint, who has three brothers in the Service:

AN HUMBLE PRAYER
Dear God, I have three brothers, To head their Country's call, Please may I ask protection That they may never fall.

But have I got that right, God, To ask so much of Thee? There are others waiting, praying For loved ones across the sea.

So may our prayers be answered; Yet may they will be done, Protect those boys so dear to us; Yes, each and every one.

Help them through those battles So far across the sea, That they may march triumphantly Right on to Victory.

These, God, are our petitions— Yes, great as they may be— Spare us our freedom and our boys, We humbly ask of Thee.

The following letter was received by Ward McLaughlin, now of Charlottesville, Virginia, from his nephew, Louis Church:

March 9, 1943.
Dear Wilds and Ward:
Have a little spare time so I thought I would write a few lines to you all of my Army life. I guess you all know I received my basic training at Keosauqua, Mississippi. Boy, those were four tough weeks. All we did was drill and physical exercises, plus examinations.

Mississippi is a nice state to visit but not to live in. It is the worst climate for colds that I know of. All the boys were nearly dead with colds most of the time. But March 1st we were moved to the University of Alabama. We really have it nice here. We live in nice, modern dormitories with steam heat and private baths. The people here really treat us nice. Last Saturday night the school had a big party for us and next Saturday some girls sorority is having a dance for us. We are allowed to carry ourselves but it is like our Commanding Officer says "We are here to prepare our ourselves for combat." We really are busy during the week. Here is my schedule. At 6:00 I get up, wash myself, make my bed and clean my room and have a shower; 8:00 I have my first class, which is Math; 9:00 History; 10:00 Medical Aid; 11:00 Calisthenics; 12:00 to 2:00 is chow time; 2:00 Supervised Study; 3:00 Military Customs and Hygiene; 4:00 to 5:00 Drill and Calisthenics; 6:00 to 7:30 chow; 7:30 to 8:30 we are confined to our rooms for studying; 8:30 to 9:30 we are free to do anything we like as long as we stay on the campus; 9:30 we have to be in our rooms; 10:00 is Taps. Pretty busy day isn't it?

It is much different than the good old school days. We have to march to our classes and there are girls to make eyes at. I used to go to school for an education, now I go to learn how to kill Japs and Germans. I will go to school from 2 to 5 months. Pardon the paper I am writing on. You see I am writing this in my study period and I forgot to bring my stationery. How are you all anyway? Well, I hope. Tell the kids "hello". Have to close as it is near the end of the period. Write soon please. Your loving nephew, Louis. Pvt. Louis C. Church, 37th Tng. Det. (Air Corps), Squadron A, Box 1287, University, Alabama.

Dear Cal:
I am not originally from Marlinton, but was working there for some time and due to liking the town and the people I am writing this letter to you and my friends. I was inducted into the United States Navy and am now stationed at Camp Lawrence, United States Naval Station, Great Lakes, Illinois. This is one of the most beautiful places I have seen for a camp for young men of my age. We are fed the best of food and are in the best of barracks or dormitories. I actually recommend to young men that they join the Navy, because this is a real military life. Yours very truly, Gerald O. Belknap, A. S., Co. 373, Camp Lawrence, 21 Battalion, 16 Reg., U.S.N.T.S. Great Lakes, Illinois.

Monday, March 9.
Dear Mr. Price:
How are you by now and how are all the family and the rest are all well. I am just well and getting along just fine. I am not at the same place but of course cannot tell where I am but do not worry for I am as safe as ever. Had a nice trip and enjoyed it very much. We have been swimming and fishing some since we arrived here and both are very good. We are below the equator and did we have a big time when we crossed. I don't think I have laughed as much in a year. Tell Nellie they really ruined my wave when I was last here and now I'm a shellback and am glad I had a chance to cross. It is not very hot here and there is always a nice breeze. Well, I will have to stop for this time but will write again soon. Hoping this finds you feeling lots better and the rest all real well. With lots of love to all, Berthol.

stayed there a week. We operated there three days and then conveyed here to A. P. Hill. We are at a nice place now. We are the only company close here. They bring the work to us. The first week we worked two shifts: one at night and one at day.

I can come home on a weekend pass now if I want to. We are fifty miles from Washington, D. C. and forty-five miles from Richmond, Virginia, and transportation is good. The weather here is just like summer time. There are six of us to a tent. We bought us an oil lamp and it gives about as much light as a lightning bug. They say we have inspection tomorrow and if we do we will have to get on the ball. All I have got done is, cuss, the light. It is eleven o'clock now and God only knows when we will get to bed. I have not had my clothes off at night but twice in a week since we have been here only to take showers.

Well, I guess I will close now. Corporal Walker L. Beverage, Co. A., 63rd Q. M. Bn., A. P. Hill, Military Reservation, Virginia.

The following letter was received by Mrs. Jewell Scott, from her brother, Hubert Rose, who is in North Africa:

February 22, 1943.
Dear Sister: Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope this will find you and Jewell and all the rest well. Well, I got four letters from you today sure was glad to get them too. I got a letter from Harold and one from mother. The mail has been good this week. I got twenty-two letters; five of them were from Ireland.

You ask about sugar and coffee. I get all I want of both and all the candy I can eat. We get some Coca-Cola. There has only been one time that I have not had plenty to eat and that was about four days in November. I guess Jewel is getting ready to farm now. He would be if he was as warm there as it is here.

You asked if I have a girl friend over here. Well, no, for I cannot talk their language but I sure had my part of the fun while I was in England and Ireland. Ireland is a soldier's paradise, plenty of good shows and they are all American pictures. All the British people are good to the American soldiers. Received yours and Harold's picture and was glad to get them. I am sending you one of mine, though it is not much good. Well, Nellie, there is not much to write about. Tell Dad and Jewell and all the rest hello for me. Tell everybody to write.

March 19, 1943.
Dear Cal: Will drop you a few lines to let you know we are still in the United States though we thought we wouldn't be for a few days. We were very busy for a while. We left Camp Edwards, Massachusetts, on the 27th of February and got here on the 2nd day of March. We were in twelve states before we got here. We had no idea where we were going until we got here. We had to miss all tunnels and low bridges was the reason we were so long coming. We worked all night before we left and it was cold as hell loading everything. The 26th Division helped us to get started. When we got here we had a pack of three blankets and a comforter and everything else with our packs. We were a sorry looking bunch when we got to our tents. We made our beds in the dark out in a farmer's field. I thought Wade Galford had the roukiest field in the country, but this had the world skinned. We

Lots of love to all, Hubert.

Dear Mr. Price:
You know we all have our ideas about Hitler and the dirty things he has done, but I guess maybe mine is a little on the darker side. Here it is:

Hitler marched to the gates of hell, With all his junk and men And to old Satan he began to tell How he'd blast his damn way in. The devil turned to his followers and said: "My men you see he is here. Come on, let's fight, by me you are led, For him you need not fear."

The battle started, it sure was loud, Those cannon sure did roar, But Hitler failed to see the crowd That Satan had ordered before. Bayonets clashed, but missed their mark, The bullets were singing by And Hitler knew by the fireman's mark, That shovels would make heads fly. The battle raged on, and all were tired, And Hitler hung his head, He grabbed his radio, a message he fired, And this is what he said: "Please Mr. Satan, please, stop your men."

I know that you cannot be licked in America, and she whipped me; then, On you poor soul I picked. "I have had my day and now I am done, How wrong I was I know, God Bless Americans, every one, For my soul has no place to go."

White Pine Blister Rust

The United States Department of Agriculture announces that a program has been opened in the Monongahela National Forest which will immediately afford protection to many thousands of acres of valuable white pine against the ravages of "white pine blister rust," a destructive disease. Often spoken of as "the blue ribbon tree of the forest," white pine is of high commercial value in the lumber industry, especially when such heavy demands are being made on the timber industry by a nation at war, it is pointed out. Millions of feet of white pine lumber are utilized in many of ways in the war effort.

Blister rust disease is described as a serious menace to white pine, causing the death of trees which become infected. Unintentionally introduced into this country from the European about 40 years ago, blister rust has gradually spread southward from the New England States, and its presence is now known in all of the major pine producing counties in this state. Unlike the chestnut blight which practically exterminated the vast stands of chestnut in the eastern United States, white pine blister rust can be controlled, the Department points out. Living only upon the non-important wild gooseberry and currant bush and the commercially important white pine tree, blister rust can be prevented by the destruction of the gooseberry and currant bushes within 900 feet of the white pine. Breaking the cycle effectively protects the trees.

Within the boundaries of the Monongahela National Forest in Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Tucker counties, 27,925 acres of white pine were protected from the disease in 1936, 1937, and 1938 by the destruction of 375,655 wild gooseberry and currant bushes, at an average cost of less than forty cents per acre of white pine. This initial working gave sufficient protection from the disease up to 1943. However, after lapses of from 5 to 8 years, there is a probability of new gooseberry growth from seeds and sprouts, and a recoverage is necessary to extend the protection.

The Monongahela blister rust project opened in Pocahontas county in early February and will continue through the spring and summer months. The Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine of the Department of Agriculture maintains headquarters for blister rust control activities in West Virginia at Marlinton, where Ralph W. Welch directs the control program in the state. Operations are also being conducted to save the white pine from destruction on state and privately owned lands. The Conservation Commission of West Virginia is in close cooperation with the Federal government in the program on lands not under Federal control.

G. E. Geaton of Marlinton is supervising the blister rust work on the Monongahela National Forest.

That Extra Something!
...You can spot it every time

"SPOTLIGHT Bands", the radio program broadcast over Blue Network every week night for Coca-Cola, features the nation's favorite name bands. Their names mean something because their bands have something extra to offer. Coca-Cola got where it is by offering something that more than quenches thirst. It brings a delightful after-sense of refreshment, too.

In ice-cold Coca-Cola you find quality you count on. You find delicious taste that sets it apart. You find refreshment that goes into energy. Anybody can make a soft drink, but only The Coca-Cola Company makes Coca-Cola. The only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coka. Both mean the same thing... "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

Listen are put in, stages fixed, loudspeakers hooked up, and rehearsal begins. Soon, the boys in uniform will have their favorite band in person just as their families will on their home radios.

The best is always the better buy!

We wish to express our thanks to our friends for their help during the recent illness of our wife and mother and for their expressions of sympathy at the time of her death.

Don't let APRIL be your car's "Unlucky Month!"

SLEEPY SAM:
"Roses are red and violets blue
Add SPRING'S the time LINES
To sabotage CARS for you and you
And put you all on BIKES!"

SQUEAKY SQUIRE:
"Yeh... When it comes to cars in WAR
These Americans are SPOILED
They FORGET cars can only last
If properly greased 'n' OILED!"

Now is when a little care will help your car a lot!

There was never a Spring when your car needed a thorough check-over more than it does this year. No matter how little you may run it, you can't afford to have parts wear out or go bad. We're listing below some of the important things to do now for your own and for Uncle Sam's sake, too. Let your Esso Dealer take care of them. HE'S A GREMLIN-CHASER.

worn Winter oils and replace them with the proper Summer grade of new, fresh Esso Lubricants.

CHASSIS. The chassis of your car has taken a beating through the Winter, so have your Esso Dealer give it a Verified Esso Lubrication—the lubrication job that puts the right lubricants in the right place.

BATTERY. Reduced driving due to gasoline rationing has probably put your battery through a hard winter. Be sure to have your Esso Dealer check it and recharge it if necessary.

TIRES. How far have your tires gone since you had them gauged and switched so as to extend their life as far as possible? If it is over 2,000 miles have your Esso Dealer check them with the Tire Tread Depth Gauge, and switch them immediately, if necessary. Two tire-saving tips: 1. Maintain 32 pounds pressure at all times (the new war-time standard). 2. New drive over 35 miles per hour.

Let your Esso Dealer check over your whole car. You may need a new light bulb, or a windshield wiper blade. Probably the finish of your car, for protection, needs a washing and then a good polishing job. See your Esso Dealer for whatever you need to keep your car in good running order.

Our Army and Navy Boys

William F. Vining, 24, son of Mrs. Lilly M. Vining, of Glenwood, was recently assigned to the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Florida, for intermediate flight training, according to the public relations officer of that station.

Before entering the Naval service Vining received his A. B. degree after attending West Virginia Wesleyan and Boston University.

The middle of November, he was sent to the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, where he successfully completed the elimination training course March 9.

Upon completion of the intensive course at the "Annapolis of the Air" Vining will receive his Navy "Wings of Gold" with the designation of Naval Aviator, and will be commissioned an Ensign in the Naval Reserve or a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Ozell Gaylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Gaylor, of Pyles Mountain, is a member of the Armed Forces serving "somewhere" overseas. He was advanced to the rank of Corporal several months ago and has been on active duty over sea for 18 months on "special guard assignment" with his Company. He was inducted into the Army from Keene, New Hampshire, where he had been employed for several years by the Golden Keene Company, as a machine operator and was a highly respected employee. After his induction he completed his basic training in Camp in Virginia and North Carolina, after which he went across, being one of the first boys to go for over sea duty. Corporal Gaylor wants his many friends in the county to know that he is well and thinks of them often, and that he will be glad when this "job" is over with and he can see them once again. He sends regards to everyone who knows him.

Lester W. Howard, (colored) of Beard, West Virginia, was accepted for service in the Army at the Induction Station at Clarksburg, West Virginia, March 26, 1943, and reported to the Local Board at Marlinton, for transportation to the Reception Center at Fort Hayes, Ohio, on Friday, April 2, 1943.

Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland, April 2—John W. Patton, Mill Point, West Virginia, is scheduled to become a Second Lieutenant at the graduation exercises of the Chemical Warfare Service Officer Candidate School here tomorrow. He was chosen from the ranks for this training by his superior officers because of excellence in military record, education, and character.

March 28, 1943.

Dear Cal:
Enclosed you will find $1.00 and I would like to have the Times sent to the above address.

Mr. home last year, and I would like to keep up with the news.

Staff Sergeant Carl Kinsmore, Hqs. Btry, 330th F. A. Bn., A. P. O. 451, 75th Division, Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri.

West Texas Bombardier Triangle, April 1—There was no April 1st in this huge bombardier training center today as Army Air Forces schools at Midland, San Angelo and Big Spring, simultaneously graduated large new classes of the deadly "Hell from Heaven Men."

Bombardiers who won their bars and silver wings today included Second Lieutenant Fred W. Gibson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Gibson, of Elk.

Although now fully schooled in the use of the secret U. S. bomb, these aerial Axis blasters will receive still further training before they put their devastating skill to work against the Nazis and the Japs.

Captain Oren Poage who has been stationed in the Caribbean Area, is home on a 32 day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Poage, at Edray. He has been in the Service for three years.

Mrs. Jewell Hamilton has received the good news that her husband, Private Emmett Hamilton, stationed at Pomona, California, has been promoted to Private First Class.

Lyle Winston Hultz, of Seaboard, has enlisted in the Navy and is now stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center, at Chicago for his boot training.

Grady Moore, who has been stationed at Miami Beach, Florida, has been transferred to Murray College, Tahomingo, Oklahoma for special training. He was recently promoted to Private First Class.

Lieutenant Harry Lynn Sheets is home from the Army Air Corps on furlough. He arrived Friday, having flown from California in 17 hours. His father, Mayor Carl L. Sheets, met him at Roanoke, Virginia, in his plane.

Percy Hansford, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Hansford, who was home on sick leave from his camp in Arizona, was taken to the Ashford Hospital, at White Sulphur Springs, for observation, last Sunday.

Private James L. Dilley, of the Army Air Corps, stationed at Moore Field, Mission, Texas, is home on a fifteen day furlough with his mother, Mrs. E. C. Dilley, and other relatives.

Warren Johnson, of the United

Board Of Trade

At the meeting of the Pocahontas County Board of Trade last Thursday night, Lieut. Thomas Edgar, of the U. S. Tank Destroying Unit, spoke interestingly on tank warfare and the new anti-tank weapon, the "Pillbox." He is now stationed in Oregon.

The Monongahela West Penn System is a great service corporation, whose service has been outstanding in promoting better farm practice in the territory it serves. Particularly now are its efforts redoubled when the production of more food means so much in winning the war sooner. At the Board of Trade meeting last Thursday night their field representative, C. H. V. Turner spoke upon the important matter of every family having a Victory Garden and the opportunity the Board had of furthering such patriotic endeavor. The hint was taken and the matter was referred to J. A. Sydenstricker and his agricultural committee to work out the details for a general garden visitation and inspection day along about early roasting ear time—say August 7 or 11.

The lesson centered on lunches and was well presented by Mrs. W. H. Barlow. Mrs. A. T. White demonstrated lunch packing by showing what foods should be included and how to prepare them for the lunch kit. The discussion disclosed that the working man needs a rib sticking lunch while the school child needs a growing lunch; lunches should please the eye as well as the taste. Our boys are being rejected by Uncle Sam because we have failed to feed them properly. The neighborhood leader discussed Victory food, gardens, seeds and fruits. 43 Red Cross garments had been completed in the last month. The next meeting will be with Mrs. A. T. White.

Mrs. Wilson Tallman Wins Merit Award

Mrs. Anna Darnell Tallman, of Marlinton, who is now employed by the Glen L. Martin Company, at Baltimore, was recently presented the Merit award. At the presentation the following letter was read:

Mrs. Tallman was hired October 4, 1942, and placed in our rivet school. Here, she proved to be a very apt pupil and, after eight days training was assigned to rivet the top skin on the P. B. M-3.

Two weeks later Mr. Hilmer and Mr. Wirsing, the division heads of Body and Surface and Floats, were inspecting the 1st Position of P. B. M-3 Center Wing. They saw a girl who appeared to be sitting on a wing and playing with a rivet gun and rivets. Upon closer observation it was discovered that what they thought was playing was actually a magnificent example of the value of motion study. They found that this woman was producing more work than more experienced persons on the same job, and she achieved this greater production by such an efficient use of her hands and with such grace and ease that she appeared to be playing.

This woman was Mrs. A. a Tallman who three weeks earlier had put on her application—previous experience: housewife.

We recommend her for the Merit Award because her achievement is a symbol of America adjusting itself to the War Effort and the road to Victory.

Signed: D. Wirsing, J. Wooley.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1943

Being as this is planting time of year, one of the upper bracket citizens of West Virginia writes up from the settlements for to know about the signs of the moon to guide him in his patriotic endeavors to grow a Victory garden and grow it right.

To begin with, let me assure a waiting world scientists are now proving each day and night to their surprise there is more to the traditions of all the ancient peoples about the moon's influence upon plants, and people and things of nature in general. The power which pulls the tides can and does affect everything else, though the extent is not spectacular like the swelling and receding of the wobbly water of the ocean.

The next time you are on a trout stream and hit a piece of luck with trout all of a sudden beginning to jump crazy for a fly, why check up on the exact time of day when the fish began to bite. When you get home, take out the old almanac, and check up on the time of high tide—if we had a tide. Yes, by golly, the fish began to feed when the tide came in. Just off hand, the time of high tide in our landless Mountains is a little more than two hours later than Tide-water, Virginia. They tell me this now known effect of the moon on fish in any stream was first taken note of in the New York aquarium. There clams and other shell fish dig themselves into the sand at the approach of low tide, though the water in the tank is always at the same depth. The tackle supply houses now furnish a chart to fish by, based on this ocean-tide business.

Excuse me, please, I had no intention of going off on the fish-line so early in this piece. You know how it is with the old man, in the spring his fancy gently turns to thoughts of fishing.

Talking about the moon, there is the old Indian saying about the full moon eating up the clouds. This saying is now accepted as a scientific truth. The weather observers say there is actually less falling weather during the period of the full moon than at other times.

The time of the highest tides—the light of the moon—is a poor time in which to put on chip-board and shingle roofs and plant potatoes. It is a good time to lay a worm fence, the pull of the moon will keep the bottom rail on the ground. This will also make the shingles curl up, and cause potatoes to grow so shallow as to be sunburned. To keep the elphboards down, lay them in the dark of the moon with the sign of the crab, a crustacea which travels backwards. Build a worm fence then and the bottom rail will sink so deep the second one will soon touch the ground; plant potatoes then and they will grow so deep you can hardly dig all of them out. Compromise in this matter of planting spuds by getting them in on a receding moon when the sign is the twins. The tops will be medium size, the taters of proper depth and many in the hill. This rule applies with equal force to other root crops such as turnips and beets.

Catch the light of the moon for top bearing crops like corn. Be doubly careful about your running vines. These require the light of the moon, but the particular sign is most important. If the sign is in the flower, your cucumbers will bloom powerful and set little fruit; if in the feet, they will run all over the garden, to be all vine. Here again the sign of the twins is the one to set you up in business with sturdy, fruitful vines.

The signs of the phases of the moon are called signs of the Zodiac. This Zodiac word means an animal. The ancients gave the name to an imaginary band 16 degrees wide, extending around the heavenly sphere, having for its middle line the apparent yearly path of the sun among the stars. This path is called elliptic. They divided the sun path into twelve signs of thirty degrees each, and called most of the constellations in it after an animal, hence the name, zodiac, the Ram, the Bull, the Twins, the Crab, the Lion, the Virgin, the Balance, the Scorpion, the Archer, the Goat, the Water Bearer, the Fishes. In this path or imaginary band move the sun, the moon and the five planet stars the ancient knew, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

How old this Zodiac sign business is no one can tell. In Egypt there temples which have representations of zodiacal constellations. The position of these signs, give astronomers the clue in calculating the age of the temples, six thousand years. There is variance of the zodiac sign schedule of nearly a minute a minute a year ahead of sun time. In two thousand years this has put the signs all out of kilter. In reality, the sign of the Fishes has moved up into the place of the Ram. Whether the Chinese and Indians got the zodiac fancy from the Egyptians or the other way around no one knows. It is known the Greeks got it from the Egyptians.

Anyway, the three spring signs are the Ram, the Bull, and the twins. The Ram sign is the starting point for under this sign the sun crosses the equator at the time of the spring equinox. Beware of the Bull, for the old saying is, a change of the moon under this sign will bring snow even in August. This sign is in neck. You know the common expression, getting it in the neck, and sticking your neck out. Plant in sign of the Twins for fruitful yield, and in the sign of the Crab for deep root.

The summer signs are the Crab, the Lion, the Virgin. The fall signs are the Balance, the Scorpion, the Archer. The winter signs are the Goat, the Water Bearer and Fishes.

Further the ancients held to the idea that the twelve constellations governed the anatomy of man's body. The Ram, head and face; the Twins, the arms; the Bull, the neck; the Lion, the heart; the Virgin, the breast; the Scales, the reins; the Virgins, the bowels; the Water Carrier, the legs; the Scorpion, the flowers; the Goat, the knees, and the Fishes the feet.

I pay little mind to the sign of the Zodiac. These signs are now running so far off sun schedule, that in the last two thousand years the Fishes, the sign of the feet, have replaced the Ram, the sign of the head. It will take the Ram twenty-two thousand more years to work himself around again to the head of the procession, to be with the sun as it crosses the line at the spring equinox. The almanacs still persist in printing March 21 each year as under the sign of the Ram, to the misleading of the earnest seeker after truth in the planting and fishing endeavors.

However, I do not set great store by the phases of the moon in my planting and my fishing, even if there are agnostics who scoffingly maintain that for them and their house they plant in the ground and fish in the streams and put in the moon.

Lunch time at school was the subject for day and was discussed by different members. Mrs. Cutlip gave an excellent demonstration on making yeast bread. TO BLAST THE WORLD'S BIGGEST WINDBAGS!

A roaring, raging hurricane seldom hits harder than 100 miles an hour. But at Wright Field, Ohio, Air Force engineers whip up an almost unbelievable 400-mile wind—to help improve American military planes.

Two forty-foot fans, weighing nearly a million pounds, put the "howl" in this hurricane tunnel. They're driven by a huge 150-hp electric motor with a turbine horsepower rating. They pump concrete tests of large-scale plane models at speeds up to 400 miles an hour.

America's shock fighters and heavy bombers are faster, safer, more deadly to the enemy, because America has the world's biggest wind tunnel—and the world's biggest supply of electric power.

In fact, electric power is made to nearly all our production. It turns the machines that turn out tanks, planes and guns. It welds the ship hulls—and it flashes the spot welds that hold war by air and by sea.

War has brought thousands of many inventors, but there has been plenty of electric power for war production.

The electric companies under business management, supplying about seven-eighths of all America's electric power, had a $50 job to do—and did it!

MONONGANELA SYSTEM

ELMER MANN, FAITHFUL, S. E. BISHOP, Attorney-at-Law, Marlinton, W. Va.

STEWART, Raleigh Register! War's all over! . . . all over the front page! The price of Elmer Mann, for 2 legs less Negro notebook is still and his weary spirit rests after years of work with all the odds against him.

Elmer died last week without ever having had the privilege of using the cherished wooden legs which he hoped some day to own, but Beckley will not forget his gallant fight to support himself, as he sold from 50 to 100 papers a day.

Few recognized the name in the short obituary last week, but all knew him to be faithful to the end, doing what seemed to others to be impossible, refuting the idea that "God does not expect a crippled man to run a race." It was more than a race to Elmer.

He fought the bitter "Marph" winds which chilled him as he sat on his small "wheeled" platform on the streets, and when the pains of pneumonia stabbed his frame, he went away to die—to the county poor farm—refusing charity to the last.

The Almighty has a very special message for Elmer as he sleeps with his fathers in Marlinton. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."—Raleigh Register.

Dear Mom and Dad

Dear Mom and Dad, I received the following letter from your brother, Private James F. Dulaney, somewhere in Africa, and I thought you would like to see it. He is stationed at Tazarkana, Texas. He is brother of Mrs. Blanche Patterson and Mrs. Dennis Waugh, of Marlinton.

Somewhere in Africa, February 27, 1943. Dear Sir: Will try to write you a few lines to let you know that I am still living. How are all the folks? I am getting along O. K. I guess.

Well, I had a great birthday yesterday out here in the woods. I have not received any mail since I came over here. There is another Dulaney in this company and he got some of my mail, but he turned it back and they sent it back to the A. P. O. I guess I will get it before long.

I am having a little excitement once in a while. That is the reason I do not write any more than I do. I cannot get stationary over here. Has Wilson gone to the Army yet? Well, I hope I get to come home soon.

If you do not hear from me for awhile do not worry for I do not have much time to write. Well, news is scarce so I will close. Tell all the folks I am O. K. Answer soon with all the news.

Your brother, Frank.

Texarkana, Texas, February 25, 1943. Hello Sir: How are you doing by this time? Fine, I hope.

Well, I finally started training and like it fine. I think we will finish our training in about four weeks. At least that is what our Commanding Officer said. Then I expect I will be sent somewhere else.

I have not had a chance to have any pictures taken yet but maybe I can get some taken pretty soon. When I get some taken I will send you two or three if they do not look too bad.

Well, guess I will have to close as it is almost bedtime. Write when you can, and tell all the gang hello for me.

Your brother, Wilson. Pvt. Wilson A. Dulaney, 35748583 188th Ord. Co. D. Ordnance Unit, Training Center, Red River Ordnance Depot, Texarkana, Texas.

The following letter was received by Miss Virgie Alderman from her cousin, P.F.C. Steward W. Rider, who is serving with the United States Army.

Somewhere in Africa.

Dear Virgie: How is this old world treating you now? Fine, I hope. It is treating me fine. Oh! it could be better.

I hope you will excuse me for not writing sooner but you see I am in a place where I cannot write as often as I would like to. Now you be sure and answer this. I like to hear from that part of America - West Virginia.

I hardly ever get any mail from the folks in Ranelle. I want you to write and tell me where Osborne is or just about the place where he is so I can write to him.

I am in a place they call Africa and I like it very well. Boy, it sure is some place; some swell scenery here to see. Well, I cannot think of anything else to write. So answer real soon and tell Gabe to write to me.

Well, I will be seeing you when my blue moon turns to gold again.

From your cousin, Wilson.

Mrs. Luther Fowler, of Cass, sends in this letter from her son, Lee Fowler, serving with Armed Forces overseas.

February 18, 1943. Dear Mother: I will try and answer your letters I received two days ago. I got both of them; they were mailed January 21st and 25th. They were the second letters I have received from you since I left the States. No, I did not get your package nor the stamps.

The weather was really hot here today and the mosquitoes are about to carry me away while I am writing this letter. My knee got all right. I am sure glad you got my money order. I was wondering what had happened. I thought maybe there was something wrong at home. I also got a letter from Bill and Maxine the same day I got yours. Tell Maxine I will answer it right away. I am pretty tired tonight and do not feel much like writing. Bill said Franklin was in the hospital! How is he and is he seriously ill? Is Dad still working at the air station?

I went aboard ship and saw Anthony Fowler last Sunday. L. J. Fowler is down here now I think. His girl friend's sister wrote and told me that L. J. wrote and said they were at the same place.

Well, I will close. Answer real soon. Yours son, Lee Fowler.

The following letter is from Corporal Ross G. Miller, who is Overseas, to his father, H. C. Miller.

North Africa, March 2, 1943. Dear Father: Received your letter today. It was the first from you and I am so glad to hear that you are feeling O. K. I never received the letter from Uncle Crick. Sorry to hear of Aunt Ruth's illness. I wish her a speedy recovery. I have been hearing from Mother and the girls real often. I suppose you know that Thelma is in Connecticut working where her brother is. Did she and Margaret ever cook you that big dinner?

Everything is going O. K. with me here. We get a chance to see the movies real often and sometimes a stage show. Some of the family wrote me that Sis had joined the WAVES.

Dad, I would like to be back home in time to help you harvest your crop next fall. I feel as though I would be satisfied at farming after this war is over. Tell Uncle Crick that boy's name is Silas Cauley from Hot Springs, Virginia. He should remember him.

Dad, I haven't a single picture now, but if I get a chance to have some more made I will remember you. Take good care of yourself and I send best regards to all of Uncle Crick's.

Love, Ross.

Mrs. Elmer Triplett received the following letter from her son, James Kelley Triplett, who is stationed in California.

March 15, 1943. Dear Mother: Will write again as I have not heard from you. Well, everything is going fine so far. We are still living in tents. There are eight boys in the tent with me. The only thing I have to keep my clothes in is a sea bag. We wash clothes every day; that includes a towel, shorts, undershirt, and socks. We have been out on the drill field all week. I always liked sun tan but it got a little hot. My back is blistered all over.

Well, I got my rifle yesterday. Boy, she is a honey. All you have to do is put shells in the chamber and start pulling the trigger. I have to keep her shining. We have been doing pretty good in our drill. We might get a week cut off of our boot camp because our schedule says we go to the rifle range next Saturday.

Hope everybody is well and enjoying themselves for I sure am myself. Is Dad still at Norfolk and Clay and Earl in Baltimore? How is Uncle Daniel? Writing a long? I wrote to Uncle Harry but haven't received any answer.

Well, they are sending the boys across fast but I may get to come home before I go across. Tell everybody hello and if some of my friends see this in print they might write me a few lines and Mother, you write soon.

Private James Kelley Triplett, P.O. 214, Marine Corps Base, San Diego, California.

The following letter was received from Charles Edward McElwee, son of Mr. and Mrs. June McElwee, who was recently inducted into the Army.

Wednesday February 24, 1943. Left Columbus, Ohio, at 12:30 P. M. We were put in day coach, thirty-nine of us to a coach. I do not have the slightest idea where I am going. By keeping a close watch on the sun I detect that we are headed a bit west of north. The first point I recognized was Fort Wayne, Indiana. The country up to this point is comparatively level but slightly rolling.

I arrived in Chicago, Illinois.

Just before dark, Chicago was a slight disappointment on the first observation. I expected many tall buildings as in New York. This disappointment, however, was made up by the magnitude of the stockyards and grain elevators.

We transferred in Chicago to pullman coaches. This was a new experience for me. Our train has 14 pullman coaches and two mess units.

Thursday February 25 - I wrote up in Iowa on February 25. I spent the whole day in looking at the immense corn fields in this state. About dark we entered Omaha, Nebraska. I got a glimpse of the State House. The wings converge into a tower which rises about three stories in height.

Friday, February 26 - Today, I woke up in Colorado. We are just about 70 miles from Pikes Peak. We are now in the foothills of the Rockies. I was up bright and early this morning to watch the sun come up over the plains. It was to put it simply, beautiful. The Rockies looked as if they were within 10 miles of us but in reality were 70 miles away. The air is so clear and thin that images are magnified. This is my first view of snow covered mountains. The sun came up from the east this morning bright and red; the snow covered peaks to the west of us seemed comparable to a majestic being wearing a crown of gold. It is difficult to realize that I am a soldier, a person to be trained for destruction, when I am among these beautiful views. Just passed through Bennett, Colorado. It is a typical western town with false fronts on the buildings and dirt roads for main streets.

Just left Denver, Colorado. On the outskirts of town, we threw pennies to a group of Indian children. It was fun watching them scramble and fight for them. We probably would have fought just as hard as they did if they had thrown them back into the train. I think we are heading slightly west of north out of Denver into Wyoming. That can mean that we are going into Oregon or Washington. I had hoped that we were heading for California, but they are shattered now.

We are in Wyoming. The topography changed very rapidly from rather level country to a very rough and jagged terrain. We missed Cheyenne by a few miles. A type of pine grows out here. My guess is that it was Pines Rubrum, of a very stunted variety. It was due to the elevation of 8000 feet. Noted a copper strip mine and a covered wagon.

Saturday, February 27 - I think we are still in Wyoming after a very comfortable night's travel. The terrain is very rough. We seem to be travelling in a small valley, bounded on the sides by rough jagged hills. Very little vegetation except sagebrush and a small plant I think to be Mesquite. It is not hard to imagine that any moment a bunch of fiercely painted Indians may appear over the crest of a hill, riding those small, powerful ponies that I have seen so many of in the past two days. We just pulled in at Pocatello, Idaho. That explains the hills. I wonder what lies "On Beyond The Hills Of Idaho."

Passed through a portion of the state of Oregon. Switched back soon however into Idaho. Passed over the historic Snake River which I have read much about. This river accounted for many of the lives of the Forty-Niners when they attempted to ferry their prairie schooners across it's swollen, body. I have noticed many beautiful horses and cattle in the country. I wonder if we are following the historic Oregon trail.

Sunday morning, February 28 - We are now in the coastal dip out. That means that we are within 150 miles from the coast. I think we have been running close to the Washington line. We should arrive at our camp some time today. Oregon is my choice of all the states that I have passed through. Possibly that is because of the tall pines that I saw growing in the eastern part of the state. I certainly would like to camp in one of those forests.

I think we are in Washington now. We have passed many rivers crisscrossed with logs going to the mills. Can't be far from the Pacific Ocean now because there are literally millions of sea gulls wading and diving into the numerous rivers.

Well, here I am in Fort Lewis, Washington. When I left home I knew I was going some place but I did not figure it would be 2,600 miles away. Fort Lewis is about forty miles from Seattle and is located in the middle of a pine forest.

Monday, March 1. - I am in the Infantry Medical Detachment. I take eight weeks of basic training followed by a lot of schooling. As this is a new outfit there are only about fifty men ahead of me. The fellows in my barracks are the best bunch of men in the world. All of my officers are Doctors. The Non-Coms treat me as their big brother. Every man in the outfit comes from below the Mason and Johnnies. They call us the "Red Sox". The finest type of courtesy is always shown. The sergeant does not allow any soldier in the barracks and the mess could just as soon die as get drunk and ruin our outfit's good name. So you can see I am practically in the best outfit in the country.

Pvt. Charles E. McElwee, 39465 Inf. Med. Det., A. P. O. 44, Fort Lewis, Washington.

The following letter was received by Miss Geneva Alderman from her brother, Private Osborne C. Alderman, Btry. D, 260th C. A. (A. A.), Seattle, Washington, United States Army.

February 7, 1943.

Dear Geneva and Dad: How are you all? Fine I hope. I am O. K. We left Fort Sill, Oklahoma, yesterday at 10 o'clock. We are now in Colorado somewhere and still going, but I don't know just where. It is 9 o'clock now; we have been riding 35 hours.

I saw some herds of cattle but not many, and saw quite a few flocks of sheep in Kansas. We are coming to the mountains now. It sure is hard to write on the train. We stopped in Denver, Colorado, for awhile. We got off the train and took some exercise. Boy, did we need it! We saw crows by the thousands yesterday and saw some ring neck pheasants and plenty of hawks. We saw one flock of sheep; there were about 1,000 or 1,200 of them. You could not hire me to live in Colorado or Kansas. There isn't a house in 2 or 3 miles in some places.

Some one said we have just crossed into Wyoming. It is dark and I can't see what it looks like. I will write more in the morning. We have just passed through Cheyenne. Good night. Good morning! We are still in Wyoming. Just passed a herd of horses. We saw a flock of sheep about a half mile long. There are quite a few white rabbits. I will write more after while.

Well, I will start writing some more now. We stopped for an hour back about four miles and went in a U. S. O. building and got some cookies. We are in Idaho now. There has been snow all the way through Idaho, and it has been snowing all day. There is about six inches on the ground now. We are getting up in the hills now. The mountains sure are high here and so rocky. I have seen plenty of sage brush on this trip. We are coming to some woods now. We have been on the U. P. Trail for a long time. I don't know if you can read this or not for I can hardly write on a train.

Well, we have landed and what a land. We are on an island somewhere. I have not learned the name of it yet or the name of the town either. I think I will like it here. I am in anti-air craft guarding the coast. I guess I will be here for the duration and six months about. We got here last night about 1:30. We came from Seattle, Washington, on a boat. We are on the alert 24 hours a day. We get 8 hours of a week and that is not very much, and a three day pass every two or three months. The officers seem fine so far. We are about a 100 miles from Alaska.

If I get a three day pass I am going to Alaska. I don't know when I will get a furlough and if it isn't very many days I will not get to come home then, but if I can I am coming home. So I will let you know when I think I am getting a furlough. As I want to write to Verlie, Virgie, Lil and Len I will close for this time. Tell all hello for me, be good, and answer real soon.

Your brother, Osborne.

This letter was received by Mrs. Ira Ryder, from her son, Cassell Ryder, who is serving with the Armed Forces overseas.

March 3, 1943.

Hello Mom: This leaves me just fine and I sure had some trip. I certainly got tired riding the boat but I never got sick. I like this country pretty good and the climate is very nice. Tell everybody hello. Well, I guess I will close but do not worry if you do not hear from me very often; for I am a few miles from home. So goodbye.

As ever, Kay.

P. S. We just arrived yesterday.

During the past few days there have been quite a few questions from farm folks concerning slaughter of livestock for home use and slaughter permits for the selling of home slaughtered meat. In an effort to clarify some of these questions we will try to give a few statements as to the rules and regulations covering the farm slaughter of various classes of livestock.

Farm slaughterers will be divided into two groups; those who slaughter for home use, only, and those who slaughter for home use and with the intention of selling their meat. Considering the former group first, any person living on a farm can slaughter for home use all the hogs, calves, sheep, cattle or lambs that he wants to. It will not be necessary to secure a permit for this type of slaughter. Resident farmers who are in the second group and want to slaughter meat with the intention of selling part or all of it must get a slaughter permit from the county USDA War Board. Application shall be made to the local Board. Blanks are provided and available at the Board Office. The applicant shall set forth on the application form the amount of livestock slaughtered and sold during each quarter of 1941. Under present rules and regulations, he will be given a permit by the local War Board to slaughter and sell an equal amount of meat during a corresponding quarter in 1943. If the farmer prefers not to give the information on the 1941 slaughter, the War Board may give him a permit to slaughter and sell three hundred pounds of meat or three animals, not more than one of which shall belong to the cattle class, whichever he prefers.

The farm slaughterer must, of course, in selling meat, collect the necessary number of meat rationing stamps from the purchaser, whether he be the consumer or retailer. These stamps will be turned over to the War Price and Rationing Board. Instructions for handling these stamps can be gotten at your local Rationing Board Office.

DOUBLE KILLING

On Friday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, April 1, 1943, at Frost, James McCarty shot and mortally wounded Hayes Worley. Soon after Price Worley, a brother of Hayes, shot and instantly killed McCarty.

Hayes Worley shot shortly after an emergency operation at the Pocahontas County Memorial Hospital.

Price Worley is held under bond, awaiting action of the grand jury.

The details of the dreadful affair, as reported to the State Police, are—McCarty had been drinking; he and Price Worley had a fight, and Worley shot at him with a pistol. McCarty is then reported to have gone to his home and to have come back with a high power hunting rifle. As he returned, Hayes Worley was coming from working in the woods. There were some words passed, and McCarty shot Worley, the bullet striking him in the stomach. He reported that McCarty then fired a shot through the Worley home. He then returned to the highway, and it is alleged, Price Worley shot him through the chest with a high power rifle. He died almost instantly.

James McCarty was about 34 years old, and single. He was a son of the late Lanky McCarty. He is survived by his aged mother and a number of brothers and sisters.

Hayes Worley was about 49 years of age. He was a native of Virginia, coming to Frost several years ago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Wyntha Townsend Worley, a daughter of Jack Towns and, and their family of small children.

The funerals of each of the deceased were conducted from the Frost church on Monday afternoon.

Eighty-seven of West Virginia's finest purebred Hereford and Aberdeen Angus bulls and heifers will be exhibited and will go on the auction block at the State 4-H camp at Jackson's Mill on April 21-22 when the ninth annual West Virginia Purebred Bull and Heifer Show and Sale will be staged under the auspices of the West Virginia Livestock Association, with the cooperation of the State Department of Agriculture, the Agricultural Extension Service, and the Hereford and Aberdeen-Angus breeders' associations.

Thirty-five Hereford bulls and 35 Hereford heifers, as well as 8 Angus bulls and 9 heifers, have been selected for the show and sale from the scores of animals originally consigned to the event. Thirty-three Hereford and 8 Angus breeders will have animals in the show and sale. The 81 animals in the 1943 show and sale will be the largest number ever to be shown in the annual event.

The show will open on Wednesday afternoon, April 21, at 1 o'clock when the Hereford heifers and some classes of Hereford bulls will be shown. The remainder of the Hereford bulls and the Angus bulls and heifers will be shown on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. Judges of the show will be Dr. C. D. Lowe, of the United States Department of Agriculture, and E. A. Livesey, head of the department of animal husbandry, West Virginia University.

Cartin Is Auctioneer

The auction will take place at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Col. Earl Martin of Greensburg, Ind., who has held previous state bull and heifer sales, will be the auctioneer. The sale offers an excellent opportunity for farmers and livestock men of the state to buy good herd sires and foundation female stock for general improvement of their beef herds, according to Benjamin F. Creech, Extension animal husbandman of West Virginia University. Mr. Creech cites the sale as an excellent medium for getting a wider distribution of purebred breeding stock in West Virginia, and urges West Virginia livestock men to take advantage of the offering. All animals in the show and sale are from accredited herds or herds in the process of being accredited.

In the heavy electrical storm last Friday afternoon, the residence of George Preston Moore, on Drenon Ridge was struck by lightning and severely damaged. No one was hurt. The bolt struck a tree near an outhouse and the current traveled electric wires from the small house to the residence. Thirty-two large panes of glass were broken, and fire set in the upper story. The fire was put out before it gained much headway.

On Saturday afternoon April 10, the State Police arrested William Wiltshire, aged 27 years, an escaped convict from Virginia prison road camp near Covington. He is now in jail at Marlinton, awaiting extradition proceedings.

C. and O. Issues Report

In an illustrated annual report to stockholders, designed to portray more graphically and informatively financial status of the company, as well as problems arising from wartime operations, Carl E. Newton, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company, tells how a record total income of $188,331,888 for 1942 became converted, after expenses and federal income and excess profit taxes, into a net income of $39,153,437, which is some 26 per cent under the net income for 1941.

The year 1942, as you would expect, broke all previous records for traffic," Mr. Newton tells the stockholders. "Operating revenues were at an all-time high, and despite greatly increased costs, net earnings before taxes were greater than in any previous year of our history. "But, as you would also expect, taxes increased enormously over 1941. Even so, the Chesapeake and Ohio was able to pay $26,800,000 in dividends on its common stock, and in addition, to reduce its funded debt by $9,000,000."

Do not overlook the big support of the Pocahontas County Rod and Gun Club at the Marlinton Grade School lunch room Friday night, April 16. Supper will be served at 7 o'clock by the P. T. A. This will be a most enjoyable social affair. Besides outdoors is big business in Pocahontas County, and this pioneer club can be credited with much of the success of the conservation movement in West Virginia.

WEST VIRGINIA EYES BIG CANNING JOB OF 190,197,400 QUARTS Estimate is Based on Recommendations for Housewives to Put Up 100 Quarts Per Person This Year.

West Virginia's essential wartime home-canning goal for 1943 totals 190,197,400 quarts, a leading food distributor estimated today.

This huge job, facing the state's 424,475 housewives represents an average of 100 quarts of home-packed food per person, the amount the United States Department of Agriculture has recommended for rural families and which it considers desirable also for urban families, explained Harvey A. Baum, vice president of A & P Company's produce-buying affiliate, The Atlantic Commission Company. Any housewife who meets this goal will assure each member of her family two cups of home-canned food daily for about seven months. Baum believes many American housewives will fill the gap which will exist due to lack of commercially-canned fruits and vegetables by purchasing fresh fruits and vegetables for high immediate use and for home canning in such as these perishable foods requiring no ration points. The War Production Board has promised adequate supplies of canners and rubber discs for home canning.

Beginning in May our company will furnish throughout its stores up-to-the-minute information as to when the various fruits and vegetables are available in sufficient quantities to warrant canning," Baum said. "It is a patriotic duty this year to can fruits and vegetables in peak production periods to avoid waste."

BANKS AND THE WAR

Banking's Manpower

America's banks have felt the impact of war from many sides. They have been called upon to perform numerous war services, such as selling War Bonds, purchasing the Treasury's securities and financing war production. On the other side of the ledger it is interesting to see what is happening to banking's manpower power. Of a total of 280,000 bank staff members, 70,000 were lost to war production and armed services in 1942. The American Bankers Association estimates that 100,000 more will go in 1943. The road ahead looks rough, but banking will "carry on."

DAVIS OF KANAWHA
By James W. Weir in Wheeling Intelligencer

There is in the Gentleman from Kanawha—J. Horner Davis—"The generous warmth that prompts to worthy deeds"—both public and private—and without any thought of praise. The best evidence of that is his willingness to praise and generously appraise the deeds and accomplishments of others. But as friends and observers have by this time learned the fine characteristics he truthfully attributes to others, he also possesses to an eminent degree himself.

It was in keeping with that spirit of generosity, when in asking, not many days ago that John Delancy Amos, son of the speaker of the House, be made an honorary page for the day to assist his father he paid this tribute to his friend, John Amos: "Son, your father is a man possessed of an indefinable quality of character, enterprise, self-confidence, amiability and courage." Davis of Kanawha has that same chivalry, that same kind of character and that same enterprise.

It is doubtful if there is any member of the House more conscientious, earnest and enterprising in the performance of his legislative duties. He is generous of his time as he is in character. Seldom a night passes but what he may be found in his study at home pouring over legislative measure until the wee small hours of morning, or else consulting those he thinks ought to know as to the effect of the various measures. It is a part of his training as a lawyer, to prepare his cases well but it is exhausting and no man can stand such a pace as he is also rendering service as a member of a rationing board in Kanawha county, as Horner Davis is doing without compensation of course.

Neither in his legislative capacity as a member of the rationing board will he do anything, which he thinks is wrong nor is imposing upon the public. On the other hand once he thinks a thing is right that is the course he will pursue.

Still under 40, the Gentleman from Kanawha has gone far in his profession and in public life. A few years ago he was West Virginia Chairman of the Junior Bar Conference of the American Bar Association, and at the last election in Charleston he was the Democratic candidate for mayor of that city. He has had previous experience as a legislator, having been a member of the House at the 1935 session. At this session his selection as vice chairman of the Judiciary Committee to which so many important legislative measures are referred for consideration, was a logical one. Evidently Speaker Amos knew how assiduously Davis would work at the job.

Horner Davis has been twice married. He has been married less than a year to a very lovely Pocahontas girl, formerly Miss Evelyn Graham, and her interest in his work and the incentive she furnishes has done much to lighten the burdens the Gentleman from Kanawha has assumed, and of course under such circumstances his heart is in his work "two hearts in fact." It is his generous heart, it can be said that "divine grace to every art" and in fact to every act of Davis of Kanawha.

Uriah Kramer gave me a beautiful Indian axe head, or celt. He picked it up several years ago on Dreher Flat. The celt is of a fine grained hard stone. I put it down as "green stone." This is a basic rock. The nearest place I know of where it is found is in the Potomac Valley, near Harpers Ferry. The stone of the Greenbrier Valley is sedimentary.

Squire Coe Beverage observed five sea gulls feeding in his meadows on Knappa Creek one day last week. From their size, color and general description I put them down as terns. It is not unusual to see gulls in this valley after a storm when the wind has been from the east.

One night last week there was a knock on the front door. It was my young friend Robert Johnson (Smoky Joe for short). He came bounding in to tell me his fishing had been disturbed in the mouth of Knappa Creek by a big flock of wild ducks fighting on the water, feet first, and splashing water over everything. It was a big flock of mallards, stopping over night on their spring migration north.

Dear Calvin:
Just a line to protest against the silly idea of jumping the clock back and forth an hour. It does not lengthen life, but its inconsequence means will shorten life.

This is especially so when you live eight miles from school, with a bunch of grandchildren who must be gotten in.
I still have to hear and people come for miles around to see him fight with me. If you would like to have him, I will send him down at your price. You remember you once wrote to me for a bear rug for your grandson. I wondered if he would not like to have a bear. At his age he now likely has Jap fighting in his mind. The Japs are more ferocious and have less sense.
H. P. Gromer.
Cheat Bridge, W. Va.

Dear Uncle Harvey—You sure will have me in a tight corner when that seven year old citizen reads your kind proposition to have a bear to raise up with the grand children. I am not quite sure how I will be able to convince him that our ratio of rationing points for essential foods for the family cannot be stretched to include the daily requirements of a lusty, growing bear, without cruelty to animals and privation of children. Nor, how unkindly the party will take to the presence of a real live bear around the premises.

That bear rug you sent me has been a perpetual source of enjoyment. The bear fights staged around it would have done much to relieve the meat shortage. In these sham battles, the bear is invariably killed. However, the casualty list among men and dogs is heavy.

Your never failing kindness to me and mine through all the years overwhelm me beyond my power to express my appreciation, so you will never know how much I like you.
Calvin.

Mrs. Kimball and Mrs. Worthington, dressed soberly and wearing their best black gloves, walked along the stony country road back toward Sophia Hardy's farm, to pay their visit of condolence.

"How do you reckon she'll be bearing up," Mrs. Kimball asked Mrs. Worthington. "Both ladies wore their most solemn, funeral expressions."

"A mighty severe blow," Mrs. Worthington said. "Mighty severe. To lose your only son, the mainstay of your declining years. And such a dreadful death, too—to go down with a ship. Mercy!"

"The first of our boys from Hand County to go," Mrs. Kimball said, mournfully. "I wouldn't blame Sophia Hardy for feeling right bitter."

They stood on the simple stone doorstep, with downcast eyes, getting themselves into the proper commiserative mood.

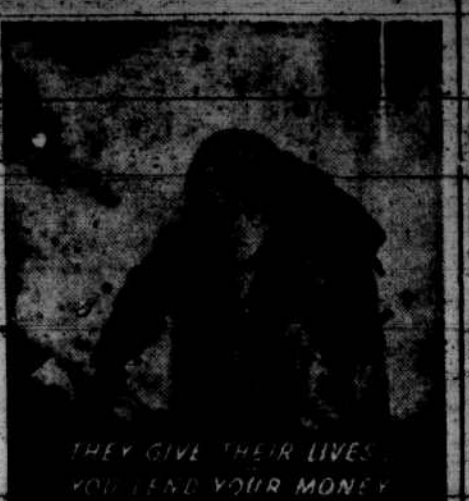

"Come in," the door was brisk and cordial. They looked up in surprise. Sophia herself had come to the door. As they followed her into the parlor they exchanged glances, with eyes lowered. Sophia was not even glancing at them. The parlor shades were not even drawn.

"It's nice of you to come," Sophia said. "Do sit down."

"We came," Mrs. Kimball said almost reprovingly, "to tell you that our hearts are bleeding for you in your great loss."

"We know how lonely you must be out here," Mrs. Worthington said. "With nothing to take your mind off."

"Oh, I keep busy," Sophia said. "I've just finished applying for the Government insurance on Tom's life."

Aid to Enemy

"Any American who willfully neglects to pay his taxes on time or to invest every cent he can in War Bonds is surely giving aid and comfort to the enemy." We have a job to do and we are all called for service to our country. Our dollars are called to service too. Let us all ask ourselves, "shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?" — Secretary Morgenthau.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest McClure had as their week end guests, Pvt. Elmer L. McClure of Kingman, Arizona; Miss Gladys Harper of Clayton, Delaware; Miss Catherine McClure, Mrs. Wilbur Alderman and sons Johnnie and Forrest Wallace of Charleston. On their return to Charleston, they were accompanied by Mrs. Forrest McClure and Pauline, who returned Tuesday.

Mrs. Margaret Fowler of Hillsboro, is spending sometime with her daughter Mrs. James Lewis, also sons Pat, Doyle and Harry of Baltimore. They expect to go into service soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold VanKeenan of Hillsboro, are the proud parents of a son, born March 28, 1943. Mrs. VanKeenan will be remembered as Miss Marie Chappell.

If every man, woman and child in the United States lays aside $100 the aggregate will be about $13,000,000,000 or the amount the Treasury must raise in its Second War Loan.

The Swago Farm Womens Club met with Mrs. M. H. Kellison March 19 with 18 members and five visitors present. The hostess had carried out a St. Patrick's Day color scheme and decorations which was very clever. Devotions were led by Mrs. W. J. Yeager using the theme "Who is my Neighbor?" The president conducted the business meeting which consisted of reports of the Courtesy committee and the neighborhood leader meetings. The seed packages were announced available and the silk hose and grease package campaigns were discussed and urged to be participated in. It was decided that we give $5 to the Red Cross War Fund. Birthday greetings were extended to Mrs. Earl Kee and Miss Madeline McNeill. A demonstration was given by Mrs. Yeager on the use of Scotch tape for mending umbrellas, raincoats and books, which was useful and timely. The lesson, Lunch Time at School and at Work, was prepared and led by Mrs. Nema Palmer. Important phases of the lesson were: Foods especially desirable for the packed lunch; how to prepare them; changes in the lunch program in the last ten years; time savers in preparing packed lunches; how the same foods may be prepared and served for home lunch and for a packed lunch. The club paper was prepared and read by Mrs. Lock McNeill with a supplement by Mrs. D. W. Williams. Much fun is always derived from the club paper which is known as the Swago Farm Chatter. The hostess, assisted by her sister, Mrs. O. H. Kee, served a delicious salad course. The April meeting will be with Mrs. Lock McNeill, Mrs. Verlin Loudemilk, leader.

Mr. and Mrs. Lake McClure and daughter Carole Leg and Jake McClure, of Charleston, spent the week end with Mrs. J. W. McClure.

Mrs. Norma Waugh Reed of Baltimore, visited her mother, Mrs. J. E. Waugh on Stony Creek last week end.

Second War Loan Campaign Now on for 3 Weeks

13 Billion Dollars to Back Up the Men in the Armed Forces - The Greatest Financial Drive in all History - Come Across with Your Bit

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES - YOU LEND YOUR MONEY.

We on the home front face one of the most personal challenges of this war to date. That challenge is whether or not we are willing to sacrifice to a sufficient extent to lend our government thirteen billion dollars within the next few weeks.

To do the job, you and I, and every one we know, are going to have to dig down in our sock— to dig out some of those dollars we have saved away for a rainy day—as well as to take a good-hunk out of this month's pay check.

This is a job which has to be done. Sure, we on the home front are feeling the pinch of war. We have gasoline rationing, food rationing, higher taxes and a lot of other little discomforts. But they are nothing compared with the agonies faced daily by our men—men from this community among them—out there on the fighting fronts of the world. Yes, we know that this constant demand for more money out of our pockets and out of our paychecks—an increasing amount each month—is monotonous. But so is sitting in a fox-hole or lying in a slit-trench day after day, slogging through the hell of a humid jungle or that of Sahara sand.

Our sons, friends, brothers, husbands and others we know are doing that for us. They are facing something more terrible than cutting down on a few things that we once thought were essentials to the American standard of living in order to do it, too. As Secretary Morgenthau has said: "Shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?"

The Second War Loan is an order to the home front to go on a new offensive. Your dollars are the weapons in this attack. They will make possible the passing of the ammunition to those boys up there in the front lines. To win this war is going to cost more and more money—and more and more lives. But the price of freedom is high. We can not; we dare not let our fighting men down.

You can't let George do this for you. You must pitch in with your dollars. Just keep in mind those boys in the front lines. They give their lives—you lend your money! Don't wait for someone to come around and ask you to do it. Do it today—and do it until you feel worthy of them.

American People Face Acid Test in Treasury's 2nd War Loan To Raise 13 Billion Dollars in Three Weeks

The Nation Dare Not Fail in This Greatest Financing Task in History—"They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

Washington, D. C.—Coming as it does upon the heels of income tax payments, the people of America will face an acid test this month when the Treasury's Second War Loan drive opens April 12 with an objective of thirteen billion dollars to be raised through sale of Government securities.

A substantial part of this huge financing, the most stupendous ever undertaken by any government in the world's history, must be loaned by people in ordinary walks of life.

High Government officials have pointed out that the nation must not fail in this duty to our men on the battle fronts who are now carrying the offensive to the enemy at every stage. It is obvious to every thinking man and woman that as the United Nations take this offensive against the dictators, the cost of war operations increases in proportion.

The American people must no longer think of war costs in terms of equipping a soldier, building a tank or plane or a ship. We must now think in terms of the cost of battles, invasions and new offensives. Attacking armies cost more money than equipping that army and we must meet that increased cost by buying more War Bonds and Second War Loan Securities.

It is not only necessary that the American people left here at home assume this additional participation in the war effort—it is an honor to do so. For we here at home can do no less than attempt to approach the sacrifices of our brave men out on the fighting fronts to whom the last great measure of sacrifice is but a daily offering. They give their lives—we are asked only to lend our money.

And that is the theme of the Second War Loan, "They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

Financial experts who know monetary conditions in the nation point out that at the present time there is in liquid funds, cash and commercial bank deposits over and above taxes and present investments in Government bonds, and over and above what can be bought this year because of restrictions and rationing approximately 40 billion dollars which should go into Government Bonds.

It should be the objective of every American to invest these loose dollars, idle dollars, in Government securities, not only from a patriotic standpoint, but from the standpoint of their own financial security. There is available during the Second War Loan a type of Security to fit every pocketbook.

Are Will Dollars

Every dollar of these forty billions of dollars available, which is not invested in Government securities during this War Loan Drive is a "will" dollar which, together with its mates, will tend to increase inflation. Uncontrolled inflation might raise the cost of living to a point where the dollar is worthless. It can happen. It happened in Germany after the last war when the price of a loaf of bread cost more than an annual wage.

Invested in Government securities, your dollar will work for you. It will hold down inflation because it is harnessed in war work; it will help buy food, transportation, munitions for our boys on the front lines and it will be earning interest that, together with your original loan, will come back to you later to help you buy the things you cannot buy today to insure your peace of the future.

Remember those boys out there in Tunisia. . . in the South Pacific. . . They give their lives—You lend your money.

To Hasten Victory
No American wants this war to go on minute beyond the time we can bring it to a victorious end. To hasten that victory—to save possibly the lives of millions of our boys on our far-flung fronts—it is imperative that every American do his part in the Second War Loan. There is an investment to fit every purse. The most you can do is to contribute, no matter how small the amount, toward the victory. You give their lives—You lend your money.

The Second War Loan NOW ON

13 billion dollars

must be raised!

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States is asking us to lend it 13 billion dollars in the next few weeks. We can do it. And we must do it. Every American must realize the truth:

In this, our toughest war, we've made a good start. We've trained a lot of men—made a lot of weapons—built a lot of ships.

But it's only a start. No man or woman among us would contend for a single instant that we're doing enough now to win this war!

We've Got to Build More!

We broke all records building 8 million tons of shipping last year. But grim-faced Army and Navy men will tell you that the 18 MILLION tons we're building this year still won't be enough!

We've Got to Fight More!

From now till this war is won, America must be on the offensive. In ever-increasing numbers, your sons, brothers, husbands must go into actual battle. Our losses have already begun to mount—and they will not grow less.

And We've Got to Buy More War Bonds!

Sure we're all buying War Bonds now. But we've got to help pay for our increased fighting and building. We've got to match, as best we can, the sacrifice of those Americans who are tolling and sweating on a dozen battlefronts—with the bloodiest yet to come. The blunt fact is this: to keep our war machine going, we've got to dig up 13 billion extra dollars this month. 13 billion dollars over and above our regular War Bond buying!

In the next few weeks you may be visited by one of the thousands of volunteers who are contributing their time and effort to this Drive. But don't wait for him. Make up your mind now that before this drive is over, you're going to march right down to your nearest bank, Post Office, or place where they sell War Bonds, and do your duty. And don't ever forget this: in doing your duty, you're doing yourself one of the biggest favors of your life!

For United States War Bonds are the greatest investment in the world for most people. They're investments tailored to fit your particular situation. And they give you the chance of a lifetime to order and get the kind of world you want to live in after this war. Every cent you put in War Bonds now will help to guarantee plenty of peacetime jobs making peace-living—for every one of us.

For your Country's sake—for your own sake—invest all you can!

Our Army and Navy Days

The following letter was received by Mrs. Anna O. Clark from her brother, Lloyd McClure, who is serving with our Armed Forces overseas:

February 6, 1943.

Dearest Sis,
I thought I would answer your letter which I received and sure was glad to hear from you. I am well and getting along just fine, so do not worry about me for I will get back home some day.

How is everyone making it at home? Fine I hope. Is Norman still going to school and has he ever heard anything about going to the Army? I hope he will never have to go. Does Herbert and Morgan like the Army? I hope they make it fine and I know they will. I have not heard from them yet but I know I will. You be sure and write often for I love to get letters from home.

It is very hard for me to write a letter for we are not allowed to write about anything that is going on here or what I am doing, so you can see it is hard to write a letter but I will write what ever I can and as long as you know I am well I guess that is all that counts. Sis, write and tell me everything. How is Nellie getting along? And how is Kenneth getting along? Tell him that I will be back to see him. I never will forget when he would come and get in bed with me and cover up his head and say he was afraid. Tell him to be a good little boy. Well, Sis, I will close for tonight. I will write again soon. So tell all of them hello.

With all of my love,
Your brother, Lloyd.

"God be with us till we meet again."

Mrs. Fannie McLaughlin, of Dunmore, received the following letter from her son, Don, of the United States Army, and stationed in Camp Campbell, Kentucky: March 24, 1943.

Hello Mother and all:
Got your letter today at noon. Glad mother is feeling some better. I am well and getting along fine so far. Have inspection every day and they have not found anything wrong; said I am sure getting things on the ball.

I have six cooks and 5 K. P's, and the rest are all officers. Boy, I sure have a time feeding them. We serve them like you would in a restaurant. There are 120 in all. I have to buy extra for them every morning. I bought $80.00 worth this morning. I will tell you what I got when I come home.

The Major is my boss while I am in the Officer's Mess. He told me I had improved the kitchen 100 per cent since I had taken over. All the officers said I had given them the best meals they had eaten in six months. We had oyster stew Monday evening for supper. The mess officer said we would get H. and I thought the same but they came up and patted me on the back and said it was the best stew they had ever eaten. ha ha. My mess officer is from Wheeling, West Virginia. He is 22 years of age and a swell guy.

The officers had their wives over for dinner one day last week. I made out the menu for the for the cooks. I had roast beef, mashed potatoes, creamed carrots, fruit salad, cherry pie and coffee. The Colonel and his wife sure did like the dinner. I won't tell you anything more about the kitchen or I will have to do all the cooking when I get back. ha ha.

We had a big parade here on Monday the 15th and it sure was nice. There were 12,000 soldiers. That was when we activated the 20th Division. There isn't any more 8th. They are drilling the rest here from 5:30 in the morning until 7:30 at night. One bunch eats while the other one drills, then they take over while the others eat.

The two closest towns to where I am are Hopkinsville, Kentucky, and Clarksville, Tennessee. I have been to Clarksville one time. That is where I got Mother's birthday card.

We have a holiday here and I don't have much to do today. I have been sleeping since 1:30. I am getting ready to go back to the barracks.

3000 left yesterday for Overseas. They sure looked good. It sounded pretty lonesome when the band played as they marched to the depot but they seemed quite happy.

I don't know if I will get a furlough next month or not. I will know by next Tuesday. Write soon. So long, Don.
Sgt. Don C. McLaughlin, Btry. C, 414 Arm'd F. A. Bn., 20th Division, A. P. O. 444, Camp Campbell, Kentucky.

Mrs. Bessie Mae sends in this letter from her son, Luther Mae, of the United States Army: March 31, 1943.

Dear Mom,
Just a few lines in answer to your letter I received last night. Sure was glad to hear from you. I am well and hope these few lines find you better. We are having some pretty weather here now.

What is everyone doing? I have been working pretty hard. I sure would like to see you all, but I don't know for sure when I will get to come home. Maybe in a few weeks.

How are Dale and Lucille getting along and are they growing any? Tell them when I come home I will bring them a big penny. Are you all plowing any this year? I sure would like to be there to see them. What was wrong with the radio? Is Charlie still working on Point? I don't know any more. I will write so I will hear from you soon. Love, Don.

P.F.C. Luther M. Mae, Btry. C, 55 C. A., Westport, Washington.

The following letter was received by C. C. Starks, of Beard, from his brother-in-law, Hubert Ross, who is in North Africa: March 13, 1943.

Hello Charlie: I will try to answer some of your letters after so long a time. This leaves me as well as usual. Hope you and Gladys and the children are well. I have received about four letters from you in the last few days. I just get more mail than I have time to answer but still I like to get it. Mail call is the big day around here.

I guess you heard about Carl Brock. It seems that in all my troubles that Carl has been with me. Well there has been a few times times that I have not regretted that night at Beniah, although there are times that it seems very dull, but when I need God the most it seems that He has His hands on me.

I have been getting a letter from Harold about every week. He says that he likes it in Colorado fine and that there is a fine bunch of boys there. There is only one boy with me that was in Oklahoma with me.

Well, Charlie, news is scarce so I will close with lots of love. I got the cigarettes O. K.

Hubert.
March 31, 1943.

Dear Calvin, As I was lying here in the hospital on my bunk I was reading your paper of how things were happening back there and how my friends were praying for me, especially my best girl friend at Lewisburg. I sure like to read your interesting paper as I feel more like I am back home after reading the bear stories. We sure have a swell bunch of boys here in the hospital; also a real nice bunch of nurses and they are real good to me. They carry my meals to me in bed and sit down and we have a great time. talking of the things we are missing back home such as the big slabs of ham meat and the good hot biscuits and butter.

Well, now I guess you will wonder what is wrong with me by my being in the hospital. I am in here for a broken leg caused by a car hitting me on Sunday night, the 7th, while getting off the bus on my return visit from a weekend visit at Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Tell all my buddies hello for me and to keep the good works going and I will be back some of these days to help them out and to have some more good old times like we once had back in those good old West Virginia hills.

Well, that is all I can say this time. My present address is: P.O. June H. Gragg (35136065) Hospital No. 3, Ward 329 Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Sunday night, April 4, 1943.

Dear Calvin, How is everything and everybody in good old West Virginia? Fine I hope. Of all the places I have seen or been since I was inducted into the Army, I have not seen anything that compares with the good old hills where I spent my boyhood days. I think of the good old days real often. I spent fishing and hunting with my friends who are now serving in the Armed Forces throughout the country.

Well, it looks as if spring is here at last and I sure enjoy the nice weather and sunshine, but guess it won't be long until I have spring fever.

Johnnie Hill subscribed for the Times for me while I was in Fort Bliss, Texas. Now that I have been transferred up here I would appreciate it if you would send it to the address stated below. Thanks.

Corporal Wallace Kershner, Jr., Btry. A, 453 C. A. Bn. (A. A.) Fort Knox, Kentucky.

March 26, 1943.

Dear Cal, I was glad to get the paper for I like to know about the things around home. I have been in several different places lately and did not get the paper. I am on the island of Midway now, a place that many people do not know anything about, for it is a military secret which I cannot tell you anything about for that is between me and Uncle Sam, but it is not like the hills of West Virginia. But when you are in the Navy you take what they give you and like it. The Navy is a great life if you don't work on. It will keep a man out of you or damn near kill you and I think I am getting stronger.

Well, I guess I will close for this time. Your friend, Billy Wright.
William Ross Wyatt, S-M Base, Midway Island, T. H.

Meat Regulations

During the last few days there have been quite a few questions from farm folks concerning slaughter of livestock for home use and slaughter permits for the selling of home killed meats. In an effort to clarify some of these phases of the program, we called upon Ben Morgan, Pughonias county agent, for assistance, and he has contributed the following enlightening statements concerning rules and regulations covering the farm slaughter of various classes of livestock.

"Farm slaughterers will be divided into two groups: Those who slaughter for home use only; and those who slaughter for home use and with the intention of selling some of their meat. Considering the former group first—any person living on a farm can slaughter for home use all the hogs, calves, sheep, cattle or lambs that he wants to. It will not be necessary to secure a permit for this type of slaughtering. Resident farmers who are in the second group and want to slaughter meat with the intention of selling all of part of it must get a slaughter permit from the County USDA War Board.

"Application for permits shall be made to the local Board. Blankets are provided and available at the Board office. The applicant shall set forth on the application form the amount of livestock slaughtered and sold during each quarter of 1943. Under present rules and regulations, he will be given a permit by the local War Board to slaughter and sell an equal amount of meat during the corresponding quarter of 1943. If the farmer prefers not to give the information on the 1943 slaughter, the War Board may give him a permit to slaughter and sell 300 pounds of meat or three animals, not more than one of which shall belong to the cattle class, whichever he prefers.

"The farm slaughterer must, of course, in selling meat, collect the necessary number of meat rationing stamps from the purchaser, whether he be a consumer or retailer. These stamps will be turned over to the War Price and Rationing Board.

Editor's Note: In addition to the above we also are including the following statements contained in a late release from E. H. Wade, chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board, pertaining to this same subject:

"Many farmers—even those who operate on a very small scale—produce some of the foods included in the new ration program for the use of their families." Mr. Wade pointed out. "Although the new plan places no official restrictions on the use of any of these foods at the farmer's own table, the Government is requesting that farm families retain red stamps in their family ration books in an amount equal in point value to the foods produced and eaten at home.

"A farmer who slaughters a pig he raised for the use of his family, for example, is asked to set aside point stamps equal in point value to the number of points he would have to surrender if he bought the equivalent amount of pork and pork products at the store. Similarly, if he makes butter for the use of his family he is requested to keep in his book and otherwise not use the number of red stamps he would need to buy the same amount of butter.

"When a farmer sells any of these home-produced foods he must collect ration stamps from his customers—even if they are neighbors—on the basis of official point prices, and turn these stamps in to the Office of Price Administration. Farmers will be instructed later on just when and how to turn in these stamps."

We've all got to "dig in" on the Food Front

IN our national emergency transportation space is precious. Every foot of space that's saved means just that much more room for vital materials of war. So the production of food near centers of consumption has taken on national importance.

You, the American people, can "dig in" and help by starting Victory Gardens now, and by seeing to it that they are really productive.

You can help your country, you can help the railroads, and you can also help yourself by cutting down your food bills and making your ration stamps go further.

Victory Gardens can make more food available for military needs and foreign shipments. And they can make a major contribution to the "battle of transportation." Our patriotic gardeners will have many of their fresh vegetable needs satisfied right from their own backyards!

We, the railroads, will go on "digging in" by moving, fast and efficiently, the incredible quantities of food needed for our armed services, for our allies, for lend-lease shipments, and for millions on the home front.

What's more, we'll keep on moving the equipment, tools, fertilizer, and other supplies our hard-pressed farmers need to meet the staggering farm quotas for 1943.

And we'll continue to get the greatest possible service out of every piece of railroad equipment—through careful management and the splendid cooperation of railroad workers and shippers.

It's up to you and to us. Let's all "dig in."

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

IN letter after letter from war plants and factories, managers write in to tell how important they consider Coca-Cola in providing energy-giving refreshment for workers... in helping output and morale. Of course, workers in war plants welcome a rest-pause... with ice-cold Coca-Cola to make it the pause that refreshes.

Ice-cold Coca-Cola quenches thirst. But it goes further to add pure, wholesome refreshment that you feel and enjoy. Made with a finished art, Coca-Cola has a taste all its own... a goodness you always welcome.

Popularity with war-workers has made Coca-Cola the symbol of the rest-pause. And remember: only The Coca-Cola Company produces Coca-Cola.

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for an ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things... a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

A breathing spell, a rest-pause and ice-cold Coca-Cola. Contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

The best is always the better buy!

Red And Gun

About seventy of the stalwart attended the big meeting of the Pocahontas County Rod and Gun Club at the Grade School lunch room last Friday night. The good supper was served by the P. T. A. A good time was had by all.

Senator Allen, as president, called the figures. He and Delegate McElwee spoke on legislation affecting conservation enacted at the last legislative session, and the proposed legislation which was properly killed.

Game Protector Lewis Gay spoke on this season's planting of fish; more and bigger than usual. A recent rule makes it necessary for a game protector to be with every truck putting out fish. This so often interrupts with the regular work of game protection. Some 50 head of deer were placed by both the Cranberry and Little River protected areas. In speaking about deer, Mr. Gay said that in the nine years he has served, the annual State kill has increased from 142 in 1932 to over 1500 in 1942. He said to keep out of all waters for fishing and bait catching from April 30, to June 26, except designated trout streams.

Dr. Hamrick spoke upon the privilege of club members to interest land owners in planting blight resistant Chinese chestnut trees.

District Ranger Marks spoke upon the relation of forests to fishing and hunting, and asked cooperation in keeping down fires.

Hatchery Superintendent Adkinson gave detailed report of successful rearing of trout of legal size now being distributed. His style is being considerably cramped by a shortage of food.

L. O. Simmons, entertained in pantomime with fishing and hunting skits of personal application to members present.

The Pocahontas County Rod and Gun Club is the oldest organization of its kind that I know of anywhere. It has exerted great influence in conservation in West Virginia. It is needed more than ever before, and that the Club is strong and able for whatever comes is proven by the number and quality of the men present Friday night.

The Club went on record advocating the appointment of Frank K. Johnston of Hillsboro, to the State Conservation Commission from the Second Congressional District.

Field Artillery. We hope to show them how accurate and effective the F. A. can be by firing a few feet over their heads, and letting the projectiles explode a few hundred feet in front of them. This is quite a thrill for anyone who has not seen it, but becomes an old story to us. We always get a big laugh out of watching their reactions, whether it may be run, fall to the ground or just turn white.

Fort Benning, is near Columbus, Georgia, which is approximately 110 miles south of Atlanta and right on the Alabama line.

The officers of the unit we are replacing are giving us a party tomorrow night, but I will not get to go as it is my turn to be O. D. (officer of the day). It seems as if I always make the free drinks. Send me the Times to the following address and if you run out of wooden nickels I will send you a dollar worth for a new subscription.

Lieutenant J. W. Shinaberry, 244th F. A. Bn., Fort Benning, Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Odie S. Wood-dell, of Greenbank, have three sons in the service, and here are letters from them. Another son, Guy, is now in the last enlistment in the 18 year old class. Incidentally, Mr. and Mrs. Wooddell have a family of twelve children—nine sons and three daughters.

Pearl Harbor, T. H. March 24, 1943.

Dear Mother, I have nothing much to do at the present time so will scratch you a few lines to let you know I am still kicking.

Mother, I am sending some money home and if you or Dad need any of it, take it, but if you don't want it will you send it to the bank for me.

How is Dad feeling now? I had a letter from Junior and he said he was not feeling so well. Mother, I want you to get Hiner's address for me. I would like to write to him.

Mother, do you think there is any chance of me getting a small farm around there some where. I have a good chance to buy a 200 acre in Oklahoma for a very low price but I would rather get something around there some.

Well, I will have to go to work so will finish tomorrow.

Will try and finish your letter.

I heard that Bob was going to the army. I wonder if he is going to like it any better than Hoyt does. Well, well, close for this time.

Your mean boy, Styl.

April 6, 1943.

Dear Mother: Now that I have settled down will drop you a few lines. We left Ohio Saturday about 3 o'clock and got here Sunday at 12:30. It sure is hot down here. The sand is about 4 inches deep all around the camp. The only green things are the few trees around here.

They put me in the Infantry which I did not want, but I think I will like it. We have a good Sergeant. Did you get any clothes and that hand bag? And did you get those papers I mailed you?

I am sending a dollar home for you to send that roll of films I took to Meritt and have them developed and send some of them to me. Also get my swimming suit out of the lower dresser drawer in the lower room and send it to me.

Go down and get Bob G's address and send it to me. Shorty McLaughlin and Randolph Bledsoe are here in the same camp but are in a different Company.

How are Dad and the rest of you feeling by now? If any mail comes for me put it in another envelope and send it to me.

How are the mules working now and do they still fight?

Well, as news is scarce I will close. Do not worry about me for I will come out all right.

It was cold when we left Ohio and when we got here it was not as cold. Oh yes, send me Roy Keirn's address.

Will close. Your son, Bob.

Pvt. Robert M. Wooddell, Co. D, 264th Infantry, A.P.O. 454, Camp Blanding, Fla.

Dear Mother, I will try and write you a few lines to let you know I am still alive and getting along fine. It is pretty cold here and dusty but I like it much better than where we were. We have better barracks to sleep in and better eats. We have a large dining room that seats about 2000 people and it sure is swell. The only thing I don't like about this camp is that it is built in the woods and you can't see out. We have a blackout every night. We have blackout curtains in the barracks.

I sure wish I could get off long enough to come down and see you all and my wife. It is awful lone some staying away from her. I have a swell job driving the officers around in a '42 Ford. I have a swell time doing it. I do not know how long we are going to be here. We cannot go out to town or anywhere. It is a stationery camp. I don't know if you can read this or not as I am writing on the steering wheel of the car. We are 30 miles north of Boston, Massachusetts.

Well, I had better close for this time. Will write more later.

Answer soon. With love, Hoyt. P.F.C. H. S. Wooddell, 25577560 Co. D, 489th Port Bn., T. C., Camp Myles Standish, Mass.

FIELD NOTES

I kind of half way wanted to kill a robin bird the other snowy morning. Coming by the residence of Clyde Waugh a robin was out on the paved street picking up fish worms. On his leg was a metal band. I knew the sign—somebody, somewhere, sometime had tagged the bird. If I could get hold of that band without killing the bird, to read the number, I would send it down to the Biological Survey at Washington. They would thank me, and tell me who where and when of the marking of this particular bird. This bird banding business has become widely spread the last few years, and by it much has been learned of birds; particularly as regarding migratory flights. If that bird with the band hangs around here this summer, I am liable to waste some time trying to catch him. Deed I would not harm a feather of his precious little head, though I do want to know what the band would tell of his life history, so bad I can taste it? I have my doubts about this robin being a native. I think he must just be a sojourner, stopping down during his migratory flight to weather the snow storm of last Thursday morning and to take his fill of fresh worms. This surmise is made because I know of no bird banding in this town for quite a number of years. The last bird tagging done here was on chimney swifts.

A few years ago I went hunting one day in the mountains east of the Greenbrier River. The time was late November and there had been snow and a bitter cold snap. That year there were heavy crops of wild grapes, dogwood, gum and other berries. In spite of the lateness of the season, the forest was literally alive with chirping robins by the thousand. They were gorging on the forest fruits, bathing in the fished runs and rivulets, and romancing a round generally. Our own robins has cleared out many weeks before, so I guessed these birds had come from much farther north, and stopped off on their annual flight south, to stay as long as the plentiful supply of food lasted. Sure I got no game that day. I was too intent on looking for a robin with a band on his leg. I found such a one, I reckon I would have blasted out his innocent little life in the cause of scientific research.

For two years band running, there had been a pied robin down in our part of the town. I looked out this spring for this robin of unusual markings, but not finding him, I put him down among the missing. The other day, Mrs. Nancy McNeel Currence brought the word the pied robin was to be seen around her residence near the Court House.

The other snowy day Everett G. Herold, Jr., drove through a flight of hundreds and hundreds of robins down on the road up Stony Creek. The paved road was bare of snow, and there were fishing worms crawling across in their springtime romancing. Those birds barely knew enough to get out of the way of the car.

Talking about birds, I guess a flyer was spoofing me when he said that in flying blind through cloud for great distances it was hard to tell whether the plane was right side up or not. Also, that birds flying in such clouds were often similarly affected; that had passed cloud-bound fisher birds, weighing their way on their natural migratory beam, upside down. When they come Quietly, behind the scenes, the great battle of war-production financing is being fought and won. America's banks are in the forefront of this vital war activity. A survey recently made by the American Bankers Association shows that 421 of the nation's 15,000 banks have already loaned more than $1 billion dollars for war production. The total for all banks meet such astronomical figures. These billions spell Victory for our cause—disillusionment and defeat for our enemies. If you need funds, by all means apply here.

Funeral Services

Mrs. Katherine Lucy Wessing Brindle, aged 67 years, wife of Eustace Brindle, died at her home near Buckeye on April 14, 1943, from a stroke of paralysis suffered a few hours before. The day before her death she had spent the day with friends in Marlinton.

On Friday afternoon funeral service was held from the Upper Church on Swago, by her pastor, Rev. J. C. Wool, interment in the family plot in Mount View Cemetery.

Mrs. Brindle is survived by her husband Eustace Brindle, and a son, Thomas. For many years she had been a professing, consistent Christian, a member of the Presbyterian Church. Her departure will be felt by a large circle of neighbors; her assistance and sympathy was ever available to all in time of sickness and distress.

D. H. Phillips, aged about 45 years, died at his home in Hinton on Monday, April 19, 1943. On Wednesday afternoon his body was laid to rest in the family plot in Mt. View Cemetery. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Christine Waugh of Marlinton, and their two daughters, Betty and Catherine.

Lucy Mann, colored, aged about 43 years, died at her home in Marlinton on April 18, 1943. Her body will be buried at Seebert Wednesday afternoon. The deceased was a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth James Mann of Cass. A brother died at Beckley a few weeks since.

Mrs. Amanda Virginia Mays, aged 84 years, widow of the late William W. Mays, of Niagara Falls, New York, died at the home of her son-in-law, William Coffey, at 240 Bird Avenue, Buffalo, New York, on Friday evening, April 9, 1943, after a short illness of pneumonia. She was born on May 4, 1859 in Lewis County, West Virginia.

Funeral services were conducted in Buffalo, on Monday afternoon, by her pastor, the Rev. J. W. Annis, with interment in the beautiful Riverside Cemetery at Niagara Falls, New York, by the side of her husband.

Mrs. Mays is survived by two sons and five daughters: Cameron Mays, William Mays, Jr., Mrs. Ruth Coffey, Mrs. Helen Moore, and Mrs. Pearl Rutz, of Niagara Falls; Mrs. Ethel Pitt, of 241 Bird Avenue, Buffalo; and Mrs. Myrtle Moore, of Marlinton, West Virginia. One daughter, Mrs. William Coffey preceded her in death some two years ago. Also surviving are 17 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. Five grandsons and one granddaughter are doing their part in the various branches of the military service.

Mrs. Mays was a consistent Christian, a member of the Presbyterian church. She was a true and faithful wife, a loving and devoted mother, and a good neighbor and friend. The high esteem in which she was held, both by family and friends, was manifested by the profuse and beautiful flowers and the tender expressions of sympathy expressed on every side. "Grandma Mays" as she was affectionately called aided the war effort to the best of her ability by knitting for the Red Cross, a task she delighted in.

Thus it marked the passing of a truly beautiful life. The death of an Aged Friend: You are not dead—Life has but set you free! Your years of life were like a lovely song.

The last sweet poignant notes of which, held long. Passed into silence while we listened, we Who love you, listened still expectantly! And we about whom you moved among

Would feel that grief for you was surely wrong— You have but passed beyond where we can see. For us who knew you, dread of age is past! You took life, tip toe, to the very last; It never lost for you its lovely look; You kept your interest in its thrilling book; To you Death came, no conqueror, in the end— You merely smiled to greet another Friend!

Mrs. Sula Moore Gibson, aged about 75 years, died at her home in Marlinton early Wednesday morning, April 21, 1943. She was the widow of the late John D. Gibson, of Elk. Their children are French and Mince Edmond and Lucille Gibson. Mrs. Gibson was a daughter of the late William Moore.

No plans for funeral service have been announced at this paper is printed.

Leonora

Leonora straightened the objects on her desk with great care. She had put her desk at the end of her room looking out the door so that when her mother came in she would have to cross the whole room under Leonora's stern executive eye to get to her. From movies and pictures in the newspaper Leonora had gotten a good idea of how the desk of a busy woman of affairs should look.

With an important scowl, Leonora picked up a sheet of paper. Now she was two people—herself, the busy woman, and her own stenographer. "Miss Simpson, take a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, will you?" she murmured under her breath.

"Yes, immediately," she murmured back at herself. Leonora cleared her throat and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Miss Simpson's hand over the sheet of paper hanging on the words about to fall.

"Dear Mr. Morgenthau," "Got that?" "Yes, madam."

"I am—ahem—thirteen years old and anxious to be of all possible service to the country at this time, ahem!"

"I earn a weekly income of from $1.75 to $2.12 by helping with the housework and by shovelling snow. I am at present in possession of one War Savings Bond and am buying stamps weekly. I want to become a member of the 10 percent Club. I feel it to be—ahem—not only my duty, but my privilege! ("How do you spell privilege?" asked Miss Simpson. FIELD NOTES

Dear Mr. Price:

I am a member of the Report Garden Club and at our last meeting our club president read an article from The West Virginia Garden News, stating that every club in West Virginia will want to have part in the adoption of a State Bird and each club is requested at their next meeting to discuss the matter, choose a bird to recommend, and forward the recommendation to A. B. Brooks, chairman of the state club committee on Birds, Buckhannon, W. Va. He will summarize the information and through the West Virginia Garden Club, endeavor to have the matter presented in proper form to the present Legislature for action.

Since November 1942 our Garden Club along with the other clubs of West Virginia have recognized the Tufted Titmouse as our State Bird. Our club's expression is under the impression that the Tufted Titmouse was recognized officially as a State Bird in 1939.

Our Garden Club cannot understand why there has been so much controversy concerning the Titmouse as a State Bird. One of our club members recommended reading an article which you had written on the subject a few years back. I have failed to find the article mentioned in my back numbers of the Pocahontas Times. Therefore, knowing your knowledge of birds I am taking the privilege of asking your opinion concerning the Tufted Titmouse and if you think it should become or should not become our State Bird, stating reasons. I am not too familiar with the Titmouse, although I believe it is found throughout the State.

Mrs. Ruth Dilley-Martin, Rupert, W. Va.

Dear Mr. Martin: I thank you for your letter. However, this tufted titmouse business has a sour note to me. In fact it hangs over my head like the dead albatross hung on the neck of the Ancient Mariner. This is how come. Four years from the Army. He is stationed at Camp Harding, Louisiana. He has seen eight months of service.

Sergeant Edward Keith Hudson has returned to Camp Claiborne, Louisiana, after spending a ten day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hudson at Greenbank.

Sunday evening, April 18, 1943.

Dear Cal: Just a line from two Pocahontas Hillbillies or West Virginia Snakes and damn proud to be one. We are across the continent but still hold Pocahontas in highest esteem. We are getting along the best in the world, with plenty to eat, and to be sure plenty of sleep, but no women. We get up in the morning at 5:30 eat show at six, and then start drilling. You may not have to be a man to get in the Marines, but you sure have to be one to stay in them. We have the finest officers and non-commissioned officers in the Service.

We have plenty of recreation along with work, and every afternoon about 3 o'clock we get the wash day blues. We have boys of every size, shape and description, and not to be bragging but they are a real bunch of boys. We have one platoon of Navaho Indians and they will make one tough bunch of leathernecks.

Cal, I guess we will have to do a little bragging on your paper. It sure has a wide circulation, from the east coast to the west, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. We just wonder if you still have that old mother on the shelf or if you have taken it. Goodbye to Fourth Page and the matter of the State Bird was before the Legislature. The motion was to adopt the tufted titmouse. There was a lot of discussion. One day I was short of something to talk and write about and I was to address the sort of a gathering in Charleston as well as to get out the weekly issue. It was a case of any port in time of storm. Just like I rushed in where I should dare not tread. I strung together a lot of misinformation along with some cheap wisecracks about the titmouse. Other papers took it up, the Legislature backed off, and no bird was adopted. Naturally I am thoroughly ashamed of my bragging.

There is no sweeter, more modest bird than the tufted titmouse, with his nice, retiring ways. His food habits are right for his size here the whole year through, and in every part of the State. Titmice are much more numerous than the average person thinks. So retiring and modest is he, many a casual observer has gone through life without taking notice of him.

A common name for the titmouse is tomtit. "When the matter of making him our State bird was up, I faked a holy horror over the possibility that our West Virginia might be tagged the Tomtit State if we adopted him.

While I do not remember all I said and wrote, I do recall that I could not reconcile the sweet, modest, retiring ways of the tufted titmouse as emblematic of the forthright pushing ways characteristic of us West Virginia mountaineers. Much more to the point is the forthright growl and the blatant jay bird.

History repeats. I recall the unsuccessful efforts of the late Dr. Benjamin Franklin to have the wild strutting turkey gobbler adopted as our national emblem bird.

"I am ready to back off, after damage has been done, and vote for the Tufted Titmouse as our State Bird. I now ask that my friend Dr. A. B. Brooks, is exactly right in that we must hold before us as an emblem what we should strive to be rather than what we are, if we are to grow in grace.

Anyway, whatever Dr. Brooks says is right. Whenever I have failed to follow his lead, I have gone dead wrong. When he says Tufted Titmouse should be our State Bird, I now ask for Tomtit too.

Carl Slavin says robins have no sense. He proves it by two particular instances under his observation. Last year a robin built her nest under a water spout. It got flooded out. This year back she came to the same place. Carl got himself some sticks to raise the nest up, and then he fitted in a piece of tin to shed the water off. He let it go at that, in hopes the rain would not be too much. Last week with the little robins half grown came a big cold rain. The nest got wet and the little birds perished. The second instance was a robin which attempted to put her nest in an exposed, windy place on a neighbor's house. Three times in one day the beginnings of the nest were blown away. Mr. Slavin observed that the nest was blown down ten times before the site was abandoned. Personally I still hold that robins in general have fore-knowledge like a hog, and these two are mere exceptions to prove the rule.

Edwin Buzzard was in from the Williams last Friday. Dogs raided his flock of sheep and killed at least twenty head. Wolf-like the dogs cut the throats of the sheep, eating none of them.

Mr. John D. Gibson

Mrs. Susie Moore Gibson, aged 74 years, widow of the late John D. Gibson, died at her home in Marlinton, on Wednesday, April 21, 1943. She had been in failing health for some time; the immediate cause of death was a heart attack. On Friday afternoon her body was laid to rest in the family plot in Mt. View Cemetery. The service was conducted from the Presbyterian Church by her pastor, Rev. James C. Wool. A part of the service was the reading of passages of Scripture she had marked and dated through the years in her Bible.

The flower bearers were Ber Gladwell, Alice Waugh, Pearl Carter, Margaret McLaughlin, Lois Jean Wagner, Maude Bumgardner, Ginger Grimes, Rosa Lee Menger, Isabelle Pritchard, Bly Dever, Irene McLaughlin, Clara Ware, Annabelle McElwee, Alice Dever, Anna Thomas, Edgar Thomas, Fannie Overholt.

Active pall bearers, J. Z. Johnson, Eric Clutter, Mack Brooks, Raymond Shrader, Arnout Yeager, Paul Overholt, Dice Grimes, Arden Killingsworth.

Honorary pall bearers, J. A. Sydenstricker, Senator Fred C. Allen, R. B. Slaven, E. H. Patterson, Harlow Waugh, B. B. Williams, Clyde Wagner, Calvin W. Price.

Mrs. Gibson was the daughter of the late William D. and Hannah Beverage Moore. Of her father's family there remain her two sisters, Mrs. Samuel D. Gibson, of Elk, and Mrs. Emmett Lightner, of Mt. Grove.

She became the wife of the late John D. Gibson, who preceded her twenty-seven years ago. To this union were born five children, two of them dying in infancy. Surviving their parents are Edna, Lucille and French Gibson.

Thus is noted the passing of a truly good woman, whose children arise and call her blessed.

it in, but I saw the remains of a fine bald eagle the other day. I know the bald eagle is now protected by the Federal Government.

defense of property is an older law. This eagle and his mate raided a flock of sheep and killed three lusty young lambs before one of them could be shot. The other made off, to kill another day. This was a young eagle, fully grown with a wing spread of fully six feet. I placed his age at three years. His head was just beginning to be white, but his back and tail were still dark. I was particularly interested in the marking of this eagle; there were bands of faint brown on his tail feathers like the picture showed on the eagle which attacked the little girl in Washington last year.

Howard Ray was down from Buffalo Mountain last Friday. He said a big bear had raided the ranch on the Virginia side of the Allegheny one night last week and killed nine head of sheep. The next night he came back and killed two more. A hunt for him was on Friday.

Stirred to hysteria by a high power sports writer in the Beckley paper, a rod and gun club in Raleigh County is the fence to raise money for costs of a lawsuit to close down two million-dollar industrial plants on the upper Greenbrier River. Behind the scenes a pulling of the wires on pandering politicians, fawning writers and dumb cluck sports are coal smudged plutocrats with selfish hearts blacker than the honest dark of fuel pits.

It appears that come August vacation time the Raleigh seekers after pleasure, at what ever cost to others, would find make their dusky bodies lily white by a soak in the limped waters of the Greenbrier. To facilitate such annual bathing ceremonies, out of the fat surplus from overestimated incomes these plutocrats have built for themselves elaborate summer play houses of cedar on our river. Though far more sumptuous than even the dreams of an honest laboring man for a home, such are mere out houses to their owners. For a surcease of a few weeks from their every night of riotous living following days of steady grind at clipping coupons, these men with soft hands and hard faces, would leave their beds of ivory for a season of the simple life along the banks of the Greenbrier. There they would soak the grime from behind ears, the coal smut from skin pores and the dregs and cinders of high living from body cells. They would answer the call of the wild, but not with the old care free play of joy, to wit, Yellowbelly, Yellowbelly, let us take a swim! Yes, by golly, when the tide comes in! With a flip flop flip off the old dead end, and the last one in is a "big boy".

Ab, no; nothing so lovely and pastoral as that when the "baro" would besport himself by taking to the water for his annual swim. Six months before the appointed time, he would see that the wheels of industry were stopped a hundred and sixty miles upstream in order that by no chance there be any taint of vegetable stain in the water he chances to contact with his grimy body.

No matter that wages at the rate of a million dollars every twelfth month be dried up at their source, no matter that the living of half a thousand families be put in jeopardy by mere whim for a swim; no matter that essential war supplies of leather be curtailed. The soldiers of George Washington went barefoot in the snows of New Jersey. Let Eisenhower's men go solesless on the sands of Sahara; we've made our pile; let those investments in tanneries on the Greenbrier go hang—we want to swim in August.

The working of the soft suckers in the rod club is not their first cunning move to hamstring public works for private pleasure. They approached the Conservation Commission with the spurious plea that the vegetable stain was injurious to fish life. There they were men with data from scientific research over the years showing this was not true; that the fishing in the Greenbrier was fully as good as its chief tributary, Knappa Creek, on which there are no industries.

The next approach was to the Health Department. With the lives of people down stream to protect, and the interests of at least four, big, teeming summer school camps to safe guard, the Health Directors had the results of many years of investigation and research to prove the discoloration from vegetable stain at the waste wash waters from tanneries was least objectionable of all sewerage from a health standpoint.

The next step was a bill to be passed by the legislature, setting aside one river, the Greenbrier, in all of West Virginia, for pleasure and pleasure alone, so the Raleigh county maggots could take their summer swim without fear of contaminating lily white skins and sheer silk panties. Patently unconstitutional and wholly un-American, you must go back a thousand years in history to find anything as high handed—the King and his courtiers depopulating whole country-sides for to range deer for the idle rich to chase. Senator Allen and Delegate McElwee saw to it that such outrageous legislation was nipped in the bud. For such public service, these faithful stewards were castigated in public prints in polluted verbiage comparable to the worst stuff flowing in the sewer. These birds did not take kindly to being told to first clean up their own Flaky River, whose waters are so polluted with sulphurous wastes from coal mines as to take the taste off of any hop head venturing therein at opening time.

The cliff now is to resort to law courts. They evidently have a slick attorney, for the previous day I was informed, I am told, that suit is not to be started until the discoloration reaches to the lower stretches of the Greenbrier.

This suit, if ever started, will be tried in a court of law, and not in the columns of this paper. However, we all up here are prepared for them to lay on whenever they get good and ready. For forty years these industries have been established here. They have exercised due care in the disposal of their waste waters. Gauges have been established at Durbin and Buckeye to register the flow of the stream and show percentage of waste water which can be taken in without undue discoloration. This, too, in addition to the regular and systematic tests carried out through the years by the conservation and health authorities. I say again we are ready for these idle birds, bad as we hate to have good people stirred up on both ends of the line by a nuisance lawsuit.

Maybe I have written too much already, but I can not refrain from adding as a last sour note to the lily white buffit who seek to confiscate one huddled and sixty miles of river for a few weeks of personal pleasure, that if the waters of the Greenbrier were magic to wash away their sins, I would greatly prefer to take my summer bath above their swimming place.

"They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money"

Will Americans Be More Tender With Their Money Than Lives of Their Sons

Washington, D. C.—A blunt challenge—whether Americans will be more tender with their money than with the lives of their sons—confronts U. S. citizens as they prepare to meet the appeal of the government to put an additional $3 billion dollars into the fight in the next three weeks.

American dollars which run off to some "cozy" shelter to hide while American boys are dying to defend our cities and towns from destruction and invasion will face a rising demand from all classes of patriotic citizens to come out and fight.

Millions of workers who now are buying War Bonds regularly out of current income must lend extra money to their government during the Second War Loan campaign (which started April 12).

In recognition of the spirit of sacrifice which is sweeping over the land as our troops swing into offensive action in Africa and await the signal for a landing in Europe, the Treasury Department is offering a series of government bonds to fit every pocketbook.

No matter whether Americans buy the familiar Series E Bonds or 2 1/2 per cent bonds or 2 per cent bonds certificates, they will be doing their part to make the Second War Loan drive a success.

Consumer Spending Too High.
Consumer spending in 1942 was much too high to meet the war situation of 1942. Last year more than $3 billion dollars of our soaring national income went to feed the desires of Americans for clothes, recreation, foods and luxuries. As these items grow scarcer, more of our income must be diverted from such expenses into government bonds.

During 1942 millions of our fathers, sons, relatives and friends were in training here and abroad. Some were already in action. Casualties were beginning to bite into every community. War Bonds became a vital link between the home and fighting fronts.

Today sacrifice has become a way of life for America's fighting men. Civilian life in the 1942 scale must go out the window if the home folks are to attempt to match the heroism of our boys at the front.

No every American can take his place in a bomber or in a foxhole or on a fighting ship but he can fire away at the enemy by lending money to the government.

British Army Cooks Now

Burn Clay With Coal

LONDON.—Army cooks of the southeastern command in Britain are required to burn "cakes" as part of the drive against waste. It is reported in London.

The ingredients are three parts coal to one of clay, moulded into cakes and baked in an oven. Thrown on the fire the cakes burn almost as well as ordinary coal.

SWEETWATER, TEXAS.—Mineral-rich west Texas is offering another raw material for national defense—celestite.

Celestite, also known as strontium, is used for flares. Formerly used in fireworks, the mineral burns with brilliant red flame.

A survey made by the University of Texas, reveals that a deposit of celestite runs east and west through Nolan county.

Village Blacksmith Was

No. 1 Citizen in 1653

LANCASTER, MASS.—When this village was incorporated in 1653, citizens wanted to name it after a popular local blacksmith.

In answering the permission petition the state legislature decided: "Whereas no town of the Colonies has as yet been named for any governor; and whereas it were unseemly that a blacksmith be honored ahead of his betters, the name Precott cannot be permitted."

Irate villagers evaded the issue by naming their community in honor of Lancaster, England.

Food from Our Valley

The part Greenbrier Valley is to play in the home front battle against the shortage of food, must be decided within the next few weeks. Farmers who have the good land, heretofore utilized for pasture, grains and roughage crops in the production of livestock almost exclusively, by this time recognize that they, too, must lend a hand to the production of vegetable crops to meet the emergency now evident and certainly to become worse before the coming growing season gets under way.

Unbelievable as it may seem, bluegrass pastures, wheat and corn and hay fields must yield some of these acres to the production of potatoes, beans, tomatoes, onions, cabbage, sweet potatoes, carrots, etc., if millions are to be fed through another war year—the middle of 1944.

Today's shortage is entirely due to the failure of planning in February, 1942.

Last year through facilities provided by the West Virginia Department of Agriculture, with the cooperation of business men and farmers and local financing, an experiment was set up in the Valley counties which provided a marketing depot for the handling of local fruits, vegetables, eggs, poultry—most all farm products. Incorporated as the Greenbrier Valley Farm Products Marketing Association, the depot was established in one of the State Fair Buildings. It was a non-profit organization, and operated from June to December. During that period the equivalent of twenty-nine carloads of products were sold for farmer-producers of this area. It was a success beyond any hopes of the promoters; it proved that vegetables of the staple varieties could be produced and marketed profitably, and that in time would develop a new industry and a new income for the region's productive soil, and also it would do something which all prosperous and progressive agricultural sections must eventually come to: diversification of farm industry, diversification of income, and more extended utilization of the soil.

Today's most important truth proves that here for acre no greater service can be rendered the war effort of the United States to relieve the food shortage for civilians, to feed and supply eleven million Americans in the armed forces and to relieve starving millions of friendly foreigners, than to turn the grain rows of many Greenbrier Valley fields to potatoes, beans, tomatoes, onions, cabbage, sweet potatoes, carrots. Production such as this means quick food in June and all the summer months. It means also that acres of this food can be provided for canning, drying and storing for next winter.

It is not intended that this home canning, drying and storing is to be done by the farm folks. Farm families have always amply taken care of their winter food needs.

To do the most for the food shortage, save tin for the war effort; relieve the railways of transportation for the food crops to be produced here for the professional man's wife, the public official's wife in Charleston, the industrial worker's wife in South Charleston, the housewives of those who live along the Kanawha Valley's chemical and mining region to home can, dry and store

the most winter. The coal miners' wife in Western Greenbrier, in Beckley, Winding Gulf and on far off as the Pocahontas fields of the Norfolk and Western section, doubtless realize by now that they, too, must can and dry and store the vegetable foods which this Valley is capable of producing in almost unlimited quantities.

The war job of Greenbrier Valley is not chemical, forging, guns, tank, planes, ships and munitions; the millions engaged in this work have no lands should have little time for the production of food even from a 5X4 garden.

Our job in Greenbrier Valley is an even more vital war job than those we must feed, for without us there can be no war work, no war munitions, no army to bring us victory.

The farmer is the custodian of the land, from whence food comes. Greenbrier Valley has been blessed with good land, and like other good land areas from coast to coast should have been converted long ago to its war job. If there was a plan, it was lost, but even now it is not too late to save the food situation in the country.

By mid-summer fifty per cent of the nation's peacetime industry will have been converted to war industry. This was not done overnight, nor was it done without some reluctance and misgivings as to how will labor and materials be provided?

The flow of millions of automobiles for business and joy-riding was cut off almost overnight. One by one American industrial plants were changed; re-tooled, re-fitted, turned around, shuffled, and then tuned to one mighty chorus to win the war, bring victory.

Almost too late, but now we know the truth: the cry for food is racing back and forth across America. There is a critical shortage of food, the magnitude of which will develop all too quickly. Doubtless this food shortage will be felt on the score of battle fronts where American soldiers since Pearl Harbor have searched the skies praying for our planes to come, praying for our battle fleet to show up. In early days of Guadalcanal our Marines had three meals a day, then two, then one, and when things were darkest had to subsist on coconuts. Those resourceful Marines in a jungle hell, hungry, many with dysentery, practically out of food hours and days did not quit. With all this, when ammunition was flush, the Leathernecks would set barbed wire entanglements, traps in day time, then station machine guns aimed to rake the area. At night time the Japs would rush the Marine's position, but the wire—the machine guns would open up. All through the night this routine would continue. Next morning the exhausted Marines would signal the natives to clean up a job of laying out dead Japs by the hundreds—one time 1,300.

There is a job for everyone if we win this war. American industry has done a wonderful job so far—it must do more. The Marines, the Army, the Navy, and the American Air Forces are doing their jobs around the world. Our job here in this farming country is just as important. It is without glamor and excitement, but it is also without the range of bombs and bullets and the sight of war's carnage. We must get along with our job-work every hour of the day, spend many nights planning to produce more food.

The greatest local obstacle to the most winter. The coal miners' wife in Western Greenbrier, in Beckley, Winding Gulf and on far off as the Pocahontas fields of the Norfolk and Western section, doubtless realize by now that they, too, must can and dry and store the vegetable foods which this Valley is capable of producing in almost unlimited quantities.

Dear Dad: Since returning to Fort Benjamin Harrison I have been so busy trying to catch up on things that I have not found time to write. But am now getting things in pretty good shape again so will try to tell you a little about my trip.

I left Fort Benjamin Harrison at 8:00 P. M., April 1st, with 161 recruits and three sergeants for overland. I was the only officer. We had 6 pullman cars and a baggage car equipped for a kitchen. The berths were all made up so the men were in bed shortly after 10:00 P. M. We arrived in Chicago about 3:15 A. M., and they shifted us around the yards for about two hours, then we sat there for another four hours before leaving. From Chicago to Freeport, Illinois we were pulled on a local train of the Illinois Central. The rest of the way to the Coast we were pulled on a special train. We were on the I. C. from Chicago through Illinois and Iowa to Omaha, Nebraska.

We crossed the Mississippi River at Dubuque, Iowa. From Omaha, we were on the Rock Island Road, which went through the south eastern part of Nebraska and across the northern part of Kansas through Colby, and then into Denver, Colorado. The land all the way to Denver is rolling prairie land. However, the elevation rises to better than 8100 feet in Colorado, but you don't notice the climb very much. The city of Denver is 6000 feet elevation. Then the big Rockies rise up right behind the city. Before you get to Denver you get a good view of Pikes Peak, about 100 miles southwest.

We were in Denver for about an hour and I went up town and bought ice cream and milk for the troops. From there we traveled over the Union Pacific Railroad, which follows the old "Oregon Trail." We went through Greeley, Colorado at sunset. It sure is a pretty place. The town is laid out on the level, then the big snow capped mountains rise up behind the town on the west side. Greeley is where Jack Richardson and Reid Davis went to school.

From there we went to Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Pocatello and Boise, Idaho. This part of the country is mostly all desert; sand, rocks and sagebrush. From there we went into Oregon through overcome to find enough competent farm labor. It is time for national, state or local authorities to take this matter of farm labor into hand now before it is too late. It is our job to meet and solve this farm labor emergency, and get to work in the battle for food.

Industry was told to change over and produce the materials and munitions for war. The Marines were landed on Guadalcanal, told to take it and keep it; they kept it by killing Japs even though outnumbered. From the productive farms of America must come food—food for any future emergency. We must get to our job and win!

It is evident that for those who have productive land in Greenbrier Valley to wait for some agent to advise intelligently it will be too late to conquer the food shortage for another full year. However, here is a challenge for local farmers to face and accept now with the reservation that the following acreage quotas can be increased in the next 30 days. Will Greenbrier Valley farmers produce this order for food? Here it is:

- 100 acres snap beans of approved varieties;
- 100 acres of tomatoes of approved varieties;
- 150 acres of cabbage of approved varieties;
- 50 acres of sweet potatoes of approved varieties;
- 2,000,000 pounds (50,000 bags of 100 lbs) Irish potatoes; one third of crop to be held for winter storage approved varieties;
- 50 acres of onions; allocated to 200 farmers of 1-4-acre each; harvested dry for storage; use sets or southern plants;
- 100 acres of sweet corn (the yellow varieties only);

Planting to be made for continuous harvest during season, marketing each week of season.

The food production from the above acreage (and more) can be marketed through an agency established with almost unlimited outlet serving more than a million population.

the most winter. The coal miners' wife in Western Greenbrier, in Beckley, Winding Gulf and on far off as the Pocahontas fields of the Norfolk and Western section, doubtless realize by now that they, too, must can and dry and store the vegetable foods which this Valley is capable of producing in almost unlimited quantities.

I had everything in good shape so it only took me a short while to get rid of the troops and have my account audited. This credit was made at Fort Lawton.

I was back in Seattle by 6:30 P. M., had supper, made train reservations and left on the Empire Builder (G. N.) at 9:30 P. M. The only thing I could get was an upper berth but I did not mind. You don't have to change trains all the way from Seattle to Chicago, over 2800 miles.

Returning, we came through Spokane, Washington, the northern panhandle of Idaho, through White Fish, Montana, and Glacier National Park which is very pretty. I saw a lot of wild deer through this part of the country. They really use some big engines on the Railroad through the Rocky Mountains. Most of the trains are double headers.

The weather in Seattle was nice and spring was well along. They tell me that the temperature is about the same the year round. It rarely ever gets down to freezing but after you leave Seattle and get up in the mountains it is really cold and through Washington, Idaho and most of Montana the ground was still covered with snow. The G. N. railroad follows pretty close to the Canadian border to about the center of North Dakota, then it turns east to Fargo.

Floods were starting in North Dakota and I saw a number of houses in Fargo with just the roofs sticking out. Montana and North Dakota are known as the old "buffalo country" rolling land where the prairie grass grows 3 feet high. Although the temperature sometimes gets down to 40 and 50 degrees below zero you see very few barns and they say the stock is fed in the open the year round. It is a dry cold I suppose.

From Fargo we came to Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minnesota; then crossed the Mississippi into Wisconsin; then south along the river to East Dubuque, Illinois; then east to Chicago, arriving at 8:45 A. M. Thursday. I got the "Penny" to Fort Wayne at 9:30 arriving at 1:00 P. M.

I had a three day lay over in Fort Wayne and was disappointed that Mom was not there. I returned to Indianapolis Monday afternoon. I traveled 5400 miles and was on the train for seven days straight with the exception of about four hours in Seattle.

I had a letter from Mom yesterday saying she was having a nice visit with Margaret and the children. I plan to go home tomorrow for the weekend so I will have a little visit with Mom. I must close now. Write when you have a chance.

With love, Your son, Meade.

Dear Mr. Price: I am again subscribing to your paper. I enjoy its contents very much. It serves me as a source of information from home. The paper is always on time. It is two weeks later arriving from the published date, but that is to be expected. Inclosed is a money order for the coming year.

Mr. Price, I am getting along quite well here in Hawaii. It is not West Virginia by any means, but it is not a bad place to be stationed. Hawaii is just like any other place; it has its good and bad points.

In many ways the people of Hawaii are better off than our folks in the States. Gasoline and tires are about the only things rationed. Gin and beer are all that can be obtained in the way of hard drinks. There is food a plenty for everyone; even plenty of sugar and coffee. Shoes and other clothing have not been rationed as yet, though they are forward in the future to be rationed on clothing.

The Islanders are going back to the soil and are raising almost all the vegetables grown at home. The natives are very fond of fish, but they are very scarce on account of the fishing ships being tied up. The Japanese own most of the vessels and the government does not allow their operation.

Most of the people in Hawaii are connected with the war works, although you are many that have time to go "joy" riding on Sunday.

The members of the Armed Services, I think, like Hawaii in its way, but much of their time is spent thinking of the folks back home. A service man's two not likes are pay day and show, but mail from home is the most important thing to him. He may be slow in answering your letters, but don't let him down, keep writing. If he does not get mail regular his morale goes down and he is in one of the lowest of lows to get along with. I have lived with these men for about three years and I know.

I know that you and all the home folks are fighting a hard battle on the home front. The men appreciate everything being done, although they do not say much. One thing they have not liked was the many strikes.

Over here all of the branches of the Armed Service have been fighting as one body, although the Navy and the Army Air Corps have been carrying most of the weight. Everyone was doing his part. Everyone is still waiting for the Japs or any of his Allies. Hawaii could be taken; that is if the Japanese wanted to pay the price. I'll tell you Tojo's men wouldn't be the same if he did. They would be looking just like those peaceful Japs on Guadalcanal right now.

This is just a friendly letter from an admirer of yours.

Yours truly,

Frank Raymond Hayes.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy E. Dean, of Lobelia, received the following letter from their son, Harlan, in North Africa:

March 19, 1943.

Dearest Mother and all:

Will try to write again. I arrived in North Africa safely. There is not much to write about. The people here are Arabs and they dress in big shawls and when an unmarried woman sees a man she covers her face. They are real dark and some of them have beards. So I don't think the girls back home will have to worry about we boys going with some one else. I saw several with holes in their ears, and all their hair pulled out but a little bit on the back of their head. They live in huts made of straw or some kind of sticks. Some have better places to live.

They do their work with horses; some of them have donkeys. They have real nice gardens; they raise vegetables and fruits. When they want a smoke they say, "mokey." You cannot understand them.

We get plenty to eat but I could not eat much on the ship for I got pretty sick at first. We had good services on the ship, of course there was not but a few of us, and we were all Privates. Charles is here; but I have not seen him yet. Well, I will have to close. Do not worry about me for I am O. K. Just pray for me that I may get back.

With love and God-bless you all.

Your son, Harlan.

ty know that I still think of you. I get a real big kick out of the Pocahontas Times. I sure look forward to it every week and the rest of the boys like to read it too, especially the Field Notes. I hope everything back in Pocahontas is running smoothly.

It is raining here today and the mud is knee deep now. They had to close the road the mud got so bad. I sure would like to be back on a furlough. I see where several of the boys that left when I did have been back on a furlough, but I don't see any show of me getting back for some time.

My A.P.O. number has been changed. It is 476 now. I get my mail much quicker that way. Well, I guess I had better close as it is show time. You are do your part when you keep the Times rolling.

The same low-cost electricity that toasts your bread or runs your radio is now welding ships, weaving uniforms, fabricating airplane parts, and in scores of ways, making the tools for victory. Electricity in your home, compared to other necessities, has always been cheap... you are now enjoying rates that are below the national average. Hundreds of mines, factories and other businesses, after practical experience throughout the years, know that electric power is their biggest bargain.

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

WAR production needs are pressing. No time can be wasted on the job. Rest-pauses planned and timed are the efficient way to make every minute count. They lessen tension, break monotony, and increase output. Add refreshment to a rest-pause and you promote worker-contentment.

Ice-cold Coca-Cola is refreshment that does more than quench thirst. Drink it and you feel and enjoy a refreshing after-sense. Its clean, exciting taste always pleases, never tires. Coca-Cola offers something extra. All the difference between something real-ly refreshing and just something to drink.

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for an ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things... a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

You work better when you are contented on the job. Remember, contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

The best is always the better buy!

VOL. 60 NO. 21

MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, MAY 6, 1945

$1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Our Army and Navy Boys

Don C. McLaughlin, son of Mrs. Fannie McLaughlin, of Danvers, received his promotion to Staff Sergeant on April 2, 1945. He is stationed at Camp Campbell, Kentucky. This promotion has been earned by him by the demonstration of military qualities and proficiency in the performance of duties which he has evidenced.

Private William S. Perry has returned to his station in Florida, after spending a 10 day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Perry, of Renick. His father and two brothers came in from Maryland where they are working to be with him. His address is:

Private William S. Perry, (A.S.N. 2644711), Co. L, 190th Infantry, A.P.O. 30, Camp Bland, Florida.

Miss Minnie Fritz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fritz, of Millpoint, with the 44th WAAC Post Hq. Co., at Camp Atterbury, Indiana, has been promoted from Auxiliary to Technician 5th Grade according to an announcement received by this paper from the Public Relations Office, at Camp Atterbury, Indiana.

Paul Malcomb, is home from the Navy on furlough this week. He is now stationed at Cherry Point, North Carolina.

Corporal Arnold McClure is at home from the Army on furlough from the Army. He is stationed at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

P.F.C. Virgil H. Fowler, of the Army Air Corps, stationed at Mitchell Field, Long Island, New York, spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Fowler, of Hillsboro.

Private George Tacy, of the United States Army, was in on a nine day furlough last week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dales Tacy, of Cam. He has been stationed at Camp Meade, Florida, for the past five months.

Mrs. Elbert Fuller and Mrs. Carl Fritz have received a letter from their brother, P.F.C. Thomas C. Brown, who is serving with the American Army Over Sea. This is the first letter they have had from him in three months. They also have another brother, Harold R. Brown in the Army. He is stationed at Camp White, Oregon, and has been promoted to Staff Sergeant at Camp White, Oregon.

Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. Auxiliary Phyllis Lenore Sheets, daughter of Carl L. Sheets, of 67 Tenth Avenue, Marlinton, W. Va., who has been stationed at the Third Training Center of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps here, has been assigned to 117th W.A.A.C. Hq. Co., A. A. F., at Santa Ana Air Base, Santa Ana, California.

North Africa, April 5, 1945. Dear Sir: Will you please publish the following in the next issue of The Times. It would please me very much.

Staff Sergeant Charles Roman, Jr., while fighting in North Africa, was wounded on March 27, 1943. He is a former resident of Marlinton, having lived there the most of his life. He has recovered from his wound and is back on duty.

Staff Sergeant Robert M. Schumaker was wounded on March 25, 1943, while in action in North Africa. We have been here for six months.

Charles and I were with the 1st Division when they landed here and we have been on the fighting front ever since the landing.

Will you please publish this so my brothers and friends around there will know how I am. I was born in Campbelltown and lived there until I went into the Army in 1935.

Your friend and reader, St. Sgt. R. M. Schumaker.

Private Dayton Herold has returned to Stark General Hospital, Charleston, South Carolina, after spending a 10 day furlough with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Herold, of Knapps Creek.

P.F.C. L. H. Hively, Jr., of the Army, stationed at Chicago, Illinois, is spending a short furlough here with Mrs. Hively and their new daughter, Mina Alice, born on Friday, April 30, 1943, at the Pocahontas Memorial Hospital.

Fred Young, of the Navy, was home on a short furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Young, at Buckeye.

Page Johnson and Junior Anderson, of the Navy, have returned to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station after spending several days furlough here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Emory Anderson. They have finished their "boot" training and went back to be assigned to further duty.

The following is taken from letters received by Mrs. Luther Fowler, of Cam, from her son, Les Fowler, who is serving Overseas with the Navy:

March 6, 1943. Dear Mother: Will write you a few lines this evening. Hope this finds you all well. This leaves me O. K. with the exception of a bad cold. I had a letter from Ruth and she said there was an epidemic of whooping cough and mumps at home.

Hope Shirley and Dot don't get them. She said Dad was working in Baltimore. What is he working at there? Wilma McMillon wrote that you said you were not getting my mail. I don't know what is the matter for I write at least once and sometimes twice a week. I am sending you a money order. Please do the same with it as you did the others I sent. I have had one three day leave since we have been here and I get another one day after tomorrow.

March 15—Dear Mother: I will try and answer your letter I received yesterday. Glad you all were well. I am O. K. with the exception of a bad cold. I stood guard duty last week and it poured the rain down all the time. I was on duty and as soon as I got off duty I went on a three day leave and when I got back to camp I had this cold.

I have had two three day liberties and one thirty-six hour liberty. I would like to tell you all about our camp and the country here but it is impossible. The censorship here is very strict even about the weather. When Maxine got the letter I wrote her, will you ask her to let you read it.

Cigarettes are rationed here.

From Lt. Jack Preble

Somewhere in the Middle East April 14, 1943

Dear Cal: This morning I walked into our little headquarters and noticed a peculiar type of praying mantis, or "rear horse" on the screen. This immediately made me think of you. Now that doesn't sound right. I mean I thought you would be interested in my nature observations I might make while out here.

Many are the queer things one sees here. In addition to the mantis, which was about 3 inches long and the color of a green gage plum, we have a type of insect which looks like a mosquito, except he is shaped like a "Y". Now I am not fooling a bit. Each prong of the Y is about 3-4 of an inch long and the thickness of the lead in a pencil. The little beasties have 6 legs and when in a resting position have the tail of the Y on the ground, and the two upper parts, or the V, extended in the air.

Lizards are plentiful; little fat fellows about 8 or 10 inches long. Black and of a mottled green color. Plenty of wild ducks, mostly mallards; swallows and a type of bird that looks like a killdeer, except he whistles differently and works day and night.

I have seen three or four birds that made me think my eyes had deceived me. They were a little larger than our horned lark, but these critters had only one horn, or tuft of feathers, sticking straight up for about an inch and

We are only allowed to buy two packages a day. We were all issued rationing books to buy them with. Matches are also pretty hard to get. Please see if you can buy me a good cigarette lighter and send it to me. Please send it as soon as possible. If the postmaster says you can't send a package overseas tell him that only applies to the Army. If he tells you you can't register mail to anyone overseas he don't know what he is talking about for registered mail comes in here every day.

I am sending you two pictures of the fellows in my tent. They were taken the first place we were stationed. They were taken after we came in from work and if you take notice you will see that two of us don't have any shirts on so you can imagine how hot it was. I am also sending my cards for crossing the Equator and Date line.

Dear Mother: Received your letter three or four days ago. I hope this finds you all well; it leaves me well as usual. I have been writing one letter and sometimes two to you ever since we left the States. I am getting your mail O. K. now since you have been using the new address. It takes from two weeks to a month to get a letter from you. My address has been changed again and you will find the new one at the bottom of this letter.

We have moved from where we were stationed. We are now quartered with the Marines at a new destination. I like it here just fine. The weather here is just about like it was in the States. It seems rather chilly to us here now after being in a hot climate for so long. We still can not tell where we are.

I got a 36-hour liberty last weekend. This is certainly a real liberty place. All of the people here are just as nice to us as they can be. I think we will get a three day leave the last of this week. The town I went to on my 36-hour leave was just like New York.

Howard Wilfong told me in his letter he thought Jack Maude was in the Army. Is that right? Is "Spring" Galford still working in Connecticut or is he in the Army too? I guess everything is rationed back home, isn't it?

Answer real soon. Your son, Lee Fowler.

Mrs. P. W. Sharp received the following letter from her son, Austin, who is now in North Africa:

Dear Mom: Just a few lines to let you know that everything is O. K. with me and I hope it finds you all the same at home.

Well, Mom, it is not long until Mother's Day. Sure would like to be with you but since I cannot be all that I can say is that I am proud to say and know that I still have a "Dear Mother" in the United States and hope that she will never know of the horrors of war that some mothers are seeing in this war.

May God bless you and keep you forever. Your son, Anto.

resembling the horn of a rhinoceros. These birds have the same habit of the horned lark of the States—lying along in front of a car or truck until you almost overtake them.

Scorpions are supposed to be plentiful out here. Although I empty my shoes each morning I have failed to find a single one nor married ones either. Some thing scoted in front of the car last night that resembled a small ground hog, but I'm not sure just what he was. Saw one or two kangaroo rats hopping across the road, but they were too fast for me to observe closely.

This country is no place for a self-respecting West Virginia rattlesnake hunter such as I. All we have here is one of the most disappointing, bedraggled looking specimens of the snake family I have ever encountered. Oh, for a good old respectable Pocahontas County rattler. I would take off my hat to him. These mean looking varmints here are about waist long and have a dirty, scabby looking hide with scales roughly keeled, and a faint pattern on back I didn't care to make out. On their head they wear 2 horns (everything seems to have horns here), and their baleful eyes are the color of pale greenish-yellow glass, faintly flecked with brass. The elliptical pupil of the eye is a mere slit. And the fangs, Great Day in the Morning! They are almost 1-2 inches long, sticking poison the color and consistency of olive oil. No time was lost experimenting with this thing—he was just too mean, treacherous and deadly to admire or let live. A large section of limestone skillfully applied to the top of the head immediately rendered him unfit for further duty. I am told that this type of snake has no name in English, and the best I could do was to class him as a horned viper as he had the pits between eye and nostril common to all vipers.

Still keeping my eyes open for new things to report on as I see them. We have jackals and gazelles here but I haven't seen any of them yet. I can't say I am in love with this country, but it is something different. I always did like new scenes and lots of travel. Have had plenty of "Adventures Out of Doors," but can't tell you the best of them. Might interest you to know that I have given up cave crawling, whiskey drinking, wife beating, worm fishing, snake hunting and sheep stealing for the duration. Not that I have reformed—not that opportunity does not present itself for those idle pastimes.

What I miss most of all is my West Virginia mountains and clear sparkling trout streams. I'd give a pretty penny for a gallon of good old spring water. I am tired of the eucalyptus trees and the blossoming lemon and olive trees. Nothing I have seen can

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1943

This is a Friday, and I am just back from a trip down to Charleston on the Kanawha. Tomorrow is the Saturday on which opens the trout fishing season. How I dread the early rising in the cold gray of the morning and the hurrying away to the rushing mountain stream for to mess up some poor little fishes what never meant me no harm. I take my pleasure seriously, and so I am resigned to the ordeal of trial by water for a day in the open. I still have sinful pride in that I do not ask others to do what I would not attempt. In a moment of weakness some men of the age of my children had me almost committed to a promise to lay out tonight back in the mountains under a pine tree. Happily, word of this romantic misadventure got to my guardian in time to save me from a night of interminable misery—a frying on one side and freezing on the other. They do say it is rheumatism pain that creeps into the temperate zone between where the fire leaves off and the ice begins.

However, I have enough in hand to write about trouble experienced already without anticipating grief sure to befall. So, the trip this week was down to the capital city on the banks of the Kanawha. The mission was to be exhibit number two on a program of the sectional institute on War and Post-War Issues. This high brow meeting was sponsored by the State Library Association, State Coordination on War and Post War Issues, and the Kanawha County Library. Naturally I was a short dog in high odds. Like a good old veteran remarked about the Battle of Gettysburg, it was no contented place for me.

Like a mountaineer overtaken in a fog in the forest going from tree to tree to keep from wandering in a circle, I discarded the usual line of patter and platitude to take a lead from the eloquent speech of the learned lady who preceded me, Miss Nadine Clark, Historian, Stonewall Jackson High School, Charleston. "This is Our War," Good to look at, pleasant to hear. Her speech would read well in print; I know of no higher compliment.

My chore was "What we can do now." One platitude I had picked to say was in this time of stress we should exercise the spirit of tolerance towards the overwrought, well meaning souls who are putting their molasses jug with us in a running in circles—even to the extent of charitable feeling toward Congress.

The oratorical lady took a fall out Congress, with the wonderment if it were not possible to devise ways and means to make Congress more responsible and responsive to the will of the people. Maybe, somewhat after the fashion and form of the British system, where proposed legislation originates mostly in the Kings Council rather than in Parliament itself. The idea, as I caught it, was to pin responsibility for sins of omission and commission, without so much leeway for Congress to foxfire around in.

With all its faults, I still love my Congress. This gave me opening to slip in the always expected quotation from Lincoln. Like all Presidents worth their salt, Mr. Lincoln was having his time with a Congress less responsive to the will of a forward looking people than usual, and that is going some. I'll tell the world. A close counselor of the President wanted him to read the riot act to the turbulent body. The reply was that men of sufficient prominence to be elected by their districts and States to Congress were, in their own minds at least, potential candidates of their party for the presidency. Each and every one was possessed by the idea that the path to the presidential chair was over the political dead body of the man who occupies it. They were objects of pity, not censure.

I would add my little bit to say the froth and fury of "deliberations" in Congress get reported in the news, but work is performed by committees. The little dogs who run yelping in front of the wagon, with wild sorties to lead off the given path into byways, have little effect upon the course of government. As a rule the place thereof upon knows him no more. When old Aesop spoke of such as flies sitting the bulls horn to get in trouble by remarking how much dust were all raising. These wandering stars can be usually accounted for as mere accidents of election in years of political handouts. Their constituents did not know the ticket was loaded.

Compare foot rabble rousing speeches in Congress with the following sample of measured words of wise conclusion contained in the report of the Truman Committee on Investigation of the National Defense Program, and do yourself no harm:

"In the last analysis the leaders of labor must now demonstrate that they are statesmen and patriots as well as paid advocates for worthy causes. Labor has come of age, and the country expects the leaders to recognize that labor has duties as well as rights. Labor must not repeat the mistake of arrogant capitalism, which forged the shackles that now restrict its every act."

When it comes to laying down rules for what other people ought to do, I can only be specific in the matter of my own personal endeavor. I know it is up to me to get out as good a paper each week as possible under the pressure of increased cost and diminishing return; to support the administration to my limit; to plant and tend every possible bit of the ancestral acres in food crops, regardless of expense; to publish as many soldiers' and sailors' letters as I can crowd in; to keep up with my hunting and fishing as the law will allow; to chase around over the State as the limits of gas and rubber will permit; to cultivate the grace of seeing the humor of little jokes and pass them on; to keep myself unspotted from the world, and never to take myself too seriously.

Such a subject assigned me should be based on a text. The one which popped in my mind was What does the Lord require of thee, except to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly. However, I am a bit gun shy of texts since I found this true one on a long time friend of mine. He had come back to the old home community after making a considerable name for himself as a physician, statesman and capitalist. A boyhood friend, of native good sense and little book learning had developed into a local preacher. He asked the Doc what he was now working at mostly. Doc blurted out he had finally got to preaching too. And what might your text be was the next inquiry. Doc came back, "Woe unto you scribes, pharisees, hypocrites." Then the devastating rejoinder, that is one powerful strong text, and you had better be keener it don't back fire on you!

The meeting at Charleston was an assembly of earnest souls, gathered from libraries, schools and colleges over the State. It was high honor to be asked to appear before such a meeting, and how out of pocket did I feel. There is vast comfort in contemplation that rising generations have capable hands to point them to high plane of thinking and living.

A prime mover in the Institute was Miss Isabel Lynch, of the Charleston Public Library. I am happy to know she is the granddaughter of my long time and greatly admired friend, the late Harry Snyder, editor of the Shepherdstown Register. She carries out the high traditions of her people as educational uplifters.

That wonderfully equipped and efficiently managed, Kanawha County Library makes me sick. Envy is the seat of my illness. They have a book truck as big as a box car. This circulating library visits every community in Kanawha County once every two weeks. Public libraries are part and parcel of an efficient State-wide system of public education—a cap sheaf, in fact. Rural counties will continue to be sadly lacking in this all important educational service until our West Virginia school system embraces the movement for a public library circulating in each county. Until we do this we are a back number, derelict in our duty and irresponsible for an enlightened citizenship.

Thursday afternoon I sat in at a meeting of the board of directors of the West Virginia Affiliated Sportsmen Association. This is the holding organization of about forty local sportsmen clubs. The member clubs have memberships in excess of thirty thousand. The Affiliated is growing in membership and influence. The large lay attended meeting went on record approving the recently enacted, non-political, progressive, constructive conservation laws, as out growth of intelligent, enlightened sentiment on part of people and statesmen for the cause of conservation of natural resources.

The new law provides for a State Conservation Commission composed of seven members—one from each Congressional District and one at large. There are two districts, the second and the sixth without representation on the Commission. These places are to be filled by the Governor from a list of not less than three citizens submitted to him by the Conservation Commission.

The affiliated Sportsman respect fully recited to the Commission that almost all the funds for Conservation work in West Virginia comes from a special license tax paid by the hunters and fishers; that taxation without representation is and has been wholly un-American since the very first; to the Commission is asked to give serious consideration to their recommendations for appointment of new members of the commission. From our district, the Second, the recommendations were for Prof. Frank K. Johnston of Hillsboro, H. H. Spitzer of Elkins, and W. H. Barger, of Keyser. From the Sixth District, E. D. Knight of Charleston, Thomas Claggett of Bluefield and William Keyser of Welch.

The Board pledged its support and cooperation to the new Conservation Director.

APRIL AT WAR
Augusta Travers—You know, the one who runs the little hat shop down on Main Street—she's always been dead set against gambling in any form. Never will forget when I was a kid and she found little Hammy, her youngest nephew, playing marbles for keeps out back of the shop. Took it on herself to give him a whaling and point out the evils of gambling. She's a strict woman, Augusta, real strict. Good as gold of course. But might set against the lighter things of life.

Well, so you could have knocked us all over with a feather when Augusta started her gambling campaign for War Bonds and Stamps—and stamped it right out in the window of her shop. First she got hold of the photographs of every boy here in town who's joined up, and pasted them on a big board in the window, with little American flags at the corners. Half the town was down there watching her do it. She left the middle empty. Then she brought out a placard that had printed up and put it in the middle, and this is what it said: "These are the Local Boys who have enlisted in America's War—They are betting that you are buying War Bonds and Stamps—Hitler and the Japs are betting you aren't—Place your bets inside."

My wife couldn't wait to get herself down there and inside Augusta's shop to see what in the wide world had happened to her, turning right around about gambling like that. You know my wife. She kind of likes to talk. She went right up to Augusta and said, "Augusta Travers, seems like something's come over you. Why, I never thought I'd see you running a gambling campaign in your own shop."

Mean to tell me it's a gamble whether this country buys enough bonds to win this war? Augusta asked.

I forgot to say. Wasn't just a hat my wife brought home. Was a hat and a 25 bond.

Schools Open Drive To Buy 10,000 Jeeps

THIS little jeep which is serving as a baby from Guadalcanal to Africa has become the symbol of the gigantic efforts of millions of American school children in their War Savings program.

Thousands of public, private and parochial schools soon will be displaying a certificate of honor from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., signifying that they have paid for at least one jeep by buying $400 in War Stamps and Bonds.

Countless others will be flying the Schools At War banner awarded to schools with 90 percent pupil participation in War Savings.

Ten thousand jeeps and a hundred bombers! This is the new goal of America's schools as 30,000,000 children continue their Schools At War program under the auspices of the Treasury Department and the U. S. Office of Education.

Results so far in the program reported by Dr. Homer W. Anderson, Associate Field Director in charge

Farm Youth of U. S. Looks to Tomorrow

TOMORROW'S farmers and farm homemakers are second to no school group in their enthusiasm for investing in War Bonds and other projects. A million and a half 4-H Club members put $7,000,000 of their own savings in War Bonds and Stamps and sold $2,500,000 worth of War Savings to their neighbors. Nearly a quarter million members of Future Farmers of America invested more than $1,500,000.

Spurred by the realization that the financial welfare of farm families the next 20 years depends on how wisely they use today's higher incomes from increased food and other wartime production, both groups have set their goals still higher for 1943.

These farm youths are building financial reserves, and urging their parents to do the same, for after-the-war necessities, to meet financial emergencies and to help them get started in college.

They're building reserves today for tomorrow's farm buildings and for the other things they will need when they're tomorrow's farmers and homemakers.

Our Army and Navy Boys

April 18, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:
I have been reading some of boy's letters and poems they have in the Times. I like very much to get the Times to read where my friends are in the Service.

I thought I would write and let all my friends in West Virginia know I am one of the West Virginia boys in Service. I have several good friends that are Overseas and I like to know how they are. I am still in the States but don't know how long I will be.

Compare what is in West Virginia with what is around here and things are quite different. We have plenty of mountains but there are no shade trees to sit under like the sugar or the silver maple like the most people there have in their front yard.

I was born and reared near Hillsboro and there are some nice scenery in the Little Levels. I sure hope I can get back to those West Virginia hills some time in future year or sooner. It soon will be a year since I left these and those West Virginia hills sure looked good when I left. It is very hot here. It gets from 130 to 140 degrees and that is plenty hot for me.

We have a few rattlesnakes here and the scorpion is well known around the desert; also, the pack rat, which is very meddlesome. They carry away bright, shiny things such as cigarette lighters and silver money. There are a few jack rabbits and they look as big as a half grown dog. There are a few coyotes back in the mountains. We were out about 50 miles from camp last week and heard one howling. It was the most weird sound you ever heard. It made cold chills run up your back. One of the boys saw one.

You cannot see anything but mountains, cactus and sand here on the desert. The moon is the most noticeable thing at night and it is lovely. There is nothing else I know that would be interesting to write about only what I have told you about the desert.

I have been in Service eighteen months and 12 months of it I have been in tents and most of the twelve months I have been on maneuvers from the east coast to the west coast. I have seen lots of nice country and some I have seen is very rugged.

We are 25 miles from town and I have only been in town once since I have been here. The majority of the people are soldiers. There are a few Indians and some Mexicans. The Mexican girls are very nice to the soldiers but it pays not to be too friendly with them.

Well, I will say so long. Keep the home fires burning. Keep building and we will keep them rolling and I am sure the Air Corps will keep them flying.

Dear Mr. Price:
I will write you a few lines now that I have some spare time. Dad has been asking me if I had ever written and I keep saying no, but here at least is a short letter. I don't get very much time for writing letters and sometimes I don't get to write home for two or three weeks.

How is everyone around Marlinton these days? I suppose it is the same there now as it was in October of last year. All the young fellows have gotten into the Service and things are "kinda" dead.

How are Basil and Jane and Basil Price? Tell them all hello for me. Basil Price must be quite a big boy by this time. I have not seen him for almost four years and he was only knee high to a grass hopper then.

Well, Mr. Price, if I ever get back to the States maybe you and I can go out deer hunting and get lost again. Do you remember that time? It seemed like

Dear Cal: Just a short line to let you know everything is O. K. I have a little poem here I would like to publish.

Another Marine Reporting Sir! You can have your Army khaki. You can have your Navy blue. But there is still another fighter I will introduce to you.

His uniform is different. The best you have ever seen. The girls, they call him devil dog. But his real name is Marine.

He is trained at San Diego. The land that God forgot. Where the sand is fourteen inches deep.

And the sun is scorching hot. He has set up many a table. Many dishes he has dried. He also knows how to make a bed. A broom he has learned to guide.

He's peeled a million onions. And twice as many spuds. He spends most all his leisure time in washing out his duds.

Now, listen girls take this advice. I am passing on to you. Go get yourself a nice Marine. There is nothing he can't do.

And when he goes to Heaven, To Saint Peter he will yell: "Another Marine reporting, Sir. I've served my time in Hell."

And if Saint Peter turns him down, Right back to hell he'll go. To kick the Devil off the throne. And he will run the whole damn show.

Tell Mr. Simmons hello for me. Hope everything is O. K. back there.

San Diego, California.

The following letter was received by Mrs. A. H. Gibson from her grandson Harold Gibson, who entered the Service last December at the age of 18 years.

Dear Grandma and Grandad: I will try and drop you a few lines to let you know I am O. K. I should have written sooner but I am so busy I just don't have time to write, but I like it fine and am learning a good mechanic trade which will help me a whole lot in civilian life.

I guess you know Buckle is across the water. I just hope they send me over soon to try those rascals a few rounds cause I am no better than any other mother's son.

I hope you and Grandad are making out all right but I guess it is tough and if there is anything I can do to help you just write and let me know. I still remember what you have done for me.

I have gained about 15 pounds in two months. I weigh 160 pounds and feel good. Does Minnie and Thaddeus come to see you? If you see them tell them to write and I will try to answer their letters as soon as I can. Well, I don't know much more to say so be good and you both take care of yourselves.

Your grandson,
Harold Gibson,
482 Engr. Maint. Co.,
Camp Beale, California.

April 16, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:
As there are many of my friends I should write to and can not find the time to do so; I am writing you which is a sure way of "Killing Several Birds With One Stone."

I have not missed an issue of paper since I entered the Service February 16, 1942. It is the only means of keeping in touch with my friends and school pals who are stationed elsewhere. I also enjoy reading of West Virginia's sportsmen and their adventurous hunting and fishing trips.

I left Lake Charles, Louisiana, on January 14th and went to San Marcos, Texas, and five days later I came here to Del Rio. I like it here although it is very hot and dry. It very seldom rains here I understand; anyway it has not rained since I have been here. We have passed 19 visit Mexico and can get a taxi across the bridge for only 35 cents. There are several interesting sights and "exciting" happenings, which includes their famous bull fights.

This is only a new field, but it is well on its way and is doing a swell job training student officers to fly these B-26 planes. They are a swell ship and in my est-

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The government will produce it.

When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of income.

The problem of war finance boils down to this—if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise.

The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into Government securities to wipe out that deficit.

They give their lives... You lend your money.

WILLIAM'S LETTER
April 28, 1943
Dr. Calvin Price,
Editor, Spec, Etc.,
Marlinton, W. Va.

Dear Cal:
I've been reading the Pocahontas Times quite religiously for several weeks trying to make some sense from your vapors about when to plant, but like the guy trying to figure out the OPA regulations, I get confused to put it mildly. I can follow you when you write about the moon and what the Indians used to say and even a little ways when you expound on the signs of the Zodiac, but when you branch off into how the ocean tides affect fish biting in Pocahontas county I'm completely lost.

When you write about gardening never will amount to a darn as a gardener, no matter how much he knows about the moon and the signs—but after reading all your advice, Cal, I believe a guy would have to work out a complicated schedule and on top of that be an astrologer to understand the meaning of all the signs and that's something most of us farmers aren't cut out for—but when you get to writing about the signs which make you think this is going to be a good game and fish year you're using a language anybody can understand.

Your "Piece" said "E. M. Richardson's old nanny goat dropped four fine kids the other frosty morning" and "Henry Warren's sow farrowed a litter of seven teen pigs" and "on one farm the five cow dropped five male calves when they freshened" and "the young lambs are skipping around in more than the usual number in the yard"—maybe the moon and the Zodiac and the tides had some thing to do with these happenings but I'll leave it to you to fathom the reason, I'm convinced.

WILLIAM.

Dear William:
Never in this world multiply words when a man acknowledges he is convinced. However to help out your blind faith when it comes to signs and my interpretation there, I merely want to say that when it comes to planting seeds the minute details should be observed. For top crops, take advantage of the ascending scale and for root crops observe the descending ones.

For instance, there was that most successful practicing physician of the old Thompsonian School. He had but one remedy—wahoo bark. When used as an emetic, always peel the bark up as a purgative, always strip the bark down.

Regards,
Calvin.

The Minnehaha Springs Farm Women's Club met at the home of Mrs. A. E. White, April 7th. Thirteen members, Mrs. Bragg and one visitor were present.

The Pocahontas Times

VOL. 39 NO. 42

MARLINTON POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, MAY 13, 1943

$1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

FIELD NOTES

William Grigger, keeper of the fire tower on the Beaver Lick, came pretty near getting himself snake bit last Sunday. The tower is set on the White Rocks, a notorious place for rattlers. There had been thunder that morning, and about noon a big yellow rattler came out to stretch on a sunny rock, all snappy and dry. Grigger came down to get water, found the snake and killed it. Going to the spring, a big black rattler reared up from a flat, mossy rock beside the path and struck viciously at him. Bill saw the snake rise up and where his strike was to land he was not there. The snake was not coiled, but raised half way up and struck. Bill made a record standing jump. He came back and killed the snake. It was muddy and dirty too. Last year the rattlers came out at White Rocks on May 6; this year they appeared May 9.

In late March twin brothers came from Eastern Virginia to visit relatives in Marlinton, just before induction into the Army. They appeared in the pink of condition, and one of the high points of their entertainment were regular mountain feeds of tender ramps, just up. The boys took to the succulent, high power onions like natives. From here they went directly to the recruiting office and while they themselves did not notice anything wrong, I'll tell the world each carried a breath that was in full bloom. The examining physician turned a deathly white. He solemnly told the young inductees they were certainly suffering from some malignant stomach trouble. So far as his own knowledge went the disease was unknown to medical science, but plenty bad. He could not pass them; they would be put in a far back class of rejects. They were to go home for six months, consult the family physician and keep away from their parents and the rest of the family as much as possible. Six weeks went by, the twins looked well and felt perfectly well.

It finally dawned on them what might have been the trouble, and they applied for class A rating from their local draft board. They are in the army now.

Young Bill Leisher, away down in the heart of Texas remembered a number of his friends in Marlinton with a horrible remembrance in the shape of a horned toad. "I thought mine was dead when it arrived, and I kind of hoped it was. I was fixing to pester Clarence Smith to the extent of a shot or two of embalming fluid, when the horned toad began to sit up and take notice. They say they live on flies. They also say horned toads are not toads at all, but lizards. I will have to look up the book at a convenient time.

My young friend, T. D. Moore Jr., brought in a most beautiful bird for identification the other day. It had flown against a howl window of his father's store and was pretty well knocked out. A little smaller than a blue bird, with olive colored back and bright yellow breast. I checked it off

ENGAGED

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Post of 333 Vermont Av., Clarksburg, have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Jean Post, to Corp. James Robert Sharp, son of Mr. and Wilbur Sharp of Marlinton. The wedding will take place Wednesday, May 13, in Miami Beach, Fla., where the prospective bridegroom is stationed.

Miss Post, who resides at 1320 1/2 Quarrier St., has been employed for the last year by the Atlantic Greyhound Bus Lines. She will leave Thursday to visit her parents in Clarksburg and will leave from there for Miami Beach May 16, accompanied by her parents.

The bride-to-be was graduated from Washington Irving high school and attended Greenbrier Women's college and West Virginia university. She is a member of Eta Upsilon Gamma Sorority.

Corp. Sharp is a graduate of Marlinton high school and Greenbrier Military school. After the wedding the couple will reside in Miami Beach. —Charleston Mail of May 5th.

as a warbler right off the bat. Its common name is yellow breasted chat. It is rather common, but such a modest retiring bird it is seldom noticed. I have some sort of a hazy remembrance of seeing some years ago a photograph of a yellow breasted chat on her nest, with the printed note that this was the first time on record of such a photograph being made. I do remember reading that the yellow breasted chat is the largest of the warbler family, and differs greatly in other respects. For instance, the yellow breasted chat is full of tricks as a jay bird, except in the matter of practical jokes. It has not the cannibalistic habits of the jay either. It sings on the wing at times. Second only to the finches—sparrows—which number around two hundred members in the United States the warblers are our most numerous family of birds. The last I knew there were one hundred and fifty kinds of warblers. Incidentally, there are no better and for that matter no more beautiful birds than the warblers. They are tree inspectors right. Without them insects would destroy every living plant from the largest tree in the forest down to the grass of the fields, and do it in three or four seasons too. No leaf nor flower nor tiny crack or crevice escapes their notice. It is surprising how often they stop to swallow some poor midge hauled from his hiding place.

Rev. J. Quinn Geiger, of Green Sulphur, Summers County, was in Marlinton last week attending Lewisburg District Conference. He is a son of the late John M. Geiger, of Stony Bottom. While here he visited his mother Mrs. Geiger at Stony Bottom. Mr. Geiger has been in the ministry five years.

Due to a state-wide change in the numbering system of local rationing boards, the Pocahontas County War Price and Rationing Board will be Board No. 35-38.1 instead of Board No. 224.

Uncle Sam Urges Use of V-Mail

Uncle Sam is definitely worried about his boys in service not getting enough mail from home. All who are in touch with the situation agree that it is bad for morale—the morale on home front and war fronts.

Part of the trouble is the men in the Armed Forces and some of their relatives and friends are not writing regularly enough, but the main trouble seems to be that many of the letters go astray.

There's too much carelessness in the addressing of letters, and some times too much bulk to those that are written. Here's where V-Mail comes in.

The Navy Department is campaigning, ashore and afloat, for greater use of V-Mail. It says, in effect: "Insure your letters to the men in the service—choose V-Mail." And it is giving V-Mail No. 1 priority.

What about the privacy of V-Mail? Uncle Sam replies that it goes through the photographic machines at such tremendous speed, that only the censor sees the letter. Therefore, it is just as private as any other letter.

As for its safety, it is one up on any other kind of mail. If a roll of V-Mail film is lost enroute to its destination, another roll can be reproduced and forwarded.

Aside from the welfare of his nephews and nieces, Uncle Sam has a personal stake. V-Mail weighs but one-sixtyfifth as much as ordinary mail. When about 1,600 letters are converted to V-Mail film, they make a package scarcely larger than a package of cigarettes.

Thus they save valuable cargo space of outgoing ships and are the patriotic medium of communication as well as the fastest.

Beginning June 1, the Banks of Pocahontas county will pay interest on time deposits at the rate of one and one-half percent per annum. Conditions in the money market make this necessary as safe and conservative banking procedure. People are not borrowing money; they are paying up their loans. National and State bonds are selling like hot cakes at the lowest rate of interest in history. Much of the war bond purchases are prompted by patriotism. The lowering of the interest rate on deposits makes war bonds more attractive from an investment standpoint.

Dear Mr. Price:

As a supplement to your statement concerning "Easter" as perhaps your readers will be interested in the following figures which are authentic.

Easter never occurs before March 22 or after April 25. No person now living will ever see it again on April 25, for it won't occur again until 2038.

In 1761 and 1818 it fell on March 22nd but will not occur again on that date in this nor the following century. The next earliest date March 25, 1951 and the next latest date will be April 23, 2000.

Enclosed $1.00 on our subscription. Kindest regards.

R. L. Price.

Three Navy dive bombers on their way from Columbus to Norfolk, got caught in the storm and low clouds Sunday afternoon. An emergency landing was made at the Marlinton air field. By reason of the softness and shortness of the runway, the heavy bombers have not been able to get away.

Funeral services were held at his late residence at Ronceverte on Friday afternoon for Andrew H. Jackson, who died at his home after a long illness. He was 78 years old and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maude Williams Jackson, and two half brothers Clarence Jackson, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Ira Jackson, of Ashland, Va.—Greenbrier Independent.

SCRAP METAL DRIVE

Scrap metal is an all important raw material for war supplies and equipment. Last year a nationwide scrap drive was put on, and it was successful beyond all expectation.

For instance, forty big plants were down or facing shut down for lack of scrap iron. Junk from the farms and shops and homes and dumps kept or put these plants back in business, furnishing the things which stopped the Germans in Russia, put the Axis out of business in Africa, and held the Japs in the Pacific.

To put the finishing touches on these outlaw nations, the people of America are asked to respond as they did last year; only more so.

While the people responded nobly as a whole, our own West Virginia and our own Pocahontas County have not any thing to be especially proud of in the way of a record in last year's good work. In fact our State ranked forty-sixth in the list of States—third up from the bottom. As for our Pocahontas County, I have the idea we did better on a per head basis than the average West Virginia County.

Anyway, to give proper backing to our boys on battle fronts and to bring them home at the earliest possible date, we have responsibility to do better. And we are going to do it.

Last Friday night there was held a well attended meeting of the County Salvage Committee. Zed Smith, Jr., president of the County Court, was the presiding officer. Plans were made to put this important contribution to the success of the war on a business, systematic basis in Pocahontas County.

To get the matter properly going, some expense money must be provided. Guy Faulkner was asked to take popular subscriptions to underwrite initial expense.

Then there is necessary an office of information where noble volunteers can call in and list their scrap. Mrs. Gail Moore and Miss Margaret Irvine, in the area of the Court House, will take care of such details.

Finally, to make the effort truly effective, a man of good judgment and standing must be had, to devote his whole time and attention to seeing the people, gathering the junk together at proper points, weighing, shipping and accounting for it generally. It is expected that Oley Jackson, a cavalryman disabled in the first world war, will be this all important cap-sheaf of the organization.

No one can give our United States government anything. If there is profit on this scrap when it is sold, over and above the cost of handling, this will go to some war work cause. Of course there are many people who will give the scrap now littering up their premises. But ever this donated scrap brings will go to a proven worthy war work cause.

In this connection let it be said that transportation of junk in a county of great distances like our own, is an expensive proposition. However, the State Road Trucks are available for hauling without cost any junk donated by the owner.

Scrap needed is copper, brass, tin cans, heavy iron. Rusted tin cans, light auto fenders, wire fencing, etc., cannot be used.

As for tin cans, Jack Richardson, of the Marlinton high school and his Boy Scouts will look out for them.

What part have county papers in this scrap drive? Why, to im-

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1943

Mrs. J. M. Landis, Marlinton R. F. D. sends in a big egg with a V on it—for Victory, of course. This is a big double egg, nearly four inches long and six inches in circumference. It is a Rhode Island Red product.

Mrs. A. H. Gibson sends in one of the "fitted" eggs her hen is in the habit of laying. I know this is a good war sign, but I cannot read it. The crumpled on it look somewhat like the ridges on last hand grenade I saw.

This here trout season season opened on the cool order—twenty above zero and wind a blowing from the north. Trout huggled the bottom; numbly took some sunk bait if at all, and positively refused to exhibit any interest in any artificial fly in the book. On the good stream I fished, there was safety for the fish in the number of fishers. Boys and girls, men and women; they were all there in mittens, muffs and ear protectors. Early in the day my old hat blew off in the river. I dug it on a log to dry and I have not seen it since. I did not need it anyway.

While I flickered as a fisher, I do believe I am growing in grace. If so, it was a sudden translation, a few days ago, I found myself sweating in a nervous fit awaiting for a late arriving train. Time was not the essence of the contract. I would arrive at early bedtime, with nothing much to do but go to bed anyway. Here was a good hour for contemplative thought and meditation or just sitting, and I caught myself wasting it by fretfully walking up and down and around aimlessly—too centralized for comfort.

The other morning out on a mountain stream, balked at every pool to raise a trout, I figured it would be a good five hours before the wind would lay "or take a turn for the worse. (Incidentally, let me say, it got worse, but that is not the gist of the story.) Time seemed no more consideration to me than a hog, now that I had no white collar on. I had an idea where I would find a nook by a rippling stream sheltered from the piercing wind; where I could while away the hours beside a smudge of a fire. Animal like, my judgment proved exactly right, and the proof to justify this proud statement was the presence of that nook of two old cow "beasts and their day old calves. Beside a little fire of bone dry locust limbs, five hours from fret and worry went all too quickly. A turtle on a rock never had anything on this dumb piece of humanity for contentment.

On the mountainside a pair of crows evidently had their nest, and they were a bit nervous and overwrought with their house-keeping. During the morning a big hawk came sailing around the mountain, and out popped the two crows with great outcry and made for the hawk. Then crows from all directions came a cawing, and the hawk carried the mall away from that place. Several times during the day a buzzard would circle near the place. I thought the crows had their nest, and the pair of crows would fly but to drive the buzzard off. One of them made a wicked pass at the big soarer, and it looked like he landed. I could see no feathers flying, but when the buzzard passed over my head, I noticed he lacked some of the long feathers on one wing. I paid particular attention to several encounters of crow and buzzard, but in no instance did the crows call up and receive reinforcements as in the case of the hawk.

Along in the morning a raven came croaking around the mountain. He was taken on by only one of the crows. At first it looked to me like a sporting proposition, with the odds in favor of the big raven. Then I noticed he was not fighting back much and so I figured it female of the species who had called out to protect the nest.

Up on another mountain, buzzards, ravens, and crows in numbers had congregated for some sort of a camp meeting. I found out that dogs had played havoc with a big flock of sheep, and the big birds had gathered for the feast.

A fisher on the Glade Fork of Greenberry reports the finding of the remains of one big buck deer. He had been killed since January, as he had shed his antlers. There were no signs of a fight, but the fact that the carcass had been covered up with leaves is proof that the deer had fallen victim of a panther. Part of the neck and hams had been eaten away. Foxes and wild cats, buzzards and ravens had been feeding there too.

I am hearing and reading about the efforts of the City of Charleston to get public improvement in the way of a great air field. They talk of the expenditures of millions of dollars. It is to be war measure, to be built mostly with army money. The sponsor's share is one million dollars. Now, I know that a modern city is not modern unless it has an adequate air field. I realize something of the need of air fields strategically placed for military offense and defense. I admit that Charleston as the center of the chemical industry of America is easily in the list of the first six industrial centers an invading force would attempt to paralyze from the air. However, I am told, such an invading force is better fought and repelled from air fields away from rather than in the midst of the area picked for destruction.

In time of war and in time of peace air fields in West Virginia are a military necessity. Our State lies between East and West, North and South. Army planes continually pass over it; particularly traveling east and west; peace times and war times. We are at the south end of what has been termed the "Appalachian graveyard." This gruesome name comes from the many planes which have wrecked on the Alleghenies north of us in Pennsylvania. For that matter, one army plane fell in Pocahontas County in recent years, and only last winter a big army flyer hit a high mountain somewhere east of Bluefield. I hear it said that air fields placed forty or fifty miles apart afford flyers reasonable security in emergency cases.

All this tedious preamble leads up to a suggestion respectfully addressed to our Congressmen and Senators and Air Corps of the Army that consideration be given for a line of air fields, for war and for peace, laid down in these Endless Mountains, from Bluefield on the south to Morgantown on the north, including, of course, some boost to the million dollars Charleston has in sight for her municipal airport. The idea is to divide a twelve million dollar egg basket into several settlements.

No one knows better than I do, from topographical sheets, how few and far between are the places in West Virginia where air fields with "cross" run ways each ten thousand feet long can be built. Even if we had plenty of sites available that is a lot of good land. However, I have read that a field with a single runway of ten thousand feet is satisfactory for landing and taking off. Such a one, of course, is easier, quicker and less expensive to build. More sites are available, for a single runway will use hardly one twentieth of land required for one with cross runways.

I have been getting letters about Charleston, Our City. I have a better slogan for Charleston and the rest of us, West Virginia, "Our State."

P. S.—Since the foregoing was written, on Sunday afternoon three Navy dive bombers were compelled to make an emergency landing at the Marlinton airport, and spend the night. The bombers were on their way from Columbus and encountered storm conditions and clouds hanging low on the mountains.

Hunger Pangs Plaguing Reich

Shortage of Food and Fuel Fading Buying Power of Money Reported.

WASHINGTON—The German people are feeling their first serious pangs of hunger. Their money is fast losing its purchasing power. They travel only if they must—and can. All of their sports events have been canceled. They can't get an aching tooth fixed without a long wait, if at all.

Those are the highlights of a sketch of life in Germany today, drawn from a European vantage point for the United Press by a responsible and competent source in a position to do the job with a high degree of accuracy.

This is the situation as Adolf Hitler girds his armies for the vaunted spring offensive. Unless it brings some substantial victories, the source believes, the Nazis are likely to be confronted with an openly disgruntled home front.

But with the third spring of war just around the corner, the German confidence in victory—sooner or later—showed signs of thawing out after a winter of refrigeration by the Russian frost.

Straw in the Wind. A straw in the bitter wind lashing the Russian plains and steppes landed in the columns of Die Deutsche Post, the official publication of the Reich postoffice ministry. It used to publish weekly a list of postmen killed on the battlefield. Lately, it announced that, owing to lack of space, the names of only 100 fallen postmen would be printed weekly henceforth.

Germany's massive stores of edible plundered from occupied territories are dwindling. Unless one knows the answer it's hard to understand the scramble for trips to mountain resorts, in view of the hardships involved in travel. Few trains run regularly, and they are overcrowded.

But tiny resort hamlets which in normal times would draw perhaps 50 visitors have had 1,000 and more this season. Such places still occasionally offer pig knuckles or a slice of roast ham.

A great deal of bartering is going on in Germany, according to the account forwarded to the United Press. The people are ready to trade any imaginable article, but they won't sell it, since their marks won't buy much.

Many shopkeepers inform their customers that they can't sell any goods because of a shortage in stocks and an avalanche of orders. Sports Are No More. Even the widely popular soccer matches were canceled six weeks ago. The general cancellation affects northern Germany, Bavaria, the Rhineland, Baden and Alsace-Lorraine.

Traveling in occupied France is virtually impossible. The cafes, movies and theaters are jammed, as they are the only comfortable places existing in Berlin and other principal cities.

Bootlegging in Berlin flourishes. In a manner reminiscent of prohibition days in the United States, party bigwigs and the wealthy can get a bottle of Scotch for 200 marks.

The traditional German beer is almost undrinkable, as the alcoholic content has been lowered twice.

All over Germany the shortage of dentists is remarked. Patients consult the few remaining ones only in the most extreme cases, and then they have to wait their turn.

The same is true of physicians and medical experts in general.

Puts Tax on Childless to Hike Births in Bulgaria

BELGRADE—Bachelors, widowers and childless couples of Bulgaria are to be taxed for the support of large families under a new state program to halt the decline of the birth rate. A Sofia dispatch said taxes of the fathers of three or more children would be cut 40 to 50 percent and the mothers would be awarded medals, ranging from bronze for three to gold for seven.

Bulgarian bachelors of 27 or older employed in state, communal or public positions, under terms of the law, are given 17 months from the effective date to get married. The same rule applies to managers of private enterprises.

Widowers and divorcees without children, as well as soldiers and officers, monks and bachelors, will be taxed from 5 to 20 days of their salaries for the fund to aid big families. This will be augmented by a 1 percent tax on financial negotiations and realty transfers.

Childless couples will be taxed after six years of marriage.

British Hail Accuracy Of American Bombers

LONDON—The admiralty was reportedly to have sent a message of thanks to the U. S. army air force in England for its successful daylight raid on Nazi U-boat bases along the French coast.

The message was delivered after aerial reconnaissance established a "remarkably high standard" of bombing, the Daily Mail's air correspondent, Colin Beddall, said.

Declaring photographs of the results had been "an eye-opener to many in this country," Beddall added that "former piercing bombs are shown to have been pinpointed with uncanny accuracy and damaging effect, on the underground pens which the Germans boasted would give their U-boats immunity from air attack."

Women AT WORK

Rosebud

Rosebud is eight, and the most beautiful shade of caramel. Judge. To her loving Mammy and Pappy she is known, on approximately alternate days, as "Angel" and "You devil child." It was on her devil child days that Rosebud tied the knots in the shirt that Mammy had taken in for washing, and poured the whole of the vanilla bottle into the lamb stew, just, she said later through bitter tears, to "flavor it up some."

On her angel days, Rosebud is equally imaginative even if a more careful occupant of the little shack down on Vinegar Hill. Once when Mammy was out doing day work, Rosebud got a fever and scoured every pot and pan in the kitchen so that they literally glittered. Another day, left alone, she tidied up Mammy's and Pappy's room to such a point of apple-pie order that it was a week before Pappy could find an undershirt.

Rosebud is a great reader of the newspapers. Mammy and Pappy don't take one, but there are plenty of perfectly good newspapers blowing round Vinegar Hill. It was out of one of them that Rosebud got her idea for spending the ten cents the Bunny had put under her pillow the night her tooth came out. After breakfast Rosebud disappeared down the hill and reappeared, soon after, with a beautiful ten-cent War Stamp gaped firmly into a brand-new book with neat little squares for more stamps. She displayed her investment to Mammy. "I declare you're an angel child," Mammy said. Rosebud went on sitting on the kitchen floor staring with large brown eyes at the empty squares in her book. From time to time she took hold of one or another of her teeth and wiggled it, gently.

Rosebud was engrossed in a particularly big wadding. Rosebud was as quiet as a mouse and Mammy forgot about her until, coming in from the yard with her arms full of dry sheets, she encountered her child with a large hammer in her hand. Sentencing the devil in her angel child, Mammy shouted at her, "Rosebud! Come yere with that hammer! What you planning on doing?"

But what was done was done. In Rosebud's other hand was another tooth. Her mouth was stretched in a broad if slightly bloody smile. "I ain't doing nothing, Mammy," she said. "I'm just filling up my stamp book."

Read the home town of a typical American team, around the rim of the picture above. Here are United States in action. Here's a real All-American team! Not just because of geography, either. You've got to be good to play on this team. Competition is tough. You've got your own. Full won't help. Only brains, skill and energy can make you a champion of a team. That's the way the Air Force works—and the way American works. That's the way we're all fighting for—the right to live our own lives—the opportunity to work, love and get ahead. That's the spirit. America strong. It's the spirit of America and America. It's the big industries that are giving the United States for victory. It's the spirit of America that's making our nation a world leader. It's the spirit of America that's making our nation a world leader. It's the spirit of America that's making our nation a world leader.

MONONGAHELA SYSTEM

Our Army and Navy Boys

H. O. Miller, of Marlinton, received the following letter from his son, Ross, who is serving with the Armed Forces Overseas:

North Africa, April 8, 1943.
Dear Father:
I received a V-Mail letter from you a few days ago. I think it was the first one that you wrote me. I've been hearing from home quite often. The mail is delayed at points but it eventually reaches me O.K. I am sending this letter to you at home as I am almost sure you're back by now. I'll bet you and Fred are really doing a lot of plowing and getting ready to plant potatoes. I would like to be there to hear some of those bull sessions that you too have, ha! ha!

I am in my pup tent trying to write this letter so if you can't make it out you will have to get someone to help you. Bernice is probably back with you by now. Mother was telling me in her last letter that she was looking for her back soon. I wrote Sonny a letter, if he gets it write and tell me. I can picture him running up to everybody that comes around showing that letter from Uncle Ross.

March was a windy month. I don't know of a place where the wind blows any harder unless it is at the cemetery where G. D. McNeill lives. The winter here reminds me of the winter months at Clearwater, Florida. I have not heard the news for several days but the rumor is—it sounds good on all fronts. I don't suppose you ever miss a news broadcast do you?

Has the rationing really caused you folks there to do without many things? One good thing about it the farmers will always have plenty. I would be satisfied if I was there to grow a Victory garden for Uncle Sam.

I am the best of health and we have plenty to eat. Just think, we had hot cakes for breakfast this morning. I won't forget the Spam either. That's my favorite dish, ha! ha! I am afraid that one word "Spam" will be the cause of many a man leaving his wife after the war is over, ha!

Dad, I know that you will probably be pulling your hair when you read this letter but there just isn't anything to talk about so just don't forget to have that turkey gobbler fat and waiting. I'll be seeing you.

Love, Ross.

Frederick Glen Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Simmons, of Durbin, underwent an appendectomy operation and is getting along fine. Frederick has been in the Navy since 1942. The following letter was received from him by his sister, Mrs. Arnold Morrison, of Street, Maryland.

"SOMEWHERE" April 24, 1943
Dear Sis and Family and Anna:
"I'll drop you a few lines in answer to your letter which I was glad to get. This leaves the feeling fine and hoping all of you folks are well. By my address you can tell I am on a different ship now and I like it fine.

I don't know who all I owe letters to but I am sure that I owe you one. I have not had any mail from home for a few days. Do you still hear from Betty and did she send you some of the pictures? I guess Arnold and William have started their spring work and are as busy as ever. Who is working for Wilson now? I would like to see the folks around there.

Has Charlie come up there yet? Tell him to write to me when he does get there. How are Junior and Richard? Mean as ever I guess. ha ha. I guess Anna is still there and when does she plan to go home on her furlough? Does Adella Ann still look like she did? I guess she is a big thing by now. She will soon be a year old. Can she walk yet? Well there is not much to write about so I will close for this time. Write soon.

Love, Your brother, Fred.

A Bevard, North Carolina, prints the picture of Julian

P. Bird, of the Navy Air Corps, and a big flying machine. The plane is made of aluminum and is now on one of the United States carriers, somewhere in the Atlantic. He has been stationed in many of the Navy's Air Corps units in the United States and several foreign countries.

Some time ago a ship he was on helped evacuate the Americans and others out of Lisbon, Portugal, at the beginning of the War. Julian Bird is the grandson of the late Charles Arbogast, of Pocahontas County; prominent citizen generally and for a number of terms County Assessor. His mother, Mrs. Queen Arbogast Gillispie, wife of Gus Gillispie, lives in Bevard, North Carolina. His uncle is Colonel John C. Arbogast, of Tavares, Florida. His cousin is W. H. Arbogast, of Marlinton.

Corporal Glenn D. Hively, 11 Randolph N. W., Washington, D. C., has been assigned to duty with the United States Army Air Forces following his graduation from the Camp Cordell Air Training School, operated by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, Airplane Division, Buffalo, New York. As a member of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Detachment stationed at the school, Corporal Hively has been given specialized instruction in the maintenance and repair of either the famous P-40 Pursuit Ship, or the C-46 Commando, the largest Twin-Motored Cargo Ship in the world in preparation for service with a skilled ground crew.

Soldier Floyd Jackson was home from the Army last week on furlough. He is in the Artillery, and stationed in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Shrader, of Cass, have received word from their son, Archel, of the Navy, for the first time in five months. He is safe in Pearl Harbor. He was at Pearl Harbor when the Japs so treacherously attacked in December, 1941. Another son, Donovan, also of the Navy, was at Manila when the Japs attacked there. He is now on duty somewhere in the South Pacific.

Corporal Val M. Beverage, of the W. A. A. C. S., stationed at Daytona Beach, Florida, was at home last week on furlough, with her mother, Mrs. David Beverage of Stony Bottom, and her sister, Mrs. F. L. Cowherd, of Seebert.

Sunday, May 2, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:
I will write you to let you know that I have changed my address. How is the weather back in good old West Virginia? It sure is hot down here. Nearly all of the boys here in this Company are as brown as the leaves are in the fall up there. Tell everyone hello for me. I hope to be seeing all the folks back home soon.

Private Stearl O'Connell, 564 Engr. Co. (L P), 3rd Platoon, Camp Shelby, Mississippi.
April 29, 1943.
Dear Calvin:
I am sending you my new address as I have been moved from Miami Beach, Florida, to Keeler Field, Mississippi, and have been promoted to rank of Private First Class. I am going to aircraft mechanic school here. My new address is:
P. F. C. Emil L. Grogg (33566080) 302 T. S. S., Box 217, Keeler Field, Mississippi.

Private Burnett Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Crate Peterson, of Marlinton, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, sends the following interesting clipping from the Blazon, the weekly paper published for the men of Fort Sam Houston:

Leon Springs No Man's Land Gives Taste of Real Thing
With real bullets whistling overhead, shell-like explosions, trenches and barbed wire entanglements, the 95th Infantry Division's "No Man's Land" at Camp Bullis needs only Japs and Germans to be the real thing.

"No Man's Land" is what the division technically terms an infiltration course. Every officer and enlisted man must go through it. It consists of a stretch of territory 75 yards in length designed to resemble the area between the trenches of opposing forces on the battlefield. The area is covered with such obstacles as wire entanglements, shell holes, old trenches, logs, stumps and sparse brush.

As men crawl through "No Man's Land," on their stomachs, three machine guns lay down cross-fire 36 inches overhead. Dynamite land mines are set off to give the effect of Artillery fire. Men crawl through the course in waves of 14, one wave following another at an interval of ten yards. Officers, observing from an elevated post, shout instructions and criticism to the crawling soldiers.

At the end of the course are dummies which the men attack.

with real bullets whistling overhead, shell-like explosions, trenches and barbed wire entanglements, the 95th Infantry Division's "No Man's Land" at Camp Bullis needs only Japs and Germans to be the real thing.

It is a long, hard crawl through the infiltration course, but the division knows it is a longer and harder crawl through the real No Man's Land.

TO THE SOLDIER BOYS

They have gone to be soldiers To the land God alone knows where. They are proud to join the others; For these boys we'll say a prayer. They have gone away one by one Our country to defend. And one thing sure they shall not fail— Nor stand afraid to face the dawn. For all their dear ones they will carry on.

They fight for you, they fight for me; Their country to defend. Defeat the foe and bring us peace; Bring end to war and slaughter cease. Though some of them may fall along the way That posterity may sometimes say; They loved, they lived, they fought, they died, So that nation could in peace abide.

So be brave and proud, you Mothers, Whose sons have gone away; They are in the service of our country To bring victory some day. We will lift our hearts and dry our tears. For here is freedom to be won. We will speak the word of courage and cheer. And be proud of these our American sons.

There's a friend who changes never Always constant, always true; And His tenderness, unending Is as fragrant as the dew. And His wondrous name is Jesus, Mighty guardian of His own, His all-seeing eye is watching o'er them. From His place beside the throne. He's the same today and yesterday. Our great unchanging friend, He's just the same unto the end.

—Dedicated to my nephews, cousins and all the boys in the Armed Forces of the United States. Grace F. Harter.

A Prayer For Those In Service

Oh, Lord we pray, a humble prayer For all our boys who are over there, Help them Lord, to win the fight Help them too, to do the right. Some must fall along the way To win the war, some one must pay. But Lord we pray they will prepare. To meet You in that land so fair. Where all the strife of war is o'er There, peace shall dwell forever more. There'll be no bloodshed in that land When they join that heavenly band. So mothers, fathers, families pray For your boys who are away, For that death's call may be their fate, May their souls be saved, and not too late.

What? You never actually "bid" against anybody for a "perfect" house? Well, when you take the spending of an average American as a guide, it's a different story. So it is important that every family be saved rather than spend collectively to bid up prices. If it is spent, instead of saved, prices soar. . . That's the money invested in Government securities during the Second War Loan. They give their lives. You had your money.

TO OUR SAVINGS DEPOSITORS:

Due to a great reduction in our loans and the decrease in demand for sound loans and the very low yield in Government and other high grade bonds of reasonable early maturity, which make desirable bank investments, we have found it necessary to reduce the interest rate on savings deposits to one and one half (1 1/2%) per annum, effective on JUNE 1, 1945. Our action is in conformity with sound banking practice.

We regret that conditions over which we have no control make necessary this change. The business which you have entrusted to us through the past forty-four years is appreciated, and we invite you to continue to make use of our facilities for all your banking requirements.

Mom

Dear Mom: I received your letter the other day. I think it was Thursday, that was the day I fired for record. I came out as an expert. I am getting a medal today for it. I am at the main base now. I came back from the range yesterday.

Well as for California being sunny it's sunny while the sun shines but last week it did not shine. It rained all week. The water does not sink in the ground it stands in puddles. The officer of the platoon took us out for a stroll and I bet we never missed a water hole. We got our scatter paper this week telling where we will go but we cannot open them until next week. I don't know whether I can stand the suspense that long or not.

Well, the Sergeant does not allow us to chew gum but he caught me chewing today. He asked me if I had gum and I told him no, it was some of that tough beef we had for dinner yesterday.

I received a letter from Mr. Johnston yesterday and he said he wanted a picture of me. Boy, it sure would be a good picture. My hair is cut so short that I forgot the other morning and started to shave it for whiskers. I have not been in a dress uniform but two or three times and I guess I won't be for a few more weeks.

I guess it is rather lonesome back at the old home place. I might get a chance for a leave to come home but if it was for less than 15 days I don't think I could make it.

Sorry to hear you are having such a hard time with the cows. Tell Preston I will come over some time and relieve him. I have signed up for the para-troopers, maybe I'll drop in your back yard some time to say hello. I guess Phillip is a big boy by now.

There is one boy in our platoon who found that his bunk was too short. He reported it to the Sergeant and he sent him down to the supply room to get a bunk stretcher. ha ha

Well that is all for this time. Write me the news. Hoping to see you all soon.

Now enrolled in the seamanship school, he will receive an intensive seven-day-a-week course of instruction on the methods of combating Hitler's most effective and dangerous weapon—the U-boat.

Dear Mom: Dad and all: How are you all by now? This leaves me fine. I received a letter from Gin yesterday and she said they were all well.

Say Mom, would you have Dad to get me a little information in regard to my pass. If I should happen to get back on the west coast and would happen to get to come home on short notice just how would I go about the pass situation? I am just asking for this information so I would know. I may not be back for a long time but if something should happen, say a miracle or something, I do not get enthused over me asking for this. I just want to know. Tell Dad and all to take care of everything. Have you heard from Ralph lately?

Well, Mom, that is about all. Answer real soon. Lots of love, P.F.C. Ernest O. Long.

P. S. Next letter I hope to be a Corporal. ha, ha.

John T. Bear

John T. Bear came home safely last Wednesday after a year in Africa. He was employed as a telephone technician. Much of the time he was in Cairo, Egypt. He was there several months before it could be known whether the Germans and Italians would be successful or not in overrunning Egypt and no one at the time could have predicted the capture of Rome and the capture of the city was being held as air raid.

ing plans for the coming year will be discussed and formulated. We feel that a very interesting and worthwhile program has been arranged for this meeting, and that as many farmers from this county as possible should attend.

In going over, Mr. Bear was on the ocean over a month, going around the Cape of Good Hope. Just out of New York, there was a U-bat alarm, with destroyers and air planes dropping depth bombs. The return trip was also the long way around Cape of Good Hope, with 34 days required to make the voyage. Among the passengers on the boat Mr. Bear came home on were 500 German prisoners of war. These were brought to New York to be taken to Canada.

While away Mr. Bear only met up with two West Virginians, a young man named Doddard, from Webster county, and a young office named Crozier, from Princeton, Mercer county.

Mr. Bear and son Jackie met Mr. Bear in New York and accompanied him home.

Garden School

We are all interested in making as great a contribution to the War Effort, in turn to our own future freedom, ease and health. All of us in Pocahontas county cannot participate directly in the War Effort, but each of us can contribute indirectly to the War Effort by assisting with the Food Production program.

For the most of us, this food production program will be strictly one of home food supply. In line with this thought a series of garden schools have been scheduled to assist you with some of the problems that may arise in your gardening activities this summer. At these schools we will discuss insect and disease control, succession plantings, and food preservation. We hope you will be able to attend the school in your neighborhood and bring someone with you. We will be in a position at each school to test any soil sampler that you may care to plant for lime and phosphate requirements.

Do not fail to bring your food production questions with you. A schedule of meetings in the various communities is as follows:

Monday, May 24, Edray, R. H. Skaggs, 2 p. m. Cloverlick School, 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 25, Mt Lebanon Mrs. Frank Morrison's, 2 p. m. Bruffys Creek School, 8 p. m.

Wednesday May 26 Minnehaha Springs, Arndt White's 2 p. m. Dunmore School, 8 p. m.

Thursday, May 27, Wanless, Mrs. Harry Wanless, 2:00 p. m. Cherry Grove School, 8 p. m.

Friday, May 28, Brush Run, Benjie Murphy's 2 p. m. Pine Grove School, 8 p. m.

A garden meeting will be held in June in the Slaty Fork Community. Pocahontas county livestock producers will be interested in attending the annual spring meeting of the Greenbrier Valley Livestock Marketing Association, which will be held at Lewisburg, Friday, May 31, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. The meeting will be held in the Court House. At ing plans for the coming year will be discussed and formulated. We feel that a very interesting and worthwhile program has been arranged for this meeting, and that as many farmers from this county as possible should attend.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Refrigerators are out for the duration. Manufacturers have now isolated their plants for production of war materials. Common-sense folk, however, are saving now, not spending, and building up a fund for purchase of refrigerators and other domestic needs through investment in U. S. War Bonds.

Your Money put into War Bonds today will bring you back $4 for $3 at maturity. So start saving for those domestic needs when you will be permitted to buy them. Join the Payroll Savings Plan at your office or factory and let's all "Top that Ten Percent." U. S. Treasury Department.

"Golden Horseshoe" Winners

Winner's in Pocahontas County's West Virginia Club "Golden Horseshoe" contests were announced here last week as follows:

Max White, first; Joan Overholt, second; Darius Moore, third. All are pupils of Miss Lucille Gibson's eighth grade of the Marlinton Graded School, and Mary Hunter, of the Greenbrier Hill colored school.

The board which graded the contestant's papers was composed of H. Arnout Yeager, principal of Marlinton High School, and Reed Davis and Jack Richardson, high school teachers. The examination pertains to the history and geography of the State.

It also was announced that the winners will not go to Charleston for their awards this year, as has been the custom, and that the trophies will be presented at the graduation exercises of the various schools.

At the meeting of the Pocahontas county Board of Trade last Thursday night the speaker was Dr. Broyles, President of Wesleyan College, Buckhannon. He made a fine speech. His subject was the general effect of war upon colleges in general and Church colleges in particular. The Doctor was here to attend and speak to the Lewisburg District Conference, meeting in Marlinton. It ought not to be published, I reckon, but most of the Board were out of town, trout fishing.

Mrs. Andrew Price spent a few days in Lewisburg last week with her sister, Mrs. T. A. Sydenstricker.

Glenville.—West Virginia's first test case to determine a municipality's right to revoke beer licenses by circuit court action was decided here when Judge Jake Fisher of the 14th judicial circuit in a special session of the circuit court of Gilmer county handed down a final decision in the case of the Town of Glenville vs. D. W. Brannon, proprietor of the Old Tavern.

The ruling perpetually enjoins the defendant from selling for consumption beer on the premises Judge Fisher also held that 5 percent beer is intoxicating.

His ruling on the case came about four months after Brannon's place on the corner of Main and Lewis streets was enjoined by a temporary injunction served by the court upon request of Arlan W. Berry, town attorney and then assistant prosecuting attorney.

The case since has attracted statewide attention because it was the first of its kind. Previously the only means of revoking beer licenses was through the office of the state tax commissioner.

The town in its original complaint claimed the Old Tavern constituted a public nuisance. If Judge Fisher's ruling in this case stands, it will mean that any circuit court in the state will have the right to close beer parlors if they are declared public nuisances without waiting for action by the state tax commissioner.

In his opinion Judge Fisher said that "the court holds that 5 percent beer is in fact intoxicating and it is violative of the inhibition of the state constitution to permit the consumption of it at the licensed beer parlor in question, and such consumption should be enjoined."

Brannon has employed counsel and has been summoned by the state tax commissioner to appear for a hearing in Charleston.

Counsel for Brannon hasn't yet indicated if it will appeal Judge Fisher's ruling, although Brannon himself said a week ago that he would appeal if the ruling were adverse.

The Town of Glenville brought the action after it had asked the state tax commissioner to take action to close the Old Tavern, but such action was not forthcoming.—Clarkeburg Exponent.

Two other West Virginia judges have joined Judge Jake Fisher of the 14th circuit in declaring that contrary to the state statute beer of 5 percent alcoholic content is intoxicating.

Fisher made his pronouncement Saturday in deciding a Glenville case.

Judge C. C. Chamber at Logan branded the statute "a legislative lie" and declared they "might as well have called a rose a cactus as to classify beer non-intoxicating." Paraphrasing Shakespeare, Chambers told the May grand jury when it convened that a "rose might smell as sweet if called by any other name and filth will smell just as bad."

He blamed beer for the increase in juvenile delinquency in Logan. Judge Charles W. Ferguson told the fifty members of the petit jury panel at Williamson "I am in full accord with the ruling of Judge Jake Fisher that the 5 percent beer sold in West Virginia is intoxicating."

He added that "while not binding until supreme court action is taken, Judge Fisher's ruling may have widespread and grave results."—Associated Press, in Charleston Mail.

All this looks like the way out from the intolerable nuisance of the beer joint. While Judge Fisher's ruling is not binding until action by the Supreme Court, the high court is not in the habit of reversing the able forthright Judge Jake Fisher.

When beer was declared a non-intoxicant by legislative action, we all looked for some protection against unbridled beer joints at the hands of the office of Tax Commissioner, which grants the license. Of late years this has proven a vain hope.

Then the beer association widely advertised—not in this paper—their intention to make the beer business respectable by supervising retailers. Where joints were run out of hand they would investigate, submit proof, and ask that license be revoked. One of the best men in West Virginia accepted the position of umpire to call the numbers on beer joints so far as I can see, he has been about as effective in his protests as a chirping cricket under a tin roof in a hail storm. I had looked for him to come and quit on this.

Then we all looked for relief at the hands of the legislature. Here, the overwhelming majority of the legislators were against the beer joint nuisance. The fifth came when the dry leaders could not agree among themselves upon any particular measure—all of them more or less good. These blind leaders appeared to be more intent on impressing the people of the State by doll speeches how dry they were rather than on taking effective action to curb an admitted public evil.

One of the proposed measures which the legislature failed to enact was to give the Circuit Court power along with the Tax Commissioner, to revoke license to sell beer, on complaint properly sustained. Judge Fisher, I would say, takes the position that a license granted as a tax measure does not necessarily imply freedom to maintain a public nuisance beyond the power of the courts to suppress.

All this hurrah about beer is caused by joints most anywhere beyond town police supervision which equal the old time saloons for drunkenness, debauch and rowdiness.

One trouble about beer now is the way it is made and dished out raw. Not only is five percent (alcohol) beer intoxicating, but it does not stop at such low alcoholic content. In addition, it is rushed out of the breweries in such a hurry that such poisons like ether are not taken out. I have been told that it is easier and quicker to make beer with high alcoholic content. I do know that in the days of near beer, this temperance drink was first brewed as beer and then the alcohol taken out.

Some time or other there will come a Federal statute laying down the law defining beer and its process of making and curing before it can become an article of commerce in interstate trade. To the shame of us contrary dries, be it said we have been so busy milling around with our own pet ideas, we have never been able to get together on anything practical and workable in dealing with this disgrace to our civilization.

Last week the trip was over to the County of Upshur. Another considerable honor had come to me. I was asked to speak at the Tenth Annual observation of Arbor Day held on the A. B. Brooks family homestead in the French Creek community, Upshur county. In spite of the rain there was a sizeable gathering of neighbors from as far away as Morgantown. They listened patiently to me for about forty minutes of platitudinous talk, and took away a couple each of Norway Spruces for home ground planting.

About 180 years ago, a number of families from New England came into the French Creek community of what is now Upshur county. They were looking for good hunting and a place to grow up with the country. I recall off hand the names of Brooks, Phillips and Young. These were intelligent, civilized, home-loving, God-fearing people; they supported the church and established school; they did well by themselves and by their country. Ministers, doctors, educators, scientists, lawyers, writers, as well as sturdy citizenship staying by the stuff on the land, have come from this settlement. And the end is not yet for the stock has not run out by any manner of means. For the promise was to them and their children... to show mercy unto thousands of generations of those who fear the Lord and keep His commandments.

A busy life of scientific pursuit was the happy lot of Hon. A. B. Brooks. He came into possession of the homestead and ancestral acres. His work took him into other parts of the State, but he always looked forward to a return to his home. He was a man of great energy and vision, and his life was a constant struggle to improve himself and his community.

to continue in special degree the nature studies he has pioneered in West Virginia. He is back to the farm now, engaged in all important work of revising his book on West Virginia Trees for a second edition.

You know the old saying that what the smart people are thinking now we will be talking ten years from now and people will be doing in twenty years. Mr. Brooks pioneered in thinking out conservation of our natural resources of trees, soil and water, and the blessings of wild life which accompany and flow from such wise husbandry.

About twenty years ago Mr. Brooks gave fruitful public service as a member of the State Conservation Commission. This was back in the days when there was little enlightened public sentiment to back up conservation measures and even less money to promote an educational campaign and carry out the many things he saw were so sadly in need of being done. He led in laying a sure foundation, only to see the work retarded temporarily by the scaly hands of politicians slipping in for patronage.

Then came Ogley Institute at Wheeling. Here the great plantation of the Ogley family, on the outskirts of the city, was set aside for nature study and adequately underwritten by the family. Here Brooks was given room according to his strength, and his work will live after him. The City of Wheeling took over the park features of the Institute, and Mr. Brooks was relieved of extensive duties, to devote time to revising his book on the trees of West Virginia. In addition to writing the text he does his own illustrating.

Mr. Brooks had been practicing practical forestry on eroded portions of his ancestral farm and not neglecting to add other trees at proper places for beauty too. In 1934, for the good of humanity in general and French Creek community and Upshur county in particular he decided to try out the idea of a proper observation of Arbor Day as a community project. A speaker would be called in on such a potent subject as home beautification by the planting and proper placing of trees and shrubs; a gift to each person present of a little tree; a trip through the wood and fields called a "bird walk." On these Dr. Brooks makes running comment on things with life as they turn up from his full store of wisdom from a life devoted to study of the wonders out of doors.

From the very first these Arbor Day exercises took with the people, and what a means to higher living they have proven to be. Too often we think of great movements for advancement of the race, especially in conservation of natural resources, as being brought about by national movements after the order of a great land slide or tidal wave of public sentiment. Great things often are small at the start. Fortunately is the community which harbors a seer like Dr. Brooks. His sphere of influence is the state and the nation, but he did not despise the small thing of making his home community conservation conscious. If he had never said a word or written a line, his example of reforesting worn slopes of his farm would have eventually led many of his neighbors to do likewise.

In Pocahontas County, Doctor Kenneth Hamrick is the apostle of reforestation of farm lands. He is setting out ten thousand pines this year of his Williams River plantation. Much ground on every farm is better fitted for timber than for any other crop. As the Conservation Committee of the Pocahontas County Rod and Gun Club, Dr. Hamrick is in position to advise and help secure forest nursery trees. By reason of the scarcity of labor, the State Forest Service can supply trees at cost of transportation. From now to May 10 is the good time to plant pines. The idea is to add to the beauty of the place, add to the health of the people, and help save our soil, water and climate, and provide timber for those who will live after us.

In this connection I have a letter from my former friend, Paul M. Brooks, down at Williamsburg, in Greenbrier County, in which he says he has "just finished cutting out some trees this evening. I have started quite a young forest on the farm. You see, three years ago I set out in trees 4 acres of hill ground that was not producing much grass—2,000 black locust, 500 yellow poplar, 1500 pine trees. The evergreens are Norway Spruce, short leaf and red spruce. This year I set out 100 red blossom dogwood, 300 black locust and about 150 more pines. The evergreens are a beautiful sight in a country where no trees grow. Come to Greenbrier and see a reader of your paper when you have time."

Judge Cuts Speeding Fine

As Wedding Gift to Youth
CINCINNATI.—"I'll give you a $5 wedding present," Judge Spraul said in police court. "Instead of $5 and costs, the fine will be $5 and costs." Judge Spraul was talking to Roy Bradford, 16, of Norwood, who was in such a hurry to get to Bethel, Ohio, to be married, that he drove 50 miles an hour in a 35-mile zone. The youth said that after receiving the citation he went on to Bethel and was married.

Women Chess Players

Eighteen girls entered the Russian championship chess tournament in Leningrad.

The Lobelia Farm Women's Club met at the Lobelia Lodge Hall for their April meeting. Thirteen members and two visitors were present; one of the visitors, Mrs. M. D. Vaughan, joined our Club. Mrs. Nettie Klunison had charge of the lesson. The topic for the day was "What kind of clothing do we need in wartime? There were several exhibits and demonstrations on the practical clothes we should wear."

Mrs. Barbara Bragg joined in our recreation and we all had a lot of fun in the games and songs. We were adjourned and all members went down stairs where Mrs. Bragg and Mrs. McLaughlin demonstrated how to make clothes that will save the lessons of the nutrition class being conducted by Mrs. McLaughlin. The Club meets the 28th of May, at the home of Mrs. Clifford Hill.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Down in the Solomons and on the African coast the Crocodile Boat or tank lighters played a most important role in landing our invasion armies. These self-propelled, light fast boats haul tanks, artillery and other equipment from the big ships off-shore to the beach heads.

We need more and more of them, for they are essential to the successful operation of the war. They are made in several sizes from small fifty-footers, costing about $2,400 to the big 500-footers costing around $37,000. Your purchase of War Bonds every payday will help pay for them. U. S. Million Jews Slain in Poland

One-Third of Whole Number in Country Are Put to Death by Nazis.

LONDON.—One million persons, nearly a third of Poland's Jewish population, perished in three years of German occupation. Dr. Ignacy Szwarcbart, Jewish member of the Polish national council in London, told a New York Times correspondent, amplifying Polish government information on the new Nazi onslaught on the Jews.

Plans outlined by Dr. Alfred Rosenberg—who says that the Jewish problem of Europe will be solved when no Jews are left—are systematically carried out. The victims of executions by mass-murder and gassing are only part of the thousands dying through "the organized spreading of diseases and the artificial creation of conditions in which children, elderly people and the sick cannot survive," as Dr. Szwarcbart described it.

Million Others Menaced.

A million more persons, at least, are menaced by starvation and the lack of medical supplies. The Nazis make plain that all Jews not wanted for military reasons must die. Poland is now a mass grave. Jews from all Europe are brought to the Warsaw ghetto and separated into two groups: the able-bodied young and the children, old and sick, who are dispatched eastward to meet sure death. Lublin, indeed, has two ghettos, one for able workers, the other for the useless condemned to destruction.

One hundred twenty thousand have been brought from Czechoslovakia and tens of thousands from Germany, Austria, Hungary, Holland, Belgium and France. The Lodz ghetto, containing many Jews from the West, has been completely closed for several weeks and no news has been allowed to penetrate through its walls.

A government report tells how a mass electrocution was carried out at Belzec. Deportees from Warsaw were packed into a barracks and ordered to strip-naked, ostensibly to have a bath—then they were pushed into a room with a metal floor. The door was locked and current was passed. Death came instantaneously. A large digging machine was installed near by to dig mass graves.

Wise Explains His Stand.
Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, acting as chairman of a special conference of Jewish organizations, announced here that the organizations were convinced of the authenticity of a rumored Hitler order for the immediate extermination of all Jews in German-controlled Europe.

He listed the organizations for which he spoke as the American Jewish Congress, American Jewish Labor Committee, Agudath Harabanim, B'nai B'rith, Synagogue Council of America and the World Jewish Congress.

These organizations, Rabbi Wise said, had authorized him to invite the aid of any Christian organization ready to speak out on behalf of the Jewish victims.

Rabbi Wise explained that his group believed in the authenticity of the extermination order on the strength of affidavits obtained by the state department from Jewish sources of information in free countries.

Rabbi Wise said the state department documents included affidavits from "reliable persons who knew" of such atrocities as burning Jewish bodies into fat and soap and lubricants, and of the latest Nazi method of killing Jews by having doctors inject air bubbles into their veins. He said the earlier gassing with prussic acid had been found too expensive.

Radio Man:
Well I'll write you a line since I have some time down and have a little time.

I'm going to school here at the North American Aircraft Company for twenty-eight days. I am studying one particular plane
P-51. Then we are going back to Napier Field from here. I don't know how long I will be there, maybe be sent later to some other field. Boy that was sure some long ride coming over here. We were from Tuesday at 1:30 until Friday at 6:00 making the trip.

Those deserts we came through were worth seeing. Mountains with snow on them and so hot down in the valley you could hardly breathe. This is one of the most beautiful sections of the world. It is spring and everything is in bloom. Nobody would believe how nice the people are out here to the soldiers.

My buddy and I walked out on the road yesterday morning and a car picked us up and took us down to the shore of the Pacific Ocean for a while and then on up to the Beverly Hills Hotel. We got out there for a while and then went from there over to Hollywood and spent most of the day there. We were at the Hollywood Canteen you hear so much about. Seen and got the autograph of several movie actresses.
They are the most sociable people of all. You have heard Kay Kerr and her band and those question matches on the radio.
Well, he was there and we got his autograph too. We were in the N.B.C. and Q.B.S. radio studios. I know you have heard lots of those Hollywood programs.

We went from there back to Los Angeles and saw just about all of that city. It is a awful nice to be in such a large place. It is about the third or fourth largest city in the world.

The strangest thing about the whole trip was that of all the traveling we did and all the things we saw it did not cost us one penny for anything, not even our eats. The only money we spent was for a couple of beers.

All we had to do for a ride was to stop and face the traffic and look wishful. Two minutes was a long time to stand without a ride. A movie actor, Donald Wood, stopped in a car but he was not going where we wanted to go, so he told us how to get there.

Lots of them drove miles out of their way to help us soldiers out. Some asked if we had money, if not they were going to give us some.

When I started to get on the street car going back to Camp, up walked a lady and gave me a ticket good all the way on the street car and bus. Then she took my name and address, and said she was going to get me a date in town and would let me know about it. So I can't see where I have any kick coming to being sent out here.

This is a trip and opportunity that has cost me nothing and that millions of people would love to make and in civilian life it would have cost me a thousand dollars to make it.

The bad part of it was I only had 30 cents when I started out here about three days before pay day and I have not gotten paid yet and maybe won't until I get back to Napier Field.

Say, Moin, will you send me a little money just to spend. There are some real nice souvenirs and things I would like to get while I am here.

How is Dad getting along? I guess he is right busy now. Well write soon for I guess it will take several days to make the trip out here.

With lots of love,
Your son, Claude.

Frank Peterson, of the Navy, sends in the following poem to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Crate Peterson, of Marlinton:

tribute To The Navy's Seabees
By: Al Campbell, Knoxville, Tennessee

The Navy needed fighters and the Navy needed men,
So they organized the Seabees who

...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...
...the ... of ...

With a machine gun and a rifle
the Seabees learned to shoot.
We used a big machine gun and a thousand other things to boot.
They taught us how to march and drill, they taught us how to drown.

And we even learned to manage to get "seconds at the mess."
We learned the Navy lingo, we called it "head" and "deck" and
"swab."

We learned just how to "knock it off" like any other G.I.
They taught us all these many things in 13 weeks or less,
And what they didn't teach us at the rest we had to guess.

When we finished out our training, we left for Island "X."
We had all our own equipment, it sure loaded down our decks.
The Japs held the Island
when at last it hove in sight.
We knew that they were ready so we got prepared to fight.
We landed under heavy fire, there was plenty shot and shell.

But we rushed up to the beachhead and we gave them plenty of Hell.

We soon had wiped the Nipponese out and then we went to work Every Seabee did his duty—not a one was seen to shirk.
We built a mighty landing field,
a barracks and a dock.
About a hundred miles of road
we made from solid rock.

We got things finally squared away, it was mighty pretty to be seen.

Then we went back to the beachhead, where we saw our first Marine.

They had followed in behind us, though they said they got there first.

We had everything completely fixed, they could even quench their thirst.

From the hills of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli,
It used to be the Leathernecks,
but now it's the Seabees.

And when we reach the Pearly Gates, and stand at Heaven's scene.

There will be a Seabee waiting there to greet the first Marine.

ed has returned to Camp Bliss,

No report on the big mink in Chicken House has this season for the first time in several years.
There used to be two of them, but Eugene Mitchell got one. It was solid black and brought a big price.

Summers Dean made a pretty bird house. I have now something to watch, to see what bird takes up in it. My favorite is the thrush, but I know a thrush is not coming so close to the house to build. Not so many around as usual, it seems like. I imagine a goblin will take up in the house.
With a family of purple martins would pass through and take up.
This is expecting too much as I have seen no purple martins since coming to Peachmont.

Through the courtesy of Edgar

Friend and neighbor Corporal Raymond Dean, serving somewhere overseas, writes of game where he is. He says there are some of the kind common here, in addition to monkeys, wild boar etc. There is a black panther too; smaller and meaner than our panthers. He said to tell the Editor he will have for him some good panther yarns when he has settled the Japs and Germans and he returns home again. He mentions the sloth, a slow moving animal, weighing from 30 to 60 lbs.
It hangs upside down as it goes along the limb of a tree. Its food is the bark of trees. It has wicked looking claws. Corporal Dean also wrote of the iguana, a giant lizard which grows to a length of four or five feet. Its food is principally vegetable. Its weapon of defense is its able tail, with sufficient power to deliver a blow that might break a man's arm.
Mr. Dean and a friend caught and brought into camp one of these big lizards.

Don't let APRIL be your car's "Unlucky Month!"

Now is when a little care will help your car a lot!

There was never a Spring when your car needed a thorough check-over more than it does this year. No matter how little you may run it, you can't afford to have parts wear out or go bad. We're listing below some of the important things to do now—for your own and for Uncle Sam's sake, too. Let your Esso Dealer take care of them. HE'S A CREMLIN CHASER.

- ✓ RADIATOR. Have your Esso Dealer drain out anti-freeze, flush the radiator with clean water and a radiator cleaner, if necessary; then refill with water plus Tri-Rad Rust Preventive. Remember, rust causes deterioration even though you may be running your car a hot less this year.
- ✓ CRANKCASE. Another Spring "must" is to drain out the winter-worn oil, clean the crankcase with special flushing oil and refill with the proper summer grade of long-wearing Esso Motor Oil.
- ✓ TRANSMISSION-DIFFERENTIAL. These valuable gears are hard to replace nowadays! Have your dealer drain out the worn winter oils and replace them with the proper Summer grade of new, fresh Esso Lubricants.
- ✓ CHASSIS. The chassis of your car has taken a beating through the Winter, so have your Esso Dealer give it a Verified Esso Lubrication—the lubrication job that puts the right lubricant in the right place.
- ✓ BATTERY. Reduced driving due to gasoline rationing has probably put your battery through a hard winter. Be sure to have your Esso Dealer check it and recharge it if necessary.
- ✓ TIRES. How far have your tires gone since you had them gauged and switched so as to extend their life as far as possible? If it is over 2,000 miles have your Esso Dealer check them with the Tire Tread Depth Gauge... and switch them immediately, if necessary. Two tire-wearing tips: 1. Maintain 32 pounds pressure at all times (the new war-time standard). 2. Never drive over 35 miles per hour.

TO OUR SAVINGS DEPOSITORS:

Due to a great reduction in our loans and the decrease in demand for credit loans and the very low yield in Government and other high grade bonds of reasonable maturity, which make desirable bank investments, we have found it necessary to reduce the interest rate on savings deposits to one and one-half (1 1/2%) per annum, effective on JUNE 1, 1943. Our action is in conformity with sound banking practice.

We regret that conditions over which we have no control make necessary this change. The business which you have entrusted to us through the past forty-four years is appreciated, and we invite you to continue to make use of our facilities for all your banking requirements.

In Memoriam

In memory of my loving mother who departed this life a year ago, April 20, 1942.

One year has passed, dear mother Since God took you away. To live with Him in heaven, That had or perfect day.

He knew your heart was burdened With toil and care down here, He knew it best to take you, To live in peace up there.

We loved you, yes, we loved you, But God, He loved you best, He took you from a world of care To mansion of the blest.

We miss you, dearest mother, More than tongue can tell; We pray, when life is ended, In heaven with you to dwell.

There will be no parting, No tear drops fill the eyes; We'll live with you forever In that land beyond the skies.

Mrs. Guy E. Dean Lobelia, W. Va.

Applications for membership in the local War Ration and Rationing Board, in the form of a letter signed by each adult member of a family, or by a consumer not a member of such unit for himself. The applicant shall either in person or by mail present to Board a sealed envelope containing the letter and War Ration Book No. 1 issued to the person for whom application is made. The letter shall give this information:

1. Name of each applicant with serial number of Ration Book No. 1 submitted.

2. Street address or RFD number, town and county of residence.

3. Total number of quarts or pounds of finished fruit to be processed.

4. The amount of sugar to be used in making jams, jellies, preserves and butters—not more than five pounds person within the 15 pound overall maximum.

Applications, whether in person or by mail, shall be received by the Board for processing at a future time. To prevent confusion, no sugar allowance coupons shall be issued at the time of filing application, but shall be mailed direct to the applicant as soon as possible. These coupons are valid until February 29, 1944.

A fourth coming amendment will declare one stamp from War Ration Book valid for 10 lbs., or less, at applicant's option, of sugar for home canning. This stamp—not yet designated by number—will be presented directly to the retailer. Its validity period will be announced.

Applications by mail with postage due, cannot be accepted.

The Board will record the number of pounds of sugar granted each person on the cover of his War Ration Book One and issue Sugar Allowance Coupons in denominations of 1, 3, 5 and 10 lbs. for the amount of the allotment.

Each Sugar Allowance Coupon will be marked with the serial number of War Ration Book 1, and the book itself must be presented to the retailer for checking when a coupon is "spent."

Persons desiring sugar for home canning where the product is to be sold should inquire of Board for special information concerning such application.

The figure fifteen in this memorandum for the maximum number of pounds of pounds of sugar to be granted to each applicant is correct, and supersedes the previous release naming the amount to be issued as twenty-five pounds.

Woman Welder Issues Challenge to a Duel

PASCAGOULA, MISS.—Attention, woman welders.

Mrs. Jennie Mae Turner, who holds an assortment of welding records at the Ingalls shipyards here, challenged any woman welder in the United States to a welding duel.

Mrs. Turner claims she can do more welding in a day than any other woman. On the record she has:

Finished a 200-hour task welding course in 22 hours.

Often completed a nine-hour welding quota in five hours.

Blonde Mrs. Turner won't tell her exact age (which, confidentially, is under 30), but she says she is the "youngest grandmother employed in any shipyard."

KANSAS CITY.—A fine wild fowl dinner or two flew right smack into Mrs. Roy Jordan's kitchen window.

Hearing a crash, Mrs. Jordan discovered that a covey of quail, off the beam, had tried to fly through the glass. Fifteen died of broken necks.

The birds are in Mrs. Jordan's refrigerator.

The three Navy dive bombers, which been down at the Marlinton airport since Sunday May 9, were able to get in the air and away on Tuesday, May 18. They were forced to make an emergency landing by reason of low lying clouds. The planes were being serviced from Columbus to Norfolk.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA, COUNTY OF POCAHONTAS, TOWN OF MARLINTON, to-wit:

I, J. W. HILL, Recorder of the Town of Marlinton, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the ballot to be voted on at the regular municipal election to be held in the Town of Marlinton, Pocahontas County, West Virginia, on Tuesday, June 1, 1943, as certified to me, according to law.

Given under my hand this 19th day of May, 1943.

J. W. HILL, Recorder, Town of Marlinton, Pocahontas County, West Virginia.

Applications for membership in the local War Ration and Rationing Board, in the form of a letter signed by each adult member of a family, or by a consumer not a member of such unit for himself. The applicant shall either in person or by mail present to Board a sealed envelope containing the letter and War Ration Book No. 1 issued to the person for whom application is made. The letter shall give this information:

1. Name of each applicant with serial number of Ration Book No. 1 submitted.

2. Street address or RFD number, town and county of residence.

3. Total number of quarts or pounds of finished fruit to be processed.

4. The amount of sugar to be used in making jams, jellies, preserves and butters—not more than five pounds person within the 15 pound overall maximum.

Applications, whether in person or by mail, shall be received by the Board for processing at a future time. To prevent confusion, no sugar allowance coupons shall be issued at the time of filing application, but shall be mailed direct to the applicant as soon as possible. These coupons are valid until February 29, 1944.

A fourth coming amendment will declare one stamp from War Ration Book valid for 10 lbs., or less, at applicant's option, of sugar for home canning. This stamp—not yet designated by number—will be presented directly to the retailer. Its validity period will be announced.

Applications by mail with postage due, cannot be accepted.

The Board will record the number of pounds of sugar granted each person on the cover of his War Ration Book One and issue Sugar Allowance Coupons in denominations of 1, 3, 5 and 10 lbs. for the amount of the allotment.

Each Sugar Allowance Coupon will be marked with the serial number of War Ration Book 1, and the book itself must be presented to the retailer for checking when a coupon is "spent."

Persons desiring sugar for home canning where the product is to be sold should inquire of Board for special information concerning such application.

The figure fifteen in this memorandum for the maximum number of pounds of pounds of sugar to be granted to each applicant is correct, and supersedes the previous release naming the amount to be issued as twenty-five pounds.

Woman Welder Issues Challenge to a Duel

PASCAGOULA, MISS.—Attention, woman welders.

Mrs. Jennie Mae Turner, who holds an assortment of welding records at the Ingalls shipyards here, challenged any woman welder in the United States to a welding duel.

Mrs. Turner claims she can do more welding in a day than any other woman. On the record she has:

Finished a 200-hour task welding course in 22 hours.

Often completed a nine-hour welding quota in five hours.

Blonde Mrs. Turner won't tell her exact age (which, confidentially, is under 30), but she says she is the "youngest grandmother employed in any shipyard."

$1.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Our Army and Navy Boys

Pueblo, California,
Saturday night.

Dear Cal:
Just a few words to my hello to the friends back there in Pocahontas County. Hope everything is just fine back there. Well, we are supposed to have Sunday for an undetermined destination but I hope to have a lot of luck and some of these days I will be back to see all of you. Probably with a (censored) for souvenirs. We have been restricted since Wednesday so most of the boys are anxious to go and we sure have a swell bunch of boys to go over with. Plenty of them are from West Virginia and Kentucky, so you know they will not have any mercy on them (censored). So I will close now and hope to see all of you soon.

Fyt Rufus J. Elliott.

Sergeant Berton Smith, of the Air Service, stationed at Sioux City, Iowa, is home on a short furlough.

Corporal John Tate Hiner is home this week on furlough. He is in the Transportation Service, and will go to the Mississippi State College for further training.

P.F.C. J. D. Bostic, Co. C, 88th Medical Battalion, Camp Beale, California, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bostic, of Millpoint, has been promoted to the grade of Corporal.

Marvin H. Dill, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Dill, of Cam, won his Navy "Wings of Gold" and was commissioned an Ensign in the Naval Reserve this week following completion of the prescribed flight training course at the Naval Air Training Center, Pensacola, Florida.

Prior to entering the Naval service, Ensign Dill received his B. S. degree from Marshall College.

In August, he began preliminary training at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base in Anacostia, D.C., and successfully completed the course late in November, before reporting to the "Annapolis of the Air" for intermediate training.

Having been designated a Naval Aviator, Ensign Dill will go on active duty at one of the Navy's air operational training centers before being assigned to a combat zone.

E. A. Dilley was in this office on Monday to get the old home paper sent to his son, Private Everett W. Dilley, Hq. Company, 1054 Eng., P. C. & R. G., United States Army, Fort Screven, Georgia. Private Dilley left here May 13, for Columbus, Ohio.

Miss Anna Lee Adkinson, of Marlinton, has received a letter from Rufus H. Fittwater, dated May 10, in England, stating that her brother, Robert Lee Adkinson, is with him now and they are getting along all right.

Miss Adkinson also sends in the following letter from another brother, William, who is stationed at Key West, Florida:

May 18, 1943.

Dear Anna Lee:

I will try to answer your letter I received today, and was sure glad to hear from you. I hope this finds you all well and getting along alright. I am O. K. at the present time but would like to see you all.

I got a letter from Bob; he is in England and is alright so far. I am getting a furlough in July for sure so I will be seeing you all before long. Oh, yes, has Ed Cutlip gone to the army yet or do you know? Tell Dad hello and for him not to get too tight. Bob said to tell Dad and all of you hello and that he would like to see you all. He says England is a very pretty country. I wish that I was over there with him. It is getting hotter down here every day.

Oh! yes, has Dad got the new tires for the car yet? I bet he will be glad when he does get them. Well, Sis I suppose I had better sign off for this time hoping to hear from you real soon. I am sending you a little poem that you can have Mr. Price put in the paper if you want to.

So good by now and answer soon.

Love, Bill

MY FOUR FOOTED FRIENDS

I had a little horse,

And his name was Chief,

But now he's on the menu,

As barbecued beef.

I had another little pony,

And his name was Sam,

But now he's disguised

As sugar cured ham.

So it's ashes to ashes,

Dust to dust,

If the glue factory don't get them

Then the butcher must.

Surprise Blackout

I might have caught on that something unusual might be sprung on us last Tuesday night by the presence of Major Easley and P. J. Cochran, of the State Office of Civilian Defense in Pocahontas County all day long.

Along about nine o'clock that night it came—an order from headquarters calling for a surprise blackout. By both good luck and good management, the blackout proved entirely successful, in spite of the presence of Major Easley, Army Liaison Officer, and Mr. Cochran, director for the Second Congressional District. You know how it is, when company is around and you want to put the best foot forward. The gentlemen from the captain's office complimented our county organization upon its fine showing of efficiency and the hearty cooperation of everyone. All lights went out in Marlinton on the first signal, except a few homes and offices where the people had gone off and left lights burning. So far as I could make out, the surprise blackout on Tuesday night was just as effective as any where the organization and public had been put on notice before hand, with the exception that the posts were not quite so heavily manned. However every post had a big percentage of its workers reporting for duty.

If we never have an enemy bombing raid the training of the people to act as a unit is a healthy public exercise. Of course, the odds are now against America being bombed in this war, but there is still the chance. Of course, the odds are against an enemy air raid in Pocahontas County, but if it does come no one knows where it will hit—so, be ye ever ready.

This is the first war I have ever experienced—that is not being fought on the excitement being. So far, the Army and the Navy are in charge. In peace time, we paid little attention to the urging on the part of the Army and Navy for a program of preparedness. Now we are paying dearly for our lack of foresight.

The Army has to do with Civilian Defense. And the Army has been pushing civilian protection this spring more than ever. High military men have put more emphasis on the home front than heretofore. They know, and I think that I begin to see more clearly, if the tide of battle continues to go against our barbarous enemies, they may lose great gas attacks from the air on America. Read the words of our State executive of Civilian Defense:

"Certainly our Army officials have more to do than worry about people at home if they thought for a minute that there was no need to give them attention. With our many fighting fronts and long supply lines, our fighting department is plenty busy. But when men who are also helping to direct fighters emphasize the need of stronger civilian coordination and knowledge of war then the tip should be heeded."

"But there is one last thought and that is even if we are never bombed, the fact that we are prepared to cope with the enemy raider, is even more reason why they will never come our way. The Axis never seeks a fight with someone who can trade punches and Civilian Defense is a strong punch for us at home."

There will be Union Services at the Arboreale Church, Sunday morning at 11:30. Rev. Hugh Jefferson, of Cass, will bring the message. There will be special music and it being Memorial Day the services will be in keeping with the day. The public and those who have loved ones buried in the Arboreale cemetery are invited to attend the services.

J. H. Ellis, of Jacob, brought me an unusually large and fine Indian arrowhead the other day. He had picked it up when working on his farm. The material is the iron gray flint of the Greenbrier lime.

The P. T. A. will sponsor a Rummage Sale on Friday and Saturday, May 28th and 29th in the Cunningham Building on Third Avenue.

Great will his absence be to all who knew him.

Mrs. Sterl Shinsberry found an old time big copper cent piece in her garden at Minnehaha Springs one day last week. It is about the size of a half dollar, and the date is 1847. It shows little sign of wear. It was not many years after the date that the style was changed to the present small sized cent.

Upon his retirement as state Conservation Commissioner Mr. Gray is back with the Extension Department of the University. Farm Labor Director

Morgantown—Clyde Bussard, well-known farmer of Minnehaha Springs, has been selected by the West Virginia Agricultural Extension Service to aid County Agricultural Agent Ben Morgan in the work of recruiting and placing of labor with the farmers of Pocahontas county, who will need help in carrying out their farm programs this year. He will have his headquarters in Marlinton in the office of Mr. Morgan.

As an assistant worker in the Extension emergency farm labor program, Mr. Bussard, a successful farmer in his own right and well acquainted with the farm labor needs of the county, will aid county agricultural agent Morgan in receiving application from farmers who will need help this year, and from adults not now employed, who are interested in getting farm jobs on a full-time, part-time, or season basis. He will also cooperate with school officials of the county in the selection and placing of high school boys on farms during the vacation period, and the placing of youths, aged 16 to 24, not in school, in full-time and part-time farm jobs.

After the workers are placed on the farms, Mr. Bussard and Mr. Morgan will keep in touch with them and their employers throughout the season and will supervise the general relationships between the farmer employers and their new hired hands.

Farmers in this county who will need help of any kind this season, should communicate at once with the county agricultural agent's office and state what type of workers, they will need, and how many of them. The Extension Service will then try to place on the individual farms the type of workers requested. Persons wanting farm work are also requested to apply at the county Extension office.

Bernard Sharp and Lee Rose report the killing of a big blowing viper on Elk Mountain. The snake was over three feet long and plenty big and heavy. CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR

THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1943

Effective April 24 the government took over the 1943 wool crop of America under Food Distribution Order No. 50. The order requires that wool with certain exceptions must be sold and purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

This is a war time regulation and need not go into lengthy discussion of the necessity of this rather drastic action to keep down inflation and high cost of clothing like what happened in other wars.

The exceptions as applied to local wool producers and dealers are, I think, of especial interest to our farmers. For instance the provisions of the order as regards local merchants set out that they may purchase lots of less than one thousand pounds of grease weight, the same as always. However, if a farmer clip amounts to more than a thousand pounds the country merchant—called a "secondary handler"—can only take it on consignment, to be shipped to a "handler," along with smaller lots of the "secondary handler" has purchased. The term "handler" means a person who has entered into a Wool Handlers Agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation under its 1943 wool purchase program.

The wool will be sold according to grade. As new as I can figure out first grade will bring around fifty-seven cents a pound at the warehouse of the "handler." The lower the grade, the lower the price. Off of that top price must come cost of handling, freight, shrinkage, and other things like the percentage of low grade wool. Such overhead and risk must be taken into consideration by the "secondary handler"—the country merchant—in fixing his purchase price.

Naturally, when a country merchant has a contract with a wool manufacturer or broker, he can quote a specific price to the producer. Under the present consignment requirement of lots of a thousand pounds or more, the producer knows that he will get what his particular grade of wool will bring him, less proper handling charges.

But, where does the country merchant and the farmer stand as regards price to offer and price to accept on lots of less than a thousand pounds under present arrangements? If the wool grades first class, and there is small shrinkage, handling charges can be lumped off at around six and a half cents a pound. However, you know and I know, all wool is not top grade; there will be heavy shrinkage in some lots; dirt, burrs and moisture. The overhead handling is just as heavy for an inferior grade as it is for top. So my guess is that the country merchant who gambles more than fifty cents a pound on the general run of wool is taking a long chance.

Granville Moore, on Stony Creek, recently caught a white squirrel. It is a true albino, with pink eyes. The little creature has become quite tame, and make an interesting pet.

The other afternoon Zed Smith Jr., and Dewey Stemple were taking the air by a walk through the Smith fields around Stillwell. They came on to a big blacksnake. Their idea was to pierce the snake up a bit and they rained mud, full of dirt and gravel on him. Instead of racing away from that place, the snake threw himself into offensive-defensive position and stuck both ends up; striking out with gaping jaws and fluttering a blunt tail rapidly. That was no way for even a bluffing black snake to carry on, so the men got a board and killed the snake. It proved to be one powerful big old black rattlesnake. Somehow he had lost all his rattles down to the last button. This rattler was truly black; with the usual yellow markings not showing at all.

Henry Oscar, of Millpoint, killed one powerful able snake on Round Hill between Millpoint and Island Ford of the Greenbrier one day last week. It was six feet six inches long. In color a light gray, with darker markings. Its sharp tail was pointed with a bone or horn projection. Put it down as a hoop snake, a pine snake or a bull snake. The unusual thing about this snake is being found so far up the Greenbrier River. East and west farther south this snake is not uncommon. I once saw the skin of a pine snake eight feet long. A reliable man told me he had measured one ten feet long. I have heard of pine snakes up to twelve to fifteen feet long, reaching clear across a wagon road. Out west this snake is called toe bull snake. Out there they say, at certain seasons, these snakes give utterance to roarings like the noise of bull frogs. They are constrictors, and egg and snake eaters right; quail and young rabbits and poultry are not despised by them either.

The story of the hoop snake is of ancient and honorable standing. Children are playing on the hillside opening of an early settler. The older sister, a girl of ten years, sees a big hoop snake, with tail in mouth, rolling directly toward the children. Hurriedly she gathers her brood of two little brothers and little sister behind a big sugar tree which has been left for sugar and molasses. The hoop snake rolls toward the tree. When it is in striking distance, it lets go with such force as to drive the bony tip of its tail through the thick bark of the tree and into the wood. There the snake remains, an unhappy prisoner. The father kills the snake next morning. Before the sun of another day sets, the leaves of the tree wither from the effects of the virulent poison.

My young friend James Jefferson Monroe, Chatham Hill, Smith county, Virginia, son of Rev. and Mrs. D. M. Monroe, formerly of Greenbank, was in a clipping from their local paper, Smith County News. It is the picture of a 540 pound black bear killed May 2, on the slopes of White Top, not far from the Monroe home. This was Old Hitler, a 20 year old bear which was killing too many sheep for the contentment of the farmers. Incidentally, White Top is one of the high points in eastern United States, about 5500 feet above sea level.

James Jefferson is the younger of the two sons of Rev. and Mrs. Monroe. His brother Mac is in the Signal Corps, United States Army. He is now stationed Philadelphia, being trained in radio. James was a lively small boy the last time I saw him in the Manganese at Greenbank. I never told the little incident at home, but I had been called up to Greenbank on some sort of a speaking occasion at the school, with Arthur A. Wood, Superintendent of Monongahela National Forest, and a son of Mrs. Monongahela. When we all got ready for the meeting, James noticed that Arthur Wood did not wear a suit. He asked if I was not going to dress up. What a kick the Arthur Wood did get out of the remark of innocent childhood.

Enjoy eye-easy evenings at home with enough good lights!

MONONGAHELA SYSTEM

Our legions now march from the valley. In strong lines for battle they go. To form at the front they will rally. And carry a fight to the foe. O shatter their heads from the hail. Shield the home from the storm. Shelter poor children frail. Keep our aged from harm. The trumpet and pibroch are calling. We hear the long roll of the drum. Though harvest of war be appalling. With faith of their fathers they come.

"How did I know you'd need bombs?"

MORE than half the bombs this country makes exist by what you might call an "accident."

"Some accident, too! I saw it happen. It was 1935. We research workers at Esso were trying many things with petroleum to see what else we could learn about it. And up came a process for synthetic tolulol.

"Well, you need tolulol to make TNT. But coal-tar was providing all the tolulol the country needed—then.

"However... all the tolulol you could get from coal-tar would make for less than half the TNT we're using now! The other half is made by that Esso process perfected back in 1935.

"Now... I didn't know then that you'd need bombs, and neither did you. And I can hear a lot of people say 'Boy was that discovery a lucky thing!'

"But I don't call it luck. I call it the American idea at work. We hit on that process because free American people expect so much that American companies have to learn everything they can about new and better methods just to stay out front in business.

"If this war didn't prove anything else, it would prove that nothing like America ever existed anywhere before.

"What other idea ever did so many people so much good in peacetime? What other idea ever turned out so much might so fast in time of war?"

My Mom and My Boys

Mr. C. W. Dille, of Dunmore, made in the following letter from his son, Kyle, who is now on duty in California:

Sunday, May 9, 1943.

Dearest Mother:

This Mother's Day I will write you a few lines to let you know I am O. K. and working every day and night. I go to work at 1 o'clock at night and work until 5 o'clock. I am on guard for one week and I will be glad when it is over.

I hope you all are well. I got Mabel's letter Saturday and was glad to get it. I do not have much time to write in here now. We are training hard in the desert. I am in a big army down here.

What is Dad doing now? I would like to be back there working on a farm. I do not like it here at all. It is so hot and the sand blows here just like snow blows back home.

I would like to be at home with you today Mother. Do not worry Mother, for I am well. I hope to see you all some time soon in the good old West Virginia.

I will be here until about the 15th of July. We may go back to Indiana and I hope we do.

There was one boy got killed down here. He got shot. He was in the 121st Infantry. He was from New York.

How is the war news now? Good I hope. Well, Mother, I will have to close for this time.

Love, Kyle.

MARLINTON FLYER BOMBS KENDARI

Somewhere in Australia, May 17, 1943 (Delayed) (UP)—Captain Zed Smith, Marlinton, West Virginia, was disappointed because no Japanese Zeros rose to attack his formation of Liberator bombers.

when they surprised the Japanese at Kendari, in the Celebes Islands Sunday night.

"Some like we caught the Japs unaware because our attack was so well timed," Smith said. "The weather was good and I was disappointed not to see any Zeros."

The raiders left five burning, including one in a fuel dump. Only light anti-air fire was encountered and this was silenced and all the attackers returned safely.—Charleston Daily Mail.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

Girls are in training, too...at universities, under the new pre-graduation program to fit them later for various auxiliaries of the Armed Forces. Ask them if they welcome a chance to pause and enjoy refreshment...the refreshment of ice-cold Coca-Cola. Who wouldn't?

Deliciousness in every drop. Refreshment in every sip. That's ice-cold Coca-Cola. Enjoy a Coke and you enjoy all the difference between something really refreshing and just something to drink.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Both mean the same thing... "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

After marches, what could be more welcome than the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola.

Prescription for Morale:

Think of Your Victory Motor Trip!

It's a blessed relief just to putter around fixing up the trailer more efficient-like... and sort of pipe-dreaming where you're going. But will you need a new car? All reports say it will be a long time after Peace before you can hope to get one. Be ready to go—in your present car... and why can't you?

Since rationing began you've probably "saved" more car-miles than you ever made on your grandest tour. After Victory you'll have those "stored-up" miles to use, especially if you don't allow present restrictions to cause acid-damage. Vicious acids are formed by internal combustion in any engine. When it stops it's an acid trap. It used to get rid of acids fairly well by warming up on long fast runs. But now it often "just sits" with those acids inside, and what can you do?

You can have your engine OIL-PLATED internally to combat acid corrosion... much as outer parts are chromium-plated to combat water's corrosive effect. All it takes to OIL-PLATE your engine is the change to Conoco N^o 1 motor oil. Patented N^o 1 oil seemingly "magnetizes" OIL-PLATING to metal—much longer than just temporarily.

This standard OIL-PLATING, joined direct to inner engine surfaces without all draining down to the crankcase while standing, is your shield against acid. Now when even new parts are scarce—let alone new cars—you'll cut off a big worry for the present and future by having your engine OIL-PLATED. Just change to N^o 1 oil—at Your Nearest Conoco Gas Station. Continental Oil Company.

CONOCO N^o 1 MOTOR OIL

A called meeting of the Synod of West Virginia will be held in the First Presbyterian Church in Charleston on Friday, May 28. Rev. J. C. Wool and Calvin W. Price will attend from the Marlinton Church.

Farm Labor

It was every one in agreement that the farm labor shortage was more acute day by day. It is expected that the shortage in season, plans must be made now.

Department of Agriculture has the Extension Division in charge of supplying and organizing farm labor in each county.

The county agent's time is divided between many duties, which have increased in number. I have been asked to assist him in organizing the Pocahontas County Program.

If the program is to be successful, it will be through cooperation of all farmers. It will be impossible to contact every farmer to get his suggestions and learn his needs.

In order that all farmers may have opportunity to help, I will be at the County Agent's office each Saturday. If you have a suggestion, need a farm hand, or know of one that might be placed on some farm, let us have the information.

I know it's going to be a tremendous task with few and, in many instances, inexperienced workers, but organization and strategy win battles. Let us plan our line of attack for harvest while crops are growing.

MARLINTON, POCAHONTAS COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA, JUNE 3, 1943

SEVEN A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Our Army and Navy Boys

Fort Knox, Kentucky—A new large contingent of soldiers arrived here this week for three months of rigorous basic training in the Armored Force Replacement Training Center.

Private Edward A. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moore, of 149 Second Avenue, Marlinton, West Virginia, is among the new trainees.

Topping off 13 weeks of orientation, specialized study and physical hardening will be a full week on the Battle Training course, where the men undergo maneuvers with live ammunition. Bellets whizzing 30 inches above the ground, exploding land mines and hand-to-hand combat are among features of the course.

First six weeks are devoted to organization of the Army and the Armored Force, insignia of rank, military courtesy and discipline, care of clothing and equipment and other fundamental subjects.

During this period the men are drilled according to their knowledge and ability, so that in the second half of their basic training they are assigned to specialize in light tanks, medium tanks, scouting and patrolling, mortars, anti-tank guns, machine guns, assault guns, reconnaissance or other phases of Armored Force fighting. The training center is commanded by Major General Charles L. Scott.

The following letter was received by Mrs. Goldie Lee, of Huntersville, from Sanford Simmons, somewhere in Australia. Mr. Simmons is the husband of the former Miss Jewell Underwood, niece of Mrs. Lee, who is now driving an army truck in Baltimore.

April 30, 1943.

Dear Aunt Goldie:

I have traveled quite a ways since I wrote last. This trip put us off in Australia. The trip was the worst. Of course I had to get sea sick, and that is everything they give credit for being. I thought I had been sick before but sea sickness has it all beat. Along with being half scared it was quite an experience. But I would do it again to get back to the good old United States.

These Aussies speak the same language as we do, which helps a lot. Their money was hard to get used to at first. They go by pounds, shillings and pence. One of their pounds is equal to about $3.20 in our money.

We drive on the left hand side of the road here, although it is not as hard to get used to as you would think. I have not seen a good road since I have been here. They still use the narrow gauge railroad, and think they travel pretty fast. One of our trains would scare them to death I guess.

I have seen a few kangaroos. The mosquitoes sure are bad here. They sure did chew on me when I first came here but I do not pay much attention to them now.

We are having our fall here now. Winter comes in June, July and August.

Sanford,

May 28, 1943.

Hello Mr. Price:

How is dear old Pocahontas

County these fine hot Utah evenings! We West Virginians sure do miss those beautiful hills.

The Army life certainly swell, but I sure would love to see my wife and three children. They are true West Virginians, and still live in Greenbank.

Give my best regards to all my friends in Pocahontas.

Mr. Price would you be kind enough to put this poem in the Times. There are so many slackers all over the country, and I hope they can read those firm lines.

We'll keep the home fires burning and we will keep them flying over Tokyo and Germany. Also keep the Pocahontas Times coming to my address here at Kearns, for I sure look forward to them.

My best regards,
Cdt. Opl. Loran S. Jordan,
510 T. G., 40 Sd., 345 Flight, Kearns, Utah.

"OH YOU SLACKER"

"You're helpless tonight, and weary,
Almost too scared to think,
Now on a Slacker's downy pillow
You lay your rosy cheeks;
You have a mighty story,
Lying, passionate, and untrue;
Only be patient, your parents
Tell you, I'll see that you don't have to go.

Pain has been your companion,
Every night and day,
Often the Slacker's shadows
Seemed to surround your way;
Yet we press on for your freedom,
Our Country we love best;
We love to have the privilege,
And someday, Slacker, we will rest."

Corporal Samuel F. Spencer has returned to Fort Benning, Georgia, after spending a furlough with his sister, Mrs. B. C. Tracy. This was his first visit home since entering the Service on November 12, 1942. Corporal Spencer was awarded an expert gunner's medal recently.

C. Paul Spencer, A. M. M. 3-2, has been transferred to the west coast following completion of the prescribed training course at the United States Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Florida.

Major Snedden was a reserve officer in the Engineer Corp. before being called to active duty in March, 1941. He has also received two service stripes, one for active service before Pearl Harbor and one for nine months active service overseas.

Technical Sergeant Daniel Gordon Sharp came home from the Army on furlough last Thursday. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sharp, of Frost. He is attached to the Medical Corps, and is stationed at Camp Shelby, Mississippi. He has been in service eight months. This was one of the most enjoyable programs of the year.

turned to camp after spending his furlough at home.

My young friend, James L. Carpenter, late of Dunmore, now of the United States Army, sends me a picture post card of the famous railroad, cut off across an arm of Great Salt Lake, in Utah. Attached is a little cloth poke containing a thimble full of salt.

His buddy, Gerard J. Canier, of Maine signs the message too, and I appreciate that also: "Here is a little souvenir I got for you, as I know you get relief of all kinds. We have just crossed this lake. It is beautiful to see. So long." The description of the card reads: "Fifteen miles west of Ogden, Utah, you actually go to sea by rail over the famous cut-off across Great Salt Lake. Affording a unique view of this great inland sea. This cut-off extends west 102.9 miles across the northern arms of Great Salt Lake to Lucin. It was opened March 8, 1904, having cost $4,500,000 and two years of effort. Seventy-two miles of the way the rails are laid on land and for thirty miles on rock fills and heavy trestle work. The Great Salt Lake is more salty than any other body of water except the Dead Sea of Palestine."

Charles William Yeager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Yeager, of Charleston, on May 13, 1943, received his commission as Lieutenant in the United States Army on graduation of a communications class at Yale University.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Dilley, of the Draft community now have five sons in the United States Army. They are Leo and Carl, now in England; Ashley now in Africa; Roy in South Carolina, and Floyd, stationed in Maryland. All five of these boys left from Mansfield, Ohio, where they were employed when they were called. Two of them are married: Floyd, who married Pauline Jordan, of Marlinton, and Ashley, who married Maude Doyle, of Stony Bottom.

Private Eckell F. High, of the Air Corp, stationed in Alabama, spent a twelve day furlough with friends at Beard. He has been in the army for seven months. His address is Private Eckell F. High, 1076 A. A. F. T. - B. F. T. S., Courtland, Alabama.

Private Guy Jones, who is stationed at Camp Gruber, Oklahoma, spent a twelve day furlough with his mother, Mrs. Maude Jones, at Millpoint.

P. F. C. Richard H. Auldridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Auldridge, of Millpoint, who has been in the Medical Corp and stationed at Camp Livingston, Louisiana has been transferred to the Finance Department. His address is P. F. C. Richard H. Auldridge, Headquarters Third Army, Finance Section, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Miss Madge Underwood has received a letter from her brother, Sergeant Lloyd Underwood, who is in the Service. He says he is well and getting along fine. Sergeant Underwood volunteered for duty on October 17, 1940, from Fort Hayes, Ohio. He has been in Iceland for months.

Miss Underwood has two other brothers in service: P. F. C. George Underwood, of Camp Davis, North Carolina, and Private Gordon Underwood, of Warrensburg, Missouri.

The following poem was sent in for publication by Corporal Ralph M. Hannah, Btry. C, 370th F. A. Bn., A. P. O. 449, Camp VanDorn, Mississippi:

THANK GOD WE WON'T NEED YOUR KID

You can say he can't stand the Army.

The life is too rough for him;

Do you think that he's any better

Than some other mother's Tom or

Jim?

You raised him up like a girl,

He don't smoke in your house,

If all the boys were like him

What would become of our flag?

You say his girl couldn't stand it,

To send him off with the rest,

Do you think she would be glad,

When she feels a German's breath on her breast?

Think of the women of Belgium,

Of the cruelties they have to bear

Do you want the same thing to happen.

To your innocent daughter so fair!

You can thank God that the stars in Old Glory

Are blurred of that kind of stains

Because there are ten millions of soldiers

That had red blood in their veins.

They go to drill in bad weather,

And come in with a grin on their face.

While your darling sits in the parlor,

And lets another man fight in his place.

Maybe we do smoke and gamble

But we fight as our forefathers did.

So go warm the milk for his bottle.

Thank God we don't need your kid.

BUY Your War Stamps and Bonds Here

ALONG THE WAY

By SUSAN R. PRICH, M. D.

Elderly and stay-at-home women are working diligently at war work here, as everywhere else. You meet many of them on their way to Red Cross headquarters, with knitting book, yarn and needles, for overseas production mainly.

I am reminded of a line of a poem I once read. It was the soliloquizing of an old tree with "its casting shadows on a wall where it would never be." So we do our own bit for warring areas where we will never be.

There is no question about being in the Victory gardens hereabouts, with hoes and rakes and other earth tearing instruments. One lady was noted hurrying homewards with a package of squash seeds, to an old garden plot, famous in ancient times, and worked steadily ever since, from generation to generation. Stopping to read directions on a seed package before the daylight faded quite away, a citizen was heard giving his neighbor timely warning he would not stand for any "fowl play" in his victory patch; that chicken scratching was out for the duration.

One of the new sights in Williamsburg these days is an Irish potato in an empty fruit jar. This attracts right much attention one way and another.

Spring seems finally to be getting off to a good start, after meeting with many set backs. One day up to 70 and 80 degrees, and then flopping back to freezing temperature. Richmond was the highest tempered place in the nation for a few hours recently.

I have an ancient, almost done for remnant of an elm tree, which once towered over the roadway and the house. Its rotted trunk still stands as high as the house. It is the mainstay of thrifty wisteria vine. The wisteria was nearly out in full white flower, but the cold of the mid May shivered the vine. The blooms are now hanging limp and apparently lifeless; done for this year.

The birds appear somewhat puzzled over it all; are singing less than usual, but are working hard on their nests, sober and diligently.

Seabee Burkhammer and wife from Webster Springs stopped in the other day, looking for a place to stay. He was quite surprised that I knew about Webster Springs. He thought I must be better educated than anyone he had met in Williamsburg. Sorry I did not have room for his wife and that no one else had either. The town is full and overflowing. Doubtless home in the Valley of the Elk looks mighty good to this young patriot and his wife.

Another Seabee, an elderly man compared with many of the youths Seabeing here, stands, dropped in. E. Lynn Davenport of Mt. Harris, Colorado, brought a word of greeting and remembrance from his family physician and my kinsman, Dr. Ligon Price. Seabee Davenport has had serious injuries in his time, but aside from a slight droop to one side, he appeared fit for the rigorous training for warfare scheduled for recruits in the York River jungles. He said he thought Dr. Price understood his case of multiple injuries better than any other physician he had consulted. That testimonial has a somewhat familiar sound, in my ears.

out by juke boxes before they became so mercifully scarce in these parts, is an old song buried in the past. However it is now revived by a world war and it seems headed to be the song of the duration.

Sunday, May 16, Williamsburg had a look at top rank members of the United States and British high commanders as they toured this region. The word went out that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill would be with the visiting party, but this was a false alarm. As the distinguished men of war came out of Bruton Parish church, from morning service, a crowd was on hand. However, the crowd was not so dense nor so wonderstruck as the time when a party of moving picture stars came forth from the same portals. This broke most records for crowds in Williamsburg.

A Seabee, dosing under a shade was aroused by his more watchful buddy to look at the military commanders of the United Forces. The sleepy Seabee, rubbing his eyes, said "Who's that all? The Salvation Army coming out of church?"

They tell the tale in Richmond about a conducted tour of Seabee visitors over the city. Argued by the eloquence of the lady guides over the significance of the city and its hallowed past, with remains lying around loose of historical interest, and carried away with patriotic enthusiasm and war spirit, two youngsters

Dear Cal:
I am just wondering if you could tell me how long I will have to be in North Carolina in order to become a "tarheel." Well, I am not trying for that title anyway, and by the way, how did that nickname originate? One of the native patients told me it had reference to their "stick-it-toiveness" during the Civil War. I was always under the impression that it had to do with tar products produced in the state. How about it?

But what I started out to write you about is the word "Watoga." I find that word quite common in the eastern part of Tennessee and the western part of North Carolina. Although they spell the word "Watoga" I take it that it is the same word. I have always been under the impression that it was an Indian name and if so, was there a tribe by that name. I felt pretty sure that you could straighten me out on this.

I am getting along pretty well I guess. My biggest and about the only job is resting and that can get pretty tiresome sometimes. I have seen Clyde Bussard a couple of times since being here. Mrs. Baxter was through here some days ago; also my daughter, Pat was to see me last week. Otherville folks from "God's Country" are pretty scarce although the two patients next to me are from the Valley; one from Staunton and the other one from Harrisonburg. Most of the patients are "furriners" from the South. Drop me a line when you have time. Regards to Simmons and all.

C. C. Clendenen.
Veterans Adm. Facility
Oteen, North Carolina

Dear Charlie:
Delighted to hear from you. That the rest of your friends share my pleasure I am doing the inexcusable—publishing a personal letter.

As for that tar heel business, they cannot make a Tarheel out of you any more than any length of time spent in Virginia east of the Blue Ridge would make you a Tuckahoe. Tarheel and Tuckahoe are names applied to the residents of the Piedmont and Tidewater pine growing regions of North Carolina and Virginia way back by your people and mine of the valley and mountain sections. We were Cohoes, but somehow or other that nickname did not stick. I have heard a number of labored guesses at the origin of the word Cohoe; that it was a Gaelic word used by the Scotch-Irish; that it was Indian, meaning a bad man to stir up; that it was a cut down from the word cohesive, applied to the Scotch-Irish for their clanish habits.

Tuckahoe Plantation is some where on James River, in the Lynchburg country. East to the Atlantic was the English settlement; west were the valley and the mountains, taken over by the mighty migration from the North of Ireland and from the Palatine Provinces of the Rhine Valley. In this connection let me say that our mutual friend Joshua E. Buckley has been studying the book of names of the settlers of East Virginia, who came over the first one hundred years. These names are all English and Welsh; no Scotch nor Irish. In other words, plenty of Prices but nary a Clendenen.

The Piedmont and Seaboard sections are pine country. From the first, naval supplies especially tar, have been very considerable commercial products. The outlets was through the port at Wilmington largely. Nature took its usual course down there and the nickname Tarheel spread to all residents of the old North State.

North Carolina topography has its Coastal Plain, Piedmont and Mountain divisions like Virginia. The North State received, generally speaking, its tides of migration from three inlets. The English on the Coast through Roanoke Island and Wilmington; the Scotch and English through Charleston; the Scotch Irish and so-called Pennsylvania Dutch—the Palatines—through Philadelphia and then by way of the Valley of Virginia.

When the Scotch Irish came down about two hundred years ago in the Mecklenburg country around Charlotte they met the Scotch coming up from Charleston, South Carolina. You have heard of the irreconcilable forces meeting the immovable object. They melted to go forward with the tides of like peoples through Pittsburgh, the Greenbrier Valley, Big Stone Gap, to win the West.

The point I am so tediously trying to bring out is that while Tarheel was never applied to a Virginia post of Lynchburg, that ancient Tarheel soon spread and stuck to every native of North Carolina. Don't you, dear Charlie, take on any airs and get stuck with the name Tarheel. First you were a Cohoe, which did not stick. Later the ancient and honorable name of Soake was applied to our of the mountains. As near as I have been able to figure out the nickname is of New England origin. The Minute Men went into the French and Indian and Revolutionary Wars under a banner of strange device—a rattler rampant. Up in New England they took for their own the Minute Men name, and then dubbed them Snakes. Once on the Plains of Abraham, around Quebec, our Snake Flag triumphantly waved; the next time General Andrew Lewis could not make history repeat, and times were just only tolerable like with us.

But how I do run on when you start me to writing. That Watoga name is Indian, Cherokee. The Watoga River is in that part of North Carolina which was cut off to make Tennessee. I am not sure whether the Watoga Valley was in the short lived State of Franklin; whether the Watoga sub-tribe of Cherokees took their name from the river or gave their name to it, I do not know. However, I would guess they took the name of their place of residence. I have heard the word Watoga means starry waters—that is, waters which reflect the light of the stars.

Years ago, our mutual friend, the late W. A. Ross, had as a sideline in his position with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad the naming of new stations as they came into being, where there was no name to go by. And, by the way, he did a rather nice artistic job of it, too, you will admit by checking on Rainelle, Thornwood, Winterburn, Watoga, Sixty, Dennmar, and scores of others. Incidentally, I never liked the name Violet for the flag stop at the mouth of Beaver; I preferred former names, Dan and Island Ford.

Mr. Ross knew about the Greenbrier Valley being northern ridge and hunting ground of the Cherokee Nations. He liked the name Watoga, and, having some historical significance, he gave it to the mill town and station. Then came the State Park around these, and it most appropriately inherited the name.

Now, dear Charlie, these are my angles of what you asked about and I am sticking to them until some one pulls better ones on me.

Regards,
Calvin.

"Awash amidship!" "Sparks!" the radio operator, has sent his final message from another U-boat victim. The lifeboats are pulling away from the doomed vessel as millions of dollars' worth of food, supplies and munitions settle to the ocean bottom in another allied catastrophe in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Millions of dollars' worth of material that was paid for by the dollars we saved and invested in War Bonds. Thousands of man hours have been lost.

We can have but one answer: work harder, save more and invest more frequently in War Bonds.

Bambalings and ruminations: A really beautiful and very expensive dressed young girl running up and down the street in front of the Astor and knowing grins on the faces of onlooking Broadwayites vanishing suddenly when they learn that the man and girl are really father and daughter. Tall and graceful Katharine Hepburn turning into 44th street and heading for the St. James theater. Mayor LaGuardia who appears to have taken on a bit of weight, riding by in his war car busily scanning official looking papers. A trio of song writers in a low-voiced huddle at 47th street and Broadway, probably trying to dream up some new rhyme with "moon." A dirty-faced street urchin moping along behind an over-stuffed and over-dressed dame with her nose upturned smugly, and who is all unknowing why so many strollers are smiling.

A group of misers, as colorfully dressed as if the season were spring, chattering along Park avenue. It develops they are on their way to rehearse for some amateur production to be given for charity. They remind me of my own stage career—once performance in an amateur offering titled, "The Charity Ball," in Dickson's Grand Opera house. After that, I was fully convinced it would be better to stick to newspaper work. A doorman well over six feet and with weight in keeping, leading a pocket-sized Pom. While a bantam doorman leads a Great Dane almost as large as himself. Must be a gay life that of a doorman in a ritzy apartment house. But then there are tips. Quentin Reynolds, who soon will resume his travels, towering over other avenue pedestrians.

Humanity of all degrees clotted at Fifth avenue and 42nd street waiting impatiently for the light to change. Gloria Swanson smiling at friends as she hurries up the avenue. A bespectacled youth coming out of the public library with his arms loaded heavily with books. Must have a lot of research work to do. Press agents going into the library to seek for words to put into the mouths of clients. A panhandler, who in keeping with the times, has switched his line. Instead of a nickel for a "cuppa coffee," he pleads for subway fare to Brooklyn where a job awaits him. Bootblacks of various complexions and ages, lined up along the 42nd street wall of Bryant park, and all keeping a watchful eye out for some cop who might be hostile. A woman with bright purple hair. Evidently a beauty shop tactical error.

The motley throng, mostly male, strolling 42nd street staring at posters of girly shows or into windows of stores selling sporting goods. Among them, clean looking young men in uniform, a startling contrast to nondescript attire and general slouchiness. A white-faced, sunken-cheeked young girl catching a glimpse of herself in a widow mirror, and turning away with a clutch at her throat. There's one in mine too. A peddler of 25-cent spectacles who guarantees a perfect fit of money back. Wonder where he'll be tomorrow at this time in case a customer tries to look him up. Probably take more than a pair of specs to see him. A peddler of good luck charms who looks as if he could use one himself.

A light-footed colored boy dancing for pennies on 46th street, and probably hoping that he will be noticed by some musical comedy producer. The driver of a big bus who evidently thinks that pedestrians have eyes in the backs of their heads, almost scoring a double hit as he swings around a corner without even so much as a look of the horn. While a taxi driver shows he's human by stopping to let an old couple cross the street. The usual procedure is to cause a race acceleration by racing the motor.

Leut. Harold Bostwick, who used to be one of the key (bored) men in Leo Reisman's orchestra, spending some of the best hours of his furlough at the Hickory house, sitting in with Eddie South's band during a post-midnight jam session. Five children, ranging in age from 4 to 12, peeping into the Savoy Plaza's cafe lounge during the day to see where "daddy works"—"daddy" being that ebullient Celtic warbler Morton Downey. Sally Keith, the "tame" dancer in the late "Priorities," dominating her tassets to "Bubbles LaRue." Bill Baird's puppet stripe at the Rubin Bleu.

Volume I number I of the Jefferson Republican has come to hand. It is the personal organ of one Raymond J. Funkhouser, of Charles Town, Jefferson County. It is circulated free "to lead men in the government, in the church and of the press," and to any one else who will write in for it. It fairly sizzles with hot political dope, of the out moded stand pat variety. Be it remembered, last year Mr. Funkhouser offered for the republican nomination for United States Senator. His candidacy was looked upon as somewhat of a political joke. At least it was not taken seriously by the republican organization leaders until the vote was being counted. The turnout was small, and Mr. Funkhouser came within a grazer of receiving the nomination—less than 200 votes, in fact. Political seers have been a telling me Mr. Funkhouser would seek the republican nomination in next year's primary. These old "gray wolves" also have been a telling me they have taken the measure of the man; that instead of attempting to laugh off his candidacy they have their guns loaded with a plenty to blow up the ground works from under him should he again raise his political standard for the control of the republican party. Mr. Funkhouser, while new in West Virginia political affairs, is an experienced man in the game. He has held office in New York and in Maryland.

The United States Civil Service commission has announced that women interested in becoming radio operators, radio repairmen, radio telephone operators and radio teletype operators are urgently needed by the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

Temporary Civil Service positions are available for women upon enlistment in the WAAC. Appointees to these training positions will be placed on inactive status and attend school as civilians until completion of a three to six months training course. Salary of $120 a year plus overtime payment for time beyond a 40-hour week will be paid. In addition, a subsistence allowance of $8 per day will be granted to trainees who are required to attend school outside the city of their residence. Applicants must be between the ages of 21 and 45 and possess a high school education. The training will be given at West Virginia Institute of Technology at Montgomery, West Virginia. Upon completion of training, enrollees will be called into active service and sent to one of the WAAC training centers for four weeks' basic training before being assigned to permanent Signal Corps stations. U. S. Is Calling All to Colors

Will Use Everyman Able to Turn Hand to Help in Winning War.

WASHINGTON.—Every able American will be getting some kind of training by the end of 1943 in the nation's effort to win the war. Millions of men and women will have to adapt themselves to new ways of working and living. At least 5,000,000 women, for instance, must receive production training over the next 13 months, for many of the women upon whom industry is depending for its new labor supplies never have worked outside their homes.

Increasing numbers of men will go into the armed forces; city youths will be trained to plow fields, milk cows, raise chickens on farms. High school boys and girls will be trained to do janitor service, work in stores, do housework and take care of children. Tiny youngsters will be drilled for air-raid protection.

Work for Handicapped.
Even the physically handicapped, capable of working and free from defects that might endanger theirs or another's safety, will be taught to be useful.

The Office of War Information reported that approximately 15 million American women, or less than 23 per cent of the total female population, have paying jobs and that only four million of them are doing war work.

This compared with the total of 11,100,000 working in 1940 and the estimated 18 million women who will be working outside their homes by the end of next year, the OWI said.

In 1940, 1,400,000 were doing work involving national defense, OWI said, predicting that by the end of 1943 the number of women war workers would rise to six million, or 30 per cent of the expected total labor force of 20 million in war industries.

The OWI also noted that the Nazi government had made an about-face in policy regarding women workers.

"Germany as early as 1939 had sidetracked her prejudice against allowing women to leave children, church and kitchen and had 37 per cent of all of them in jobs," OWI said.

Figures on German employment of women in 1941; given by the International Labor Office, "indicate how close to maximum utilization of available manpower Germany had then reached," the statement said.

In that year, 64 per cent of the German girls aged 15 to 19 were gainfully employed, 44 per cent of the women 20 to 25, and 13 per cent of those 26 and over.

Work for 90 Million.
President Roosevelt, in a recent statement, estimated that the number of Americans who will be engaged either in the armed forces or in war work of some kind, will total 62,500,000 by December, 1943.

Through the volunteer training program of the Office of Civilian Defense, Mr. and Mrs. Average citizen are being turned out as first-rate air-raid wardens, airplane spotters, nurses aids, fire fighters.

Additional thousands of volunteers are being trained by the American Red Cross, the American Women's Voluntary services and other organizations in first aid, to make bandages, to repair trucks, drive ambulances and run canteens.

Aviation companies are training workers in every field, and communications and transportation companies have thorough, short-term programs to put workers through the paces before their experienced help is taken away.

Most far-reaching of federal services is the vocational training program. In the last 23 months, 3,100,000 persons have been trained for war work under this plan in 2,500 vocational schools.

Sugar Harvest To Set Record

Florida Everglades Crop to Yield 100,000 Tons in Six Months.

CLEWISTON, FLA.—The largest raw sugar mill in the United States reached a capacity output of almost 1,000 pounds a minute as 4,000 pickers harvested the war-rattened crop in the Florida Everglades. From the 30,000 acres of cane under cultivation in the rich much soil surrounding the southern banks of Lake Okechobee will come more than a record 100,000 tons of raw sugar during the next six months.

This together with sugar produced in other sections of the United States must partly supply the needs of a nation whose imports have been cut off by the war. Before Pearl Harbor, the United States depended upon Cuba, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Philippines for more than two-thirds of its total consumption.

Destroyed Four Years Ago.
Four years ago the U. S. Sugar corporation, which operates 12 plantations in Florida, was destroying acres of the new precious cane. The federal government, under the sugar act of 1937, had limited Florida production to 1 per cent of the total amount used in the United States.

Shortly before December 7 the restriction was lifted by presidential proclamation. But it was too late. The producers who suddenly were called upon to step up production found that machinery and other materials needed for the expansion were not available.

Today they are attempting to replace with research and efficiency of operation what they lack in facilities.

The Florida corporation maintains two laboratories and a staff of scientists who are constantly experimenting with varieties of cane in an effort to get the utmost return from a planting. The sugar house, which formerly operated on two shifts a day, has been placed on a three-shift, 24-hour-a-day schedule.

Sugar for the Soldiers.

This forced-draft tempo of operation has spread to the fields and the plantation homes of the Negroes who reap the cane. It is reflected in the made-up songs they sing as they swing the machete-like can knives.

"Cut it short and get it all in. . . gotta send more sugar to the soldier man," is the type of chant that is heard above the metallic ring of the sharp blade against the brittle cane.

The Everglades harvest will continue until the middle of May, almost a month longer than last year. Jay W. Moran, vice president of the corporation, predicted that it would be the largest in the Florida industry's history, more than doubling that of five years ago.

Smaller Infection Following Surgical Operations.

DURHAM, N. C., April 20, 1943. Dr. Hart's experiments began in 1938 with ultra-violet rays, when it was found that 200 out of 1,735 surgical patients contracted unexplainable wound infections, 19 of them dying. After numerous experiments he decided that infectious organisms were being carried into open wounds by ventilating air or by the breath of the surgeons themselves. A five-year study followed, during which he visited hospital operating rooms in nearly every state in the Union. His belief was confirmed by thousands of experiments.

With the aid of the Westinghouse Laboratories he adapted a mercury-vapor ultra-violet light and rigged it up in his operating room. Immediately the percentage of infected wounds fell from 11.9 to 0.26 percent, and not one patient among 2,500 cases has died of this kind of infection since.

Several years ago his discovery was adapted to throw a germ-proof screen of light between bank tellers and the public.

In bakeries, too, where they are used, they keep the food sterile, and in manufacturing plants, dairies, etc., they effectively kill all germs.

Dr. Hart received his A.B. degree from Emory University, Atlanta, in 1916; his master's in 1917. In 1919 he was graduated in medicine from Johns Hopkins University, where he remained as an instructor in surgery until 1929, when he went to Duke.

Dysentery Is Checked By New Sulfu Remedy.

BALTIMORE—A new sulfu drug that very nearly sterilizes the intestinal tract and gives startling cures in dysentery—severe disease of soldiers and children alike—has been reported. It not only reduces the danger of infection and death in certain kinds of surgery but greatly relieves post-operative gas pains.

This powerful cousin in the famous sulfu family is succinyl sulfathiazole, developed by Dr. Edgar G. Poth and his associates, Dr. F. Louis Knotts, Dr. James T. Lee and Dr. Frank Inui, of the department of surgery, Johns Hopkins medical school. It is reported in the February issue of Archives of Surgery.

In humans the drug reduces the number of bacteria in the large intestine to one-millionth of its normal population, or even less. Relatively so few organisms remain that the danger of peritonitis or deep abscesses after operations on the large intestine is tremendously reduced.

In 100 human cases there were "no deep abscesses and no peritonitis following operations due to failure of the drug to be effective," Dr. Poth said.

A Former Lobster Bait.

SEA PERCH IS IN DEMAND

PORTLAND, MAINE.—Although strikes, bad weather and war-bans have choked off the usual supply of ocean fish for New Englanders, thousands of pounds of pink sea perch daily are being shipped to western and midwestern communities.

Perhaps, because it lacks a distinctive taste, natives here rarely eat perch, preferring halibut, haddock and cod. But inlanders find the small fish and in 1941 alone one large company bought 10,000,000 pounds from local fishermen.

Before 1938 and the erection of a large fish processing plant in Portland, the sea perch, also known as rose, brim or red fish, was almost a nuisance to druggers. Then the fish was sold generally for lobster bait.

Our Army and Navy Boys

This letter was received by Miss Doris Arbuckle, of New York, from Private Stanley Nelson, who is somewhere in the South Pacific:

April 20, 1943.

Hello "Toots"

I will try and answer your letter I received last evening and was real glad to hear from you. This leaves me getting along O. K. except I am having an awful battle with the heat. Hope you are getting along fine. Gee, it sure was nice to get some mail. It was the first I had received since I left the States. Why doesn't Clyde write to me?

I am in the South Pacific but I can't tell you where. It is very nice here but it does not compare with the States. Well, I won't tell you about my trip over here, for you don't like to hear it any better than I like to write. ha ha!

Well, if you were here you could get all the bananas, oranges and tangerines you could eat. Yes, and gee, you should see these girls over here. The soldiers don't fight much over here, ha ha! Tell Clyde I said to write me once in a while and write V-Mail. Your letter was mailed on March 31, and I got it on April 29. Well, be good. Answer soon.

Love, Stanley.

Erbacoon, W. Va.
May 20, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:

One of our boys was in from the Army and when he went back I was so blue I sat down and put my feeling on paper. This is the way I feel about our boys.

Sincerely, Eveline Sharp.

A TEN DAY LEAVE

He came home from the Army, just on a ten day leave. Today he has gone back to camp and left me alone to grieve.

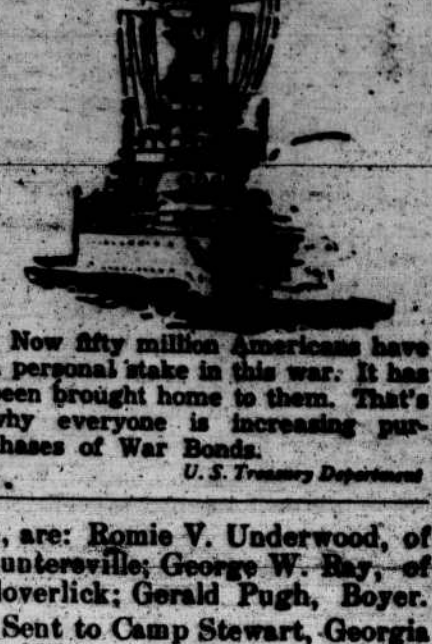

Oh! why couldn't he have longer to stay here at home with me! In parting I would be much stronger.

Then I would on a ten day leave. But I guess Uncle Sam needs him. And I should know better than cleave.

And it surely makes me happy. When he's home on a ten day leave.

WAR BONDS

When Japan attacked Pearl Harbor we had 21 million Americans in the war bond drive. We were making preparations but the war did not wait. There 22 battle wagons and American tankettes three billion dollars for a two ocean navy. The war seemed far away then.

Now fifty million Americans have a personal stake in this war. It has been brought home to them. That's why everyone is increasing purchases of War Bonds.

New Bandage Stops Wound Infections

BALTIMORE—Development of a tough and translucent film of medicated cellulose which can effectively shut out infection from war wounds and burns, yet is easily carried in a soldier's first-aid kit, was reported here.

The paper-thin, pliable sulfadiazine bandage was developed by Dr. Kenneth L. Pickrell of the department of surgery at the Johns Hopkins medical school.

Particularly valuable in the case of burns, the film also has been used in surgery for such purposes as covering recent incisions, lacerations and abrasions and hastening "closure and regeneration of perforated eardrums."

Dr. Pickrell disclosed that the discovery came from the use of a solution containing sulfadiazine.

"This solution, when used on burned patients, had several disadvantages," he wrote. "Since it was an aqueous solution the drying time was slow as compared with other forms of treatment, and the film formed over the burned surface was thin and fragile."

"In an attempt to remedy these difficulties methyl cellulose has been added, and this has definitely enhanced the drying and film-forming properties."

"While studying various drying agents and plastic substances it occurred to the writer that a pre-formed sulfonamide film might serve a very useful purpose in surgery."

The first such films were made about a year ago, and Dr. Pickrell termed them "rather crude." Now the technique has been altered somewhat so that the resulting film is "thin, strong, pliable, slightly elastic and translucent," he said.

U. S. Air Corps Officers Share All, Even Illness

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—Lieut. William Coleman of Jackson, Miss., and Lieut. William Rowe of Boston are another pair of U. S. air corps officers who have shared their good—and bad—luck together since the Pacific war started.

They graduated from Kelly and Randolph Fields, together, went to the Philippines on the same transport last November, were in the same shack, and each has been credited with three probable Japanese planes shot down.

SEABEES OFFERS OPPORTUNITY

The new plan of voluntary induction offers men between the age of 18 and 38, who have not been called for induction, a more direct and simplified approach to the Seabees.

The Navy Construction Battalion, Chief N. W. Grimes of the Elkins Navy Recruiting Station announced today under the new plan, the applicant first goes to his nearest Navy Recruiting Station where he will be interviewed by a Construction Officer, and where he will be given a preliminary physical examination. If accepted, he is then given a letter to take to his draft board. This states that the applicant is qualified for special service in the Seabees.

Fat Kine or Lean

By E. L. HALL
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Features)

OTTO hour was on at the lunch counter of the All-American Bus terminal, and Mr. Otto Semberking was busy. Not that Otto was not busy every noon hour; but that today he was much busier than usual. He was contemplating, nay, was bent on doing a momentous thing.

Ordinarily, his business was "san'wiches 'n' cawty." Today, in a large measure, it was Miss Gertie Weinkoop; one of the All-American ticket-sellers—the lean one with straight hair and slim legs, third from last window on the right.

Gertie had come to his section for lunch. More than this, Gertie had been coming to his section for luncheon every day, now, these past three weeks.

To put his present case in his own expressive words, Otto was "nuts on Gertie." His cardiac center was demanding of him that he propose marriage to her not later than ten thirty that evening.

Now had Otto only stopped to think about it; there was a slight obstacle to the consummation of his desire. It was this: A first Mrs. Otto Semberking was still very much in the flesh—some hundred and eighty-nine pounds of it—wandering about somewhere up in the Pennsylvania sticks, wondering where her dapper husband had gone.

Otto Semberking was a fugitive from matrimony. Understand this. Not from matrimony as he had dreamed of it in adolescence; was now dreaming of it—a hybrid sort of conjugal union with an ideal. But from the real thing—the common garden variety of union with excess weight and too much tongue.

A year ago—back in his pre-war New York days—Otto had suddenly decided that he could and would no longer endure those twin evils—weight and words. They just spoil any wife, no matter how many kilowatt-hours of love she may be capable of generating.

People used to wonder at them, he knew, whenever Mrs. Otto came—and she came often—to eat the Star-Quick Lunch up in Peaville, Pennsylvania, where Otto worked.

So Otto had lit out. Now, dead to the old life (for never a bus from Peaville, Pennsylvania, finds its way to his All-American), he had risen fast in the new. Already he had forgotten how hick towns look. Also, he had forgotten other women and was concentrating on lean Gertie Weinkoop. No more fat ones for Mr. Otto Semberking, he would tell the world. He could take his pick yet—a while. "Don't look a day over twenty-three."

And he did not, although he was actually ten days beyond his three-week-and-thirty-day limit. His cheeks looked more strong and full. His eyes held the lure of youth in their sassy depths. Only a silly round chin-dimple kept him from looking quite a man.

"Now, This Is the Way I Mix Them"

Every woman these days is interested in learning something new about her cooking job, whether it's mixing cookies or preparing a full meal for the family. Uncle Sam wants us strong,
... and we can be that way only by eating ENOUGH of the RIGHT KINDS of food EVERY DAY. Our home economists are giving demonstrations in many cities and towns. Betty May, our "voice of the air" over WMMN and WPAB, is another source for information about selecting and preparing foods. Groups, big and little, are talking about food everywhere. It is America's No. 1 subject and all of us want to know more about it.

I hope you all are well. I am well and getting along fine. Do not worry about anything for I will not let you down. I will be back as soon as I go over and get a couple of Japs. Then you will have a good home with me. Well, I am climbing up the ladder as I am now a Sergeant.

Your brother, Sergeant W. W. McLaughlin, Btry. B, 29th F. A., Fort Bliss, Texas.

Sunday evening, May 30, 1943

Dear Aunt Cora: Just a few lines in answer to your letter of a few days past. I hope that you are feeling fine now.

I am well and getting along fine. I still am working in the Lab and also out in the planes now. I took my first plane ride week before last and I liked it fine. I could go up here most any time, but these new pilots have too many accidents to suit me. A P-70 plane crashed into a lake here Tuesday morning. The pilot and two radio men were killed. The cause was not determined, but he was dog-fighting with another plane and got into a spin and crashed.

I had a three day pass last week end. I went to Orlando for two days and spent the other one here and went fishing. I did not catch any fish, but it afforded a little sport and pastime.

I went to town last night and went to the show. Today I am just lying around camp in the shade, but still am about to melt it is so hot. I had a letter from W. P. this past week. He is getting along O. K. He has been on maneuvers so I imagine he has been too busy to do much writing.

Tell all hello and write when convenient. Regards to all.

On Saturday afternoon the funeral was held from the Bruffy Creek church by his pastor, Rev. R. M. Marshall, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hips, a former pastor, and Rev. J. K. Fleming. Interment in the church yard with Masonic honors.

In his life, Squire Bruffy carried out the high traditions of his people. For forty years he taught school; for many years he was Justice of the Peace; for several terms he served as deputy sheriff and county surveyor. From early life, he was a professional, stalwart Christian, and for many years an officer in the Methodist Church.

Not lost to those who love him. Not dead, just gone before; He still lives in our memory. And will forever more. A.E.

On last Friday an Army air plane made an emergency landing at the Marlinton Airport. It was a student pilot making a flight from Winston-Salem to Rosopoke in a test flight. The young man got off his course, and when he found Marlinton he was just about out of oil and gas. He landed safely; soon was out-fitted with oil and gas; took the proper bearing, and was on his way.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smith, a son, Eugene Carlyle Smith, June 1, 1943.

Wool Pool

The County wool pool will be assembled and graded at Marlinton on June 18 and 19, with all wool to be on hand by 10 a. m. on June 19. A total of 7,919 fleeces are listed in the year's pool, with a total weight of approximately 38,000 pounds.

Col. E. L. Shaw will be in charge of the grading assisted by the County Agricultural Agent Ben Morgan. Demonstration in classifying wool, and why certain fleeces are graded as rejects will be given. All farmers are urged to attend and learn how they can improve quality of their wool.

There are 83,958 fleeces in the State wool pool this year with an approximate weight of 425,000 pounds. Pocahontas has the largest county pool, followed closely by Ritchie county. The price is 56.75 cents per pound for clear medium, an increase of 3.45 cents over last year. This breaks all previous high marks. Rejects are 48.75 cents; fine staple 45.75, fine clothing 40.75, mohair 50 cents, tags 15 cents.

Wool producers, who have pooled their wool, who contemplate trouble in transportation for their wool to Marlinton on either June 18 or 19, should see their district manager. These managers are G. C. Board, Hillsboro; Oley Jackson, Marlinton; Hevener Dille, Huntersville; Howard Hevener, Arbovale, and H. L. Stokes, Durbin.

It is a matter of regret, but it will be impossible to accept any wool which has not been officially consigned and accepted by the State Wool Pool Marketing Association.

THURSDAY, JUNE 10 1943

I like the idea of each State taking a flower as an emblem for its banner, but I would stop there and not go into the bird business. We made a mistake by adopting that predatory, rapacious thief of a bald eagle instead of taking Franklin's advice and adopting the turkey, which is a purely American bird of fairly good morals and certainly of exquisite flavor. There is meaning in a flower, and you may wear it in your button hole, but who wants to strut around with a spread eagle or a titmouse on the lapel of his coat? Why, it is a misdemeanor for a lady to wear one on her hat. There is significance and beauty in the lily of France, the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland, the shamrock of Ireland and even the leek of Wales. A king of England wore an onion on his helmet at the battle of Agincourt, and a royal family took its name from broom corn.

I am glad that West Virginia took the rhododendron as its emblem, a native flower and also the blossom of an evergreen shrub. One other State has selected the same flower but of a slightly different variety. Most States have adopted native flowers, and the old commonwealth of Virginia wisely chose the dogwood; botanically known as cornus florida. Perhaps Ohio ought to have chosen the buckeye, but for sentimental reasons she chose the red carnation, the favorite flower of President McKinley. In the Nineties it was customary for Congressmen to wear a flower in his lapel. One of my most vivid memories is of Congressman Springer of Illinois, a man of large and handsome figure, invariably clad in a Prince Albert coat with a rose in the buttonhole.

I chanced to be in the gallery when he was debating with Joe Cannon, who later became Speaker of the House. In the progress of the debate both men grew warm. Springer had the floor and Cannon was popping up every moment with an interrupting remark. Finally Springer apparently began to lose his temper. He left the Democratic side of the House and strode across the dividing aisle to the Republican side, raised his voice in hot anger, clenched his fists and stood over Cannon, and it seemed certain that one of those big fists would land on his opponent's upturned face. Then suddenly Springer leaped forward, shoved the rose under Cannon's nose and said, "Joe, smell this flower! Isn't it sweet?" (Editor Robert Pemberton, in his St. Marys Oracle)

Junior Baxter of Edray, brought in a giant silk worm moth the other day. It was one of the Saturniid family. At a guess that name Saturn, is from that star with colored rings. Anyway its coloring was most beautiful. It seems these moths have such poor mouth equipment they are supposed not to eat anything. However, their huge larvae are such hearty eaters, they make up this lack in their final romantic stage of their lives. The silk bags, the cocoons, the worms weave, are often seen on the twigs of trees.

The Asiatic silk moth belongs to this Saturniid family. This one was introduced into America about 80 years ago, in the expectation that its silk might be used commercially. The hope never materialized. The book does not mention the introduction of the Chinese silk moth at Williamsburg nearly three hundred years ago, to establish an American silk industry.

Some years ago a lady fiction writer had a story about how the farm and home was saved from the clutches of the local flybuck by the bright little child of the family collecting and selling these beautiful silk moths to museums for a fabulous sum. Harm is done by such stories, for many people do not realize the tales are fiction, purely and simply. For instance, false hope was raised in the hearts of invalids who thought to sell the moths which came to their bedside lamps, and use the money to buy medicines. There is money value for some rare insects, but the college professor with the required knowledge to collect and classify does better by himself and his scholars in his lecture room.

Talking about the scientific collection of insects, I have heard the tale that the foundation of a West Virginia family fortune was collected at the expedition of this portion of the Appalachian region. The man and the fortune were made; whether the tale about the butterflies is so, I have never taken time to verify.

Anyway the tale is that back a few generations ago a teacher from New England came into the Kanawha Valley. During his summer vacations he spent his time catching and classifying butterflies. He had the necessary scientific knowledge, and in the course of several years he traveled over much of the Allegheny Mountain country of this region. When he had completed his collection, the British Museum purchased the collection and paid him a big money.

The scientist knew geology as well as biology. He took his butterfly money and invested it in wild coal lands down on New River. In the course of time, the investment grew into a fortune of great dimensions. The story ought to stop right here, but I guess I ought to add the sour note the money never seemed to prove a blessing to the family.

A young friend brings in a giant water bug. It is also called an electric light bug, because it is occasionally noticed flying about lights. This specimen was an able bug, two inches long, built somewhat like a turtle. They tell me such bugs grow to five inches in length down in the tropics. These giant water bugs are predatory, and with their sharp hooked front legs and short powerful back they even take in minnows.

The other day, Basil C. Sharp was fishing on Hills Creek. In a grassy place beside the stream he started to step over what seemed to be a dark, weathered chunk of wood. Just then a wild turkey hen fluttered out from under foot. She stayed near around, attempting to draw him away. Two little turkeys were seen hiding in the grass. There probably were others.

One of the prominent men of the State wrote up from Charleston that he had a mind to raise himself a mule colt, and where could a jack be found. In this county of Pocahontas I knew of none; we all have gone out of the mule business. I began an interesting search, and a horse trading friend put me wise to an outstanding animal in the hands of a reliable citizen down in Monroe County. Fee $15 and mares kept at reasonable charge. The country gentleman is Isaiah Kidd of Pickaway. My horse dealing friend says his word is as good as his bond, and both are of value. I gladly pass the word along, for there may be others who would like to raise themselves a mule.

Speaking about mules, a self examination brought surprise that I knew so little about this ancient and useful creature. One of my early recollections of horror was when the older brother was about to get his head kicked off by the old John mule. In our family circle mules were then out for the duration.

On the present good market, a mare mule will bring around twenty-five percent more than a horse mule of comparable quality. With mules, it appears the female is less dangerous and less devilish than the male. The horse mule is liable to become brightly, mean and mulish; study devilment with malice, a forethought, kill poultry and pigs for the love of killing.

Being as horse mules out number mare mules at the ratio of about three to one, I have unworthy suspicion it might be so this price differential may be just another horse trading trick.

The books say the mule is smarter than his sire the jack, and his dam, the mare. Also, that he has shape from the donkey and size from the horse. Any old chip of a mule, that a breeder would not consider for a minute raising a colt from, will produce offspring in the way of a high grade mule.

The mule has the advantage of being tougher and stronger than the horse; eats less and lives longer. This spring a neighbor felt he had to get rid of a forty year old mule. The animal got the idea he owned the place, and set out to run it to suit himself. The selling price was $5 cash, with further consideration that the old boy should be dealt on a market 150 miles from home. The farmer was running no risk of exposure to reproachful glare from the evil eye of the old rogue.

In our family was the story of the old army mule of McNeil's Rangers in the late unpleasantness between the states. One of the daring exploits of the Rangers was the raid into Cumberland to capture General Crook and General Kelley. In the quick get away, General Kelley was put on a traveling mule, and taken to Harrisonburg by way of South Branch. This mule could keep up with the horses in any fast narrow movement. After the war, no one claimed the mule, and he lived off the country. Old Rockingham was full of McNeil's men and other soldiers and that mule was always fed. In 1935 our family left the Valley for a better land in these Endless Mountains, and I was never told what became of the old army mule. I guess it is most too late now to find out.

Thinking up about mules, I recall the honey—the old spring of the male horse and female cow. They say the male is very superior in size, strength and beauty to the honey. If so, I say, a honey must be a honey for looks. At one wild guess that name honey gets its h from horse and its inney from henny, the female donkey.

Thinking about mules I was curious to know where the word mule comes from. The book says the latin is mulus, supposed to be connected with the greek word molos, meaning labour, and with the good old english word, mool, meaning trouble.

The people of Britain never went in so strong for mules. Southern Europe is the mule country. I have wondered if the early French and Spanish settlement of the Mississippi valley fixed the mule habit of that region, with mule breeding centering in the good livestock regions embracing Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri and Kansas.

Several hundred years ago, the French government got the jitters in fear the wholesale raising of mules would cut down the supply of horses for the armies. The breeding of mules was prohibited by law. You know the answer; just another instance where prohibition failed to accomplish its purposes. Mules seemed to spring spontaneous from the soil when the farmers of Southern France were penalized for breeding them.

A CRISIS IN EDUCATION

That the nation is facing a serious problem in education is indicated by a statement issued early in May by the United States Office of Education in Washington. Some statistics supplied by this office show that last October there were 7,500 unfilled teaching positions in the public schools and an estimated 2,700 faculty shortages in the colleges. In addition, close to 190,000 teachers new to their jobs were placed on public school payrolls. Colleges, too, experienced many replacements, 18,000 of them. The number of vacant classrooms in public schools increased from 7,500 at the beginning of the school year to 13,000 in March.

These facts, says the Office of Education, reveal the following picture: Fewer teachers everywhere, fewer pupils; colleges closing for the duration; vacant public school classrooms; untrained teachers; in the war centers; overcrowded classrooms and overworked teachers; everywhere increased truancy, delinquency, illiteracy.

The cause of condition, of course, is the demand of war. Great numbers of teachers have entered the armed services, and the prevailing low salaries in the profession have caused a great many others to take jobs in the government or in war industries. These are in addition to the usual losses of teachers due to death, retirement or marriage. Efforts now being made to overcome the shortage include draft deferment of teachers, salary increases, using inexperienced teachers, recalling retired teachers, retraining married teachers, extending the retirement age, retraining teachers for other courses, discontinuing courses, and increasing the size of classes.

Notwithstanding all these measures, the Office of Education declares that "the situation is getting worse, and so far there is no remedy." The picture is not an encouraging one. Apparently its only bright side is the fact that educators and civic leaders are awake to the situation and are earnestly seeking the solution.—Christian Observer

Pocahontas Farmers Asked For 550,000 Dozen Eggs

Pocahontas county poultrymen are asked by the government to produce approximately 550,000 dozen eggs this year, 3 per cent more than in 1942, as their share in the Food for Victory program, the National Poultry Defense Committee estimated this week.

This county goal, which is based on the percentage increase suggested for West Virginia by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, can be reached if adequate supplies of labor and feed are available, declared Committee Chairman Hobart Creighton.

West Virginia poultrymen, who produced a total of 40,083,000 dozen eggs in 1942, are asked for 41,303,000 dozen this year as their share of the national egg goal of 4,780,000,000 dozen.

Letters and News

The following letter was received by Mrs. James L. Carpenter, from her husband, who is in the Army, and stationed at Camp Beale, California:

Dear Ma and all: Will write and tell you about my trip from Camp Phillips, Salina, Kansas, to California. Hope you can get some pleasure out of reading this as you know I am no author, ha-ha! We left Camp Phillips on Tuesday, May 18, at 9:30 p. m. We rode to the station of Smolan, stored our baggage and pulled out about 11:00 p. m. We stayed up for a while and then turned in for the night. Occupied berth No. 7.

Wednesday, May 19—Got up in Colorado. The terrain is still rough with some rolling ground and some hills at a distance. The grass and other vegetation is not as far advanced as in Kansas. The soil here looks similar to ours. Later—We just ate breakfast in the diner. We had scrambled eggs, bacon, potatoes, toast, oatmeal and coffee. It is 7:15 a. m., and we just passed a town by the name of Haxel, Colorado. It is now 9:30 and we are sitting at station in Pueblo, Colorado. Did not get a very good view of the city as we came in. As we have a 2 or 3 hour wait Frenchy, another boy and I took a walk up town. I learned it has a population of 75,000, and instead of a soldier getting the breaks, as most civilians think, we could not buy a bottle of beer or a drink of whiskey before 5 o'clock in the evening. A soldier is drafted in the army to fight, preserve and keep everything the civilian enjoys, and then the man in uniform does not have the pleasure of a good sheep dog. When that happens it really burns you up.

Well we finally left Pueblo about 12 noon. There were several Indians standing around the station when we left. I noticed one in particular with long hair tied up behind like a woman's. The scenery through this section is beautiful. The terrain now is growing rough, with hills of solid rock, or it appears that way. The sage brush and cactus are getting plentiful. We will soon approach the famous Royal Gorge of the Rockies. We have come in view of more and larger mountains and the peaks are covered with snow.

2:10 and we have stopped in the Gorge, almost directly under the world's highest bridge, which is 1053 feet above the track. It is run across the canyon from one side to the other like a swinging bridge and it is wide enough to accommodate two autos side by side. The Arkansas River lies on our left as we go up and it is very narrow at this point. I never learned about the fishing in it, but it looks like a trout fisherman's delight. The mountains through here appear to be solid rock, but are dotted almost all over with cedar which makes it very pretty. The sun is shining on the snow capped peaks which makes it a picture to behold.

3:40 p. m., and we just passed Buepa Vista and will soon reach some of the highest peaks in Colorado. The name of the peaks, the science agent said, are Harvard, Yale and Princeton. I am sending you a card which should be postmarked and mailed on what is known as the top of the world; when we reach the top we will be over two miles above the sea level.

6:00 p. m., and we just returned from supper and still are 30 to 45 minutes away from the top.

The snow here was more than that they previously were. The snow is much nearer now and I noticed some icicles near the track. Later—we just passed over the top, which is Tennessee Pass, and we are passing through some tunnel at this writing. After descending down quite a ways we passed another camp which was Camp Hale. (Hale, a passing soldier said) and from the appearance looks like a large one, and is situated in the canyon, between the mountains. It is a ski training outfit for troops. We have come down farther, and passed a mining town, by the name of Rex. The mines I learned were gold, silver and zinc. I cannot put on paper the scenery this side of the mountains offer. The other side of the Gorge did not have a thing on this side. I bet a lot of West Virginians who have never been through such a place would not believe it if they saw the scenery painted on paper. It would be hard for an artist to put it on paper as it appears here.

At the present we have stopped to cool off the brake shoes. I expect they would make a good cook stove right now. While stopped I put some questions to a train man, who had lived there most of his life, and learned from him that the wild life consists of deer, elk, Rocky Mountain goats, lions, wolves, coyotes, foxes, wild cats, and I presume a lot more than he knew about, so I could not boast of West Virginia in a place like that. Guess we will have to back up a notch or two. He also reported a snow storm of yesterday.

Later—have about left the Gorge and the canyon is widening out into a nice valley. It is now about 8:50 and too dark to observe anything. Will continue in the morning.

Thursday, May 20, 7:15 a. m.—Got up in Utah, had breakfast and feel very well at the present. The scenery has not changed very much as we are in more mountains again and level ground at the present is scarce as hen teeth.

9:40 a. m.—After about two or three hours travel we have come out of the mountains again and are traveling through Salt Lake Valley which appears to be nice grazing land and also good for crop farming. Noticed quite a herd of cattle. We are scheduled to go by the Salt Flats. Will try to learn all I can about it. I forgot to mention we are traveling on the Scenic Route of the Denver Rio Grande Western railroad. The sheep I observed in the mountains looked poor. Due to nothing to eat, would be my guess as food for them looked scarce.

Later 2:00 p. m.—Left Ogden away back and have passed the Salt Flats where nothing at all grows and as I am writing this evening we are crossing the Great Salt Lake. We have eaten dinner which was late. Since we started crossing the lake I understand it takes about one hour so cross it. It is a very beautiful lake and has a nice color. The lake is 75 miles long, 30 miles wide, 40 feet deep and each gallon of water contains one pound of salt. If that is the case there should be no shortage of salt. Ain't it a shame it isn't sugar! ha-ha!

I have been informed that there are enough pine poles drove in the ground that are supporting this bridge, that if they were placed end to end they would reach all the way around the world.

If anyone from Pocahontas County was taking a trip to California I would advise him or her to travel on the "Scenic Route". As far about an hour of travel we have crossed the lake. The Salt Flats are on this side as well as the other. They extend for miles on either side of the track. "Frenchy" and I purchased a card with a little bag of salt attached to it. I am mailing one to Mr. Price of the Pocahontas Times. I hope he receives it O. K. I also sent you one for a souvenir.

Well it is 4:30 p. m., and today at the first stop in Nevada, Montello is the name of the town. That will be another state on my list, as I have never been in Nevada. 6:00 p. m., and I just returned from supper. Here is the menu: chicken, mashed potatoes, pickles, salad, ice cream, coffee or milk.

The country through here is very desolate. Villages are few and far apart. Sage brush seems to be the thriving crop more than anything else. The terrain is rough again, more hills and hills. We just went through one of them which was about two miles long. My buddy made the remark that he never saw so many hills. I will agree with him there. We just passed another desert town by the name of Battos Mt., but it had very nice dwellings for a small town.

7:40 p. m., and it is not dark yet. We changed time a short distance back in Nevada. I expect you all back home would be thinking of going to bed as it is 10:40 there. So I will now sign off for tonight.

Friday, May 21, 6:30 a. m.—Got up in California and the hills and mountains looked more like home. The rocky hills disappeared during the night and has changed into pine trees and other leafy foliage which surely looked good to us after so many rocks.

The section we are passing through now is mostly orchards of some kind. I believe they are peach orchards. I noticed some palm trees which were beautiful. We have finally arrived in Sacramento. It is about 8 a. m. We had our breakfast in a station restaurant and will have to change our baggage to a different coach. Later—We are now about twelve miles from our destination. We are passing through more orchards of peach trees and one vast hop field which is new to me.

We have finally reached our destination. Instead of waiting for us with open arms, we were met by G. I. trucks and one Lieutenant. They hauled us about 15 miles from town, which is Marysville. So we find ourselves attached to the 614 Ordnance Depot of Camp Beale, California, and to date cannot say if we have bettered ourselves or not. Any how after 61 hours of travel this ends our journey for the present, from Camp Phillips, Salina, Kansas, to Camp Beale, California. "Hope I can have a different trip sometime."

Private James L. Carpenter, Camp Beale, California.

North Africa, May 1, 1943.

Dear Mr. Price:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am getting along O. K. About the only thing that I can tell is that I am not with the 30th Infantry any more. I have been transferred to Public Relation Office and my job is to drive the war correspondent to the (censored) and help them get the news for you all to read and don't get in your head that it is fun.

Just before I started writing this letter I was reading the Times dated December 31 and I

The first group of the Red Cross War Fund committee was made up of Mrs. M. M. Beard, county chapter chairman, presiding, that group was in session of the goal had been established.

The people of Pocahontas county may feel fairly proud of the fine contribution. Mr. Brock said. "The chapter quota was $2,500, and the response was $2,525.25, and the required amount—or a total of $3,325.25."

The chapter feels that honorable mention should be made of Amey E. Ferguson, editor of the Marlinton Journal, and Cathie W. Fenn, editor of the Pocahontas Times, for their untiring efforts in publishing from time to time the list of names, and the progress the drive was making.

With the wind-up of the drive, the final list of names of donors was also released, including a long list of persons in the Durbin, Frank, Bartow and Cam sections, which have been delayed due to unavoidable circumstances. The list is as follows:

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

WAR plant managers will tell you that anything that contributes to contented workers makes better workers. In plant after plant it has been found that a rest-pause breaks monotony, lessens tiredness and tension.

When you add refreshment to a rest-pause, you not only have a pause that rests, but refreshes, too. A moment for ice-cold Coca-Cola makes a rest-pause take on more meaning... promoting contentment that leads to more work and better work. Yes, contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

Close work brings the need to pause. Ice-cold Coca-Cola brings tingling refreshment to make any pause the pause that refreshes.

THESE HORSES HAVE JOINED THE CAVALRY!

Has merry-go-round has gone to war!

A plant that used to make merry-go-rounds is now turning out equipment for the fighting forces! Making the brain ring on the hour of Gears Who!

It takes a big job for American industry to change over from merry-go-rounds to munitions—these turning machines to gun—don't automobiles to tanks! A job that demands more machinery, more equipment, more men—and more electric power!

But the power was there! For more than all the Auto countries combined!

It was so evident that America was power-prepared. The electric companies were ready.

Knowing their business, scheduled in emergency, they saw to it that enough electric power was on tap everywhere—without shortages or rationing!

How is everything getting along in the good old town these days? I sure would love to be back there with you all but keep your fingers crossed and maybe one of these days I will be with you all again.

I will dare for this time, hoping to hear from you some of these days.

Your friend, Renny.
Private Earl W. Slavin.

6 CENTS A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Welcome, Fishers, Welcome

A Good Letter from Mrs. Cochran, the Superintendent of the Boone National Forest.

Dear Sir: These mountains of Southwest Virginia are rich in history and tradition. As you know, so much of the ancestry of America traveled the Buffalo Trail, which followed the Valley of Virginia, between the Allegheny and Blue Ridge, then through the Cuyahoga Gap. Crossing and branching from this main trail were many side trails which became stage and wagon roads.

A few days ago I was following the Old Sweet Springs Road in Craig County. Jefferson and other Virginia gentlemen, road the stage over this route, to spend the summer vacation at Old Sweet Springs. The bewickered, moss-shed mountaineers, from whom I descend, crudely called this the Kentucky Hog Road.

I turned up Barbour Creek, leaving the Sweet Springs Turnpike at the point it starts to climb Potts Mountain. As I drove along, I sensed the feeling one has when traveling in a wilderness area. Perhaps it came in part from the unusually luxuriant growth of trees and all manner of vegetation this spring. I saw a car parked on the side of the creek, bearing a West Virginia license tag. Partly in keeping with my training, but chiefly because of a personal interest in people on that side of the mountain, I stopped to find the West Virginia travelers and to engage them in conversation. I found them: three of them cleaning a hard pan of trout.

These fine sportsmen came from Richwood to fish for trout in Virginia. I said I could not believe any one would leave Cranberry for trout fishing on the east side of the mountains. You will see why I am not able to tell you the names of these gentlemen, because in friendly and unassuming confidence they told me the fishing was better here. Being reared in the traditions of the Williams, Little Laurel and Tea Creek, this fell on my ears as a challenge.

This was their second trip in. The leader of the party explained that the first cast he made in Barbour Creek he pulled in a fifteen inch rainbow. He observed your mosquitoes were bad. I said they ain't as bad as the midges in your mountains. Being in the midst of the misery he would not concede any truth to my statement.

It is not the purpose of this letter to boast of the fishing or the growing deer herds in these Southwest Virginia mountains, or even to boast of the number of West Virginians finding enjoyment in them; especially from the Bluefield area. It is to say they are welcome. First, in the tradition of hospitality; second, because the license and the stamp they buy and affix to the license help support the program of game management on the public forest. Then we can say that you good people and sportsmen from west side of the mountains are doubly welcome.

Marlinton Bombs Bomber

By Harold Guard, United Press Correspondent, in the Charleston Daily Mail.

Somewhere in Australia, June 11—I went along today in an Allied raid, the heaviest yet aimed at the island of Koepang, in a Liberator named "Little Eve," and watched the formation drop 42 tons of bombs on the target.

My plane was piloted by Captain Zed Smith, of Marlinton, W. Va. After the take off we circled a bit and then took out over the Timor Sea; guns manned and every one on the alert, awaiting the right big show.

"We're sure to get some Zeros and plenty of ack-ack this time," said Co-Pilot Lieut. Franklin A. Hastings, of Enid, Oklahoma.

We climbed into the intense cold above a solid floor of thick clouds. Suddenly the two turret gunners, Tech. Sgt. William Marshall, of Los Angeles, Cal., reported Zeros ahead.

They spread out in two flights, three on either side of our formation, but they did not seem eager to press any attack.

The clouds were thick and on our first run over the target we dropped our bombs, but the ack-ack found us—black bursts splashing the clouds' whiteness just behind us. Some of the bursts came close enough to rock the ship. One burst near the tail, and looked exactly like a vivid magazine illustration—red flame in the center and thick smoke spurting out from it with a terrific detonation.

When we left, the target showed huge fires particularly where a power station had been. We learned later just how successful the show was.

Several of the Liberators carried back ack-ack and fighter bullet holes, but "Little Eve" came off surprisingly well.
